PREFACE.

This volume embodies the results of more than forty years of inquiry and research for a knowledge of the Jamesons in this country. The author, in 1857, issued a printed circular asking for information along genealogical lines, which met with a generous response within the narrow circle then familiar to him, and the returned papers were placed on file. These in turn became the basis of still wider inquiries, and so at intervals through this long period of years the research continued and the accumulation of data increased. But during the last five years he has prosecuted the work with more vigor and persistence, having the inspiration of a definite purpose to place in book form as soon as practicable the information thus acquired. When this purpose became known to others, representing different branches of the Jameson name who had also acquired by their independent research more or less valuable material, there was a readiness quite universal to turn over to the author data that had been gathered in some instances at no small expense of time and money. Those who have thus contributed to the work, without compensation or with a compensation merely nominal, it is proper should be named. This list not including of course the hundreds who have cooperated by sending the records of their own families, nor the many town clerks and registrars of probate and professional genealogists who for pay have given their assistance. Among those who have generously furnished a considerable amount of data may be mentioned the following,

Judge John A. Jameson, late of Chicago, Ill. W. S. Jameson, Esg., Port Gamble, Wash. Mrs. Priscilla Newball, late of South Thomaston, Me. George W. Patterson, Esg., Westfield, N. Y. Lieut. James M. Jameson, Indianapolis, Ind. Samuel S. Jameson, Esg., Burnet, Texas. David Hoyt, Esg., Providence, R. I. Oscar J. Harvey, Esg., Wilkesbarte, Pa. Gen. Horatio G. Gibson, U. S. A., Washington, D. C. are due also to the Rumford Printing Company of Concord, N. H., who have shown uniform courtesy, patience, and fidelity in their difficult but well-executed work. The author has used every endeavor, at great cost of labor and money, to make a volume of family genealogy and incident at once attractive in every detail of mechanical finish, interesting in contents, and a valuable souvenir to all who care for their lineage and ancestry.

It is fondly hoped that this book, which is a model in paper, binding, and embellishment, will prove a source of satisfaction, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," to all who have contributed to its success, or who shall turn its pages, and that from the first day of a new century, the twentieth, this volume shall remain a perpetual monument to the memory and the honor of

INTRODUCTION

The Jamesons in America have all come from a common ancestry in Scotland. Some of their ancestral immigrants came to America directly from their Scotland homes, while others first passed over into Ireland, and they or their descendants at length found their way across the seas to this country. As to the origin and history of the Jamesons in Scotland, casting aside all shadowy and unverified traditions, and studying the extant history and literature of that country, we are quite confirmed in the assurance that the Jameson name had its origin in a Highland clan .- THE CLAN OF GUNN.

A gentleman who visited Scotland, and made this matter a subject of special investigation and study, writes as follows of the CLAN HISTORY OF THE JAMESONS.

"There is no doubt," he says, "that the first appearance of the Jamesons in Scotland was in the extreme north of that country; more specifically, in what is now Sutherland and Caithness, where they were members of the Clan Gunn. The best authorities agree that the founders of this clan were Norsemen, but the accounts of their settlement in Scotland are so varied that it is perhaps best to give extracts from various publications bearing on the subject.

"The following is from a volume in the public library of Edinburgh, Scotland. Its title is, Clans of the Highlands of Scotland, by Thomas Smibert, published in 1850 by James Hogg, Edinburgh, and David Robertson, Glas-

" 'CLAN GUNN, GUN, OR GUIN. A very curious document exists regarding the origin of the Clan Ross. In fact, there are three papers, in one of which the genealogist calls the first Gunn one of three brethren, Guin, Leod, and Leandois (Ross), who came out of Denmark to the north parts of Scotland to follow their fortune, and Guin took possession of the braes of Cathnes, where his posterity remains to this day, called the Clan Gunn.'

"The name Gunn is Gaelic or Celtic, and has certain meanings. As a substantive, guin signifies fierceness, a pain, a dart, a wound; as a verb, to wound, to pierce, to sting, etc.

"The Gunns are represented as living to the north of Dunrobin Castle, which is on the east coast of Sutherlandshire, and they had a chieftain of their own name, and a castle of their own called Halbury. MacKames (which means Macjames or Machamish) seems to be the oldest sept name of the Gunns . . . the conclusion being that they are true Celtic Highlanders. It is clear from this whole and rather confused story that the Guins had been a branch of the purest aborigines of the north. It strikes me that they are perhaps among the very purest remnants of the Gael to be found about Sutherlandshire and the adjoining parts."

The following is quoted from the "Clans of the Scotch Highlands," by R. R. MacIan, published in 1845 by Ackerman Co., London. This book is found in the public library, Edinburgh,

"CLAN NAN GUINNAICH OR GUNNS. The Gunns were in the North, the counterpart of the MacGregors in the South. Although not numerous, they were most martial and resolute, and the appellation by which they were distinguished is very indicative of their general character. 'Guinneach' signifies sharp, keen, fierce, and was, doubtless, imposed as descriptive of their known or imputed disposition. The genealogical derivation of the clan is from Guin, second son of Olans or Ollar the Black, king of Man and the Isles, who died in the year 1237. County of Caithness was originally the seat of this hardy clan.

"From James, son of George, the chief who flourished in the end of the fifteenth century, is derived the patronymic of Mac Jamais, by which they have since been distinguished from their countrymen.

"The Gunn tartan is of a fine, dark pattern like that worn by clansmen of Roderick Dhu, George Gunn, of Rhives, Sutherland, descended from a second son of the fifth Mac Jamais, is now chief of the clan."

From "Scottish Clans and their Tartans," a recent publication of W. & A. K. Johnston of Edinburgh (in which the Gunn tartan may be found illustrated in color), the following is transcribed:

"THE CLAN OF GUNN. Of the origin of this fierce and turbulent tribe two accounts are given. In the Statistical Account of Kildonan it is stated that they are descended from the Norse kings of Man, and that Guin, their progenitor, was the eldest son of the King of that Island by his wife Christina, daughter of Farquhat, earl of Ross, who, according to Douglas, flourished in the reign of Alexander II, but Calder, in his 'History of Caithness,' asserts that their progenitor was Gunnias or Gunor, brother of Sweyne, a famous Freswick pirate, who had been banished from Orkney by Earl Harold the Wicked, and, on arriving at Caithness, fixed his residence at Ulbster, where he rose to such wealth and power that in time he became known as 'The Great Gun of Ulbster.' In process of time his descendants became numerous, and were known as the Clan Gunn, and they and the Keiths bore a mutual hatred to each other, and were ever at feud from the following circumstances: Lachlan Gunn of Braemore had an only daughter, Helen, who was famous for her beauty, and the day of her marriage with her cousin Alexander was fixed; but Dugald Keith, a retainer of Keith of Ackergill, whose advances she had repelled, surrounded her father's house with a body of armed Keiths, slew many of the Gunns, who were unprepared for the attack, and carried off the girl to Ackergill, where she became the victim of her abductor, and eventually threw herself from the summit of the tower.

"Raid upon raid ensued now, and during one of these, in 1426, a desperate battle was fought between the two clans at Harpsdale, eight miles from Thurso, and in it the Mac Kays of Strathnaver, led by Angus Dhu MacKay, brother-in-law of the Lord of the Isles, bore a part against the Gunns. The conflict was rancorous and bloody, but indecisive. George Gunn, chief of the clan in the middle of this century, lived with barbaric pomp in his castle of Habery, at Clyth. He was known from the office he held, Tusticiary, or Crouner Gunn, but by the Highlanders as 'Am Braisteach-Mhor,' from a great silver brooch that fastened his plaid.

"Weary of the feud, he and the Chief of the Keiths agreed to meet with twelve horsemen and settle it amicably. This was in 1464. The Keiths came with twenty-four men, two on each horse, and attacked the Gunns, who were engaged in prayer. The latter fought desperately, and were cut to pieces. George Gunn was slain, and stripped of his arms, armour, and brooch.

"Soon after, William MacKames killed George (Keith) of Ackergill and his son, with ten men, at Drummay, as they were traveling from Inverugie towards Caithness. In 1585 the Earl of Caithness and the Earl of Sutherland had a fight with the Clan Gunn, who, though inferior in force, had the advantage of the hillside at Aldgowne, and used their bows so well that Henry Sinclair was slain, with one hundred and twenty men, and the rest put to flight. Subsequently most of the clan emigrated to Sutherlandshire, under William and Henry Gunn."

There is a certain similarity in these different accounts which compels credence in the following generalities:

"The Gunns were a very fierce and warlike clan of Norse descent, inhabiting the northeast coast of Scotland. They had a chief of their own name and a castle of their own called 'Halbury.' or 'Habery.' MacKames (or Macjames, Mac Jamais, Mackamish, Mackeamish, which are all the same), is the oldest sept name of the clan."

By giving to the Gaelic prefix "Mac" its English meaning, son, and translating Kames or Hamish into its English equivalent of James, we have the name of "Jameson," as the primitive appellation of the Clan Gunn.

THE ARMS OF THE CLAN GUNN.

Argent, a galley of three masts, her sails furled, and oars in action, sable flags gules, within a border azure; on a chief of the third a bear's head of the first, muzzled of the second, between two mullets of the field.

Crest: A dexter hand wielding a sword proper. Motto: Aut pax aut bel-lum. Badge: Funiper.

The tartan of the Clan Gunn is one of the most beautiful of all the Scotish tartans. The body is dark green, relieved by wide bands composed of narrow stripes of black, which intersect each other at right angles, while midway between the wide bands of black are fine stripes of red. For illustration see, The Scottish Clans and Their Tartans, No. 28, The Clan of Gunn. The complete costume of the clan was purchased in Scotland, and is here presented without the colors.

The foregoing account seems to show the origin of the name Jameson in Scotland, and to identify it with the Highland clan of Gunn. Some hundred years later, in the middle of the seventeenth century, the fierce, warlike clansman of the north of Scotland has lost his spirit of savagery in the person of his humble descendant, James Jameson, Province of Massachusetts, New England, whose name appears, 1647, in the record book of the First church of Boston, in the modest style of "James Jameson, laborer;" or, perhaps a little later, in the person of a possible descendant, William Jameson, of Charlestown, a tailor by trade, indulging somewhat in real estate transactions and Eastern land speculations. But, whatever may have been the origin of the Jameson name in Scotland, and the history of the sept across the seas, we are now concerned rather with those of the name who arrived in this country prior to 1800, and whose descendants are scattered in large numbers broadcast over the American continent.

The early immigrants of the name of Jameson, who landed on these shores at different dates through a period of a hundred and fifty years, prior to the nineteenth century, were not a single family, but were many families creating different branches, or, rather, different ancestral trees in the virgin soil of a new country and a new civilization.

These early settlers made homes in at least five different states on their arrival, and in the arrangement of this volume it seemed convenient that the several states where they first settled, and with which their early history is identified, should give name to the different sections or chapters of this book, and accordingly we have the following chapter headings, viz.: The JAMESONS IN MASSACHUSETTS, THE JAMESONS IN PENNSULVANIA, THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN THE JAMESONS IN MAINE THE JAMESONS IN MAINE, THE JAMESONS IN JAMESONS IN THE JAMESONS IN THE JAMESONS IN JAMESONS

The author received some years ago from the registrar's office in Glasgow, Scotland, procured from Mr. Barrett, the chief librarian of that office, an authorized statement and description of the different armorial bearings which had been duly granted to persons of the name of Jameson. These are eight in number, of which the following cuts are facsimiles, and are accompanied by a description in the terms of heraldry.

Granted to John Jameson, Esq., of Windfield, Co. Galway, eldest son of James Jameson, Esq., of Windfield and Mont Rose, Co. Dublin, and grandson of John Jameson, Esq., sheriff and clerk of Co. Clackmannan, Scotland,

The last one of these is stamped in gold on the cover of this volume, not by reason of any claim that the Jamesons in America have to wear it, but merely as an embellishment. And on the title page is found the reputed arms of the ancient Clan of Gunn, for the same reason.

As to the spelling of the name, it appears that as translated from the old Gaelic, Mac james or Mac jamais, Mac meaning son, and james or jamais meaning James, the English equivalent is JAMESON. It is further to be noticed that the oldest and five out of the eight to whom arms have been granted, spell the name Jameson, and three spell it Jamieson. Crossing over into this country, there is rehearsed by different branches of the family the unverified tradition that there were three brothers who came to America. One settled in Virginia, who spelled his name Jameson; the second settled in South Carolina, and spelled his name Jamieson, while the third spelled his name Jamison, but where he settled is not stated, doubtless in Pennsylvania, if we may determine the matter by a current spelling of the name in that state. But laying aside unverified traditions, we find as an actual fact, here in America, that the name has not merely the two spellings known in Scotland, or the three given by tradition in this country, but the name is found spelled in at least thirty-two different ways, as follows, viz.:

Jaimeson, Jameson, Jamerson, Jamesson, Jamieson, Jamison, Jamisone, Jammerson, Jammesone, Jammison, Jemson, Jemeson, Jemerson, Jemmison, Jemson, Jemson, Jemson, Jemson, Jimmson, Jimmson, Jimson, Jimson, Gemson, Gimson, Gim

Gipson.

With all this great variety of spellings for one and the same name, there was in hand a difficult problem for solution. Well aware that there existed a natural choice to each for spelling the name in his own way, and a very strong attachment felt by some for their family way of spelling, which may have reached back two hundred years, and perhaps to Scotland; and, while to gratify one and all in this matter would have been pleasing to the author, it was found quite impracticable to introduce such a variety of spellings for the one name, and the Gordian knot was cut by considerations of convenience and harmony, so that the name throughout this volume has the uniform spelling of Yamsson, except where records are copied verbatim. This, as we have seen, accords with the original and more common spelling in Scotland, and is found to be more universal than any other in America.

The Jamesons in America, as already stated, in all branches of the sept and wherever they have settled and established homes, with entire unanimity trace their lineage and ancestry to Scotland. In times of political disturbances and religious persecutions many of the name fled to different parts of Ireland, and from thence, they or their descendants sailed to America, while others have come directly from Scotland to America. Those who found homes for a time in the North of Ireland, on their way to this country, have long been favorably known on this side the water as "Scotch-Irish." This not because of even a drop of Irish blood in their veins, for the Scotch immigrants did not intermatry with the Irish people in whose country they lived for a season. In fact, they mostly occupied different parts of Ireland, and were very wide apart in their social customs and in their religious sympathies.

The Jamesons were thoroughly Scotch, and very generally Presbyterians. There were, however, a few, especially in Virginia, who were members of the Church of England.

The Scotch-Irish, in the War of the Revolution, were conspicuous in all the colonies for their patriotism, self-sacrifice, and valor in battle. Nor were they less so in the more recent War for the Union. They have held high positions in the army, in the navy, and in the state. It has been stated by excellent authority that "The Scotch-Irish, which numbers hardly one eighth of our population, has furnished one fourth of our presidents."

May the Jamesons in America during the new century, at whose threshold we now stand, and in all coming time, maintain the high level of their noble ancestry and distinguished race in virtue, patriotism, and religion.

No. 1.

James Jameson and his wife, Sarah, were the first persons of the name known in America. As early as 1647 they were residents of Boston, in the Province of Massachusetts Bay, New England. Mr. Jameson died in January, 1661. Mrs. Jameson died March 25, 1666.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

MARIAH [2], bapt. 5:10:1647; m. 1665, William Gard. JOHN [3], b. 1:7:1648; m. March 15, 1669, Esther Martin. JAMEs [4], b. 2:10:1651. SARAH [5], b. Jan. 2, 1654. JOSEPH [6], b. Jan. 2, 1654.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was an early settler in this country. He came probably from Scotland. The first mention of him is in the record made of his wife becoming a member of the First Church in Boston, as follows: "The 27th Day of ye of mometh 1647 by Elder Loveritt, Sarah Jempson ye wife of James Jempson laborer." She was probably received on confession of covenant, as there is no mention of a letter from another church. In the Church Record of Baptisms is the following: "Mariah Jempson ye vide of James Jempson, being the 5th day of y" 10 moneth 1647 by the Pastor." The births and baptisms of the other children are also recorded. The name appears sometimes recorded "Jemson." Soon after Mr. Jameson's death, "Att a county court held at Boston the 1st Feb 1661, Power of administration to the estate of the late James Jempson is granted to Sarah. She administering according to law."

JOHN [13], b. Aug. 14, 1696; m. Aug. 18, 1726, Mary Worthen.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was in Amesbury, Mass., as early as 1668; made a townsman in 1669; took the oath of fidelity in 1677; was a member of the "training band" in 1680, and chosen tithingman in 1693. He was living in 1713, and probably as late as 1726 Mrs. Jameson was living in 1696. Mrs. Susanna Martin, her mother, was a victim of the Salem witchcraft delusion in 1692. Mrs. Martin, it appears, was charged with being a witch because "she went from Amesbury to Newbury afoot in a "dirty season" without getting her clothes wet. She is described as 'a short, active woman, wearing a hood and scarf, plump and well developed in her figure, of remarkable personal neatness," one who "scorned to be drabbled;" 'a strong-minded woman as her examination shows."

Under date of April 30, 1692, "Warrant and arrest of Susanna Martin of Amesbury in ye county of Essex, widdow, by Orlando Bagley." She was examined May 20, 1692, tried for witchcraft in Salem, June 29, 1692, and condemned. "A warrant for the execution of Sarah Good, Rebecka Nurse, Elis. How, SusanNah MakerIn & Sarah Wildes on Tuesday 199 July 1692," was issued and the execution took place accordingly. Mrs. Martin was a daughter of Richard and Ursula North of Salisbury. Mass.

ELIZABETH, m. March 23, 1741-2, Abraham Colby.

HENRY, b. April 12, 1726; he died in childhood, 1730.

Memoranda.

Mr. Blaisdell was a blacksmith by trade. His estate was administered Nov. 28, 1748. Mrs. Blaisdell not living. In the division of the real estate in 1750, the children who shared it were: Mrs. Lowell, Mrs. Quinby, Jonathan, David, Enoch, Samuel, Mrs. Challis and Mrs. Colby, the others had died previous to that date. Elijah Blaisdell, the second son, resided in Rowley, Mass. The other children all settled in Amesbury, Mass.

DAVID BLAISDELL, the fourth son, was a clock-maker. He died in the army, near Lake George, leaving a widow and seven children. Mrs. Bliabell married again Oct. 15, 1766. Tilus Wells. The children were: David, b. Dec. 8, 1734, d. in infancy; David, b. Feb. 26, 1735-67, israe, b. March 27, 1738, d. Oct. 9, 1781; Molly, b. May 10, 1739; Nicholas, b. Aug. 27, 1743; Dolly, b. Jan. 26, 1744; Spencer, b. May 12, 1751.

There is still in existence an old clock on the face of which is engraved the following-" MADE BY DAVID BLASDEL IN ALMSBURY MDCCLII." This clock is a "primitive affair," made of wrought iron, the face of brass with a ring engraved with Roman figures which are filled with a black pigment, and are very distinct. There is only an hour hand and the dial is marked for quarter hours. This clock ticks seventy-two times a minute, and it runs twenty-four hours without winding. It is made to hang on the wall with its works exposed. The gear-shafts are much worn by the service of five generations, but the clock still marks off the time quite accurately.

David Blaisdell's son, Isaac Blaisdell, it is said, manufactured much better clocks than his father. He lived in a house, which is now standing, nearly opposite "Orcutt's Hotel" as it was called, in Chester, N. H. Richard Blaisdell, a grandson of David Blaisdell, was also a clock-maker, but died at the early age of twenty-eight years. Several of his clocks are still extant in running order.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

Memoranda.

MR. SAWVER was a weaver by occupation. He signed a petition March, 1715, "for liberty to fence across the way by Turkey hill to prevent sheep from running away before we shear them." He purchased March 3, 1716, of his father, a mansion and other buildings known as the "Blue Anchor Tavern" in Newbury, Mass., and sells the same Oct. 2, 1718, to John March, of Salisbury, Mass. Doubtless he soon removed elsewhere, as there is no further mention of him, nor the record of his death in the Records of Newbury, Mass.

LIEUT. SAMUEL SAWVER, Mr. Sawyer's father, son of William and Ruth Sawyer, was born Nov. 22, 1646, in Newbury, Mass. He was a licensed innholder from 1693 to 1716, when he sold the above named tavern to his son. His gravestone, inscribed "Lieut. Sam' Sawyer who died in 1718," is in the burial ground on Sawyer's Hill, three miles from Newburport, Mass.

John³ James an (John², James ¹), son of John [3] and Esther (Martin) Jameson, was born Aug. 14, 1696, in Amesbury, Mass. He married Aug. 18, 1726, Mary Worthen, daughter of John and Mary (Hadlock) Worthen. She was born Aug. 13, 1700, in Amesbury, Mass., where they resided.

Memoranda.

JOHN WORTHEN, Mrs. Jameson's father, was a son of Ezekiel and Hannah (Martin) Worthen. Ezekiel Worthen about 1663 came from Salem, Mass. He married Hannah Martin, the only child of George Martin by his first wife, Hannah, and a half sister to Esther Martin, Mr. Jameson's mother. Ezekiel Worthen settled on the bank of the Merrimack river, quite near the spot where his descendant, Dea. William Worthen, now, 1900, resides in Pleasant Valley, Amesbury, Mass. Mrs. Caroline (Worthen) Proctor, a daughter of Dea. William and Caroline (Babb) Worthen, resides in Amesbury, Mass.

Patrick Jameson, parentage and birthplace unknown, sailed in the shipe "John and Sara," Nov. 11, 1651, from London, for Boston, New England, where he arrived prior to May 13, 1652. He was admitted an inhabitant of Dover, N. H., in January, 1659, and was taxed there for several years. There is no mention of a wife and children, and no known record of Mr. Jameson himself after 1665.

Memoranda.

"PARRICK JIMSON," in company with David Jameson, Neile Jameson, and two hundred and sixty-nine others, were Scots prisoners sent to this country by order of the English government, on board the shipe "John and Sava," and sold for slaves, as a sort of banishment for their rebellion. Doubtless some of these prisoners were sent to the Barbadoes. They were probably taken in the Battle of Dunbar, Sept. 3, 1650, where Cromwell was victorious and three thousand were slain and ten thousand made prisoners. They were consigned to "Tho. Kemble of Charlestowne" by the following order:

"London this 11th of November 1651. Capt. Ino Greene:

WILLIAM GREENE. Entered & Recorded at the Instant Request of the said Mr. Tho. Kemble. F. Edw. Raw-

"A list of the passengers aboard the John and Sara of London, John Greene Mr, bound for New England," consisted of two hundred and seventy-two persons who were shipped and consigned to be sold as slaves in New England or transported to the Barbadoes.

The Rev. John Cotton of "Boston in N. E. 28 of 5th, 1651," writes to the Lord General Cromwell concerning like Scots prisoners of war as follows:

"The Scots whom God delivered into your hands at Dunbarre and whereof sundry were sent hither, we have been desirous (as we could) to make their yoke easy. Such as were sick of the scurvy or other diseases have not wanted for physick and chyzurgery. They have not been sold for slaves to perpetual servitude, but for 6 or 7 or 8 yeares, as we do our owne: and he that bought the most of them (I heare) buildeth houses for them, for every four an house, layeth some acres of ground thereto, which he giveth them as their owne, requiring 3 dayes in the weeke to worke for him (by turnes) and 4 dayes for them themselves, and promiseth, as soone as they can repay him the money he layed out for them he will set them at liberty.

The Battle of Dunbar was fought Tuesday, Sept. 3, 1650.

Twenty thousand Covenanters, under LESLEY, with the watchword:

"THE COVENANT! THE COVENANT!! THE COVENANT!!!

Lesley lost 3,000 killed, 10,000 were taken prisoners. A whole train of powder and shot and thirty guns

WERE CAPTURED.

Eleven thousand of Cromwell's Army, under LAMBERT, with the watchword:

THE LORD OF HOSTS! THE LORD OF HOSTS!! ON, MY BRAVES, ON!!!

Lambert lost 30 killed, and came out of the battle with 10,000 prisoners of war, and captured ammunition and guns.

SINGING THE 117TH PSALM.

Cromwell's estimate of the Covenanters was:

"God hath a people here fearing his name though deceived." "And now we hear that not only the decent people but some of their ministers are also fallen in this battle of Dunbar. We are put to exceeding trouble, though it be an effect of abundant mercy, with the numerousness of our Prisoners."

And it naturally followed as the easiest solution of the "exceeding trouble" occasioned by the "numerousness" of prisoners to ship them off to the colonies to be sold to service for a term of years.

Patrick Jameson earned his liberty and paid for his little homestead in about seven years, as appears from the following record: "Patrick Jameson at Dover N. H. was admitted as an inhabitant Jan. 1659 and was taxed several years." And there is a further mention of him as follows: "Patrick Jameson of Strawberry Bank, Dover N. H. was a petitioner with others July 26, 1665 to be freed from the jurisdiction of the Colony of Massachusetts." And with this record of his independent spirit he retires from the knowledge of the writer.

David Jameson. His parentage and birthplace are unknown. How related, if at all, to the preceding Patrick Jameson, save that he was a fellow Scot prisoner and passenger on board the ship John and Sara, commanded by Capt. John Greene, sailing Nov. 11, 1651, from London bound for Boston, New England, and after landing, whether he settled here or was reshipped to the Barbadoes, or what became of him, no record has been found.

Nelle Jameson may have been a brother to the two preceding. Patrick Jameson and David Jameson. At any rate he was in the same condemnation, a prisoner of war and another of the two hundred and seventy-two passengers by the ship John and Sara who were landed in Boston prior to May 13, 1652, to be disposed of as slaves by "Tho. Kemble of Charles Towne," to the "best advantage & account" of his "loving friends, Jo. Beex, Robt Rich, William Greene." What became of him no known written history narrates. But a hundred and more years later, the name NeIL Jameson, in the Revolutionary period, belonged to a merchant and prominent citizen of Norfolk, Va.

No. 17.

Andrew Jameson, his parentage and birth unknown, in 1657 was a resident of Boston, Province of Massachusetts. He may have been a brother of James Jameson [1] who appears in Boston ten years earlier, but there are no known records of his family, of his death, or of his estate.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was the sixteenth charter member of the twenty-seven original founders of "THE SCOTS CHARITABLE SOCIETY," which was organized Jan. 6, 1657, in Boston, Province of Massachusetts. This society still has a flourishing existence. It celebrated its two hundred and fortieth anniversary Nov. 30, 1807, by a large gathering in the United States Hotel, Boston, some four hundred ladies and gentlemen being present. Mayor Quincy and other distinguished guests were welcomed at the dinner by the president, L. H. Ross, Esq., who sat at the head of the table. In the course of his remarks he said, -" The society had dispensed aid to two hundred persons during the past year. The present membership is about four hundred, and there are about thirty thousand dollars in the permanent fund.

This old society, organized by the Scots in America, declares its object to be the relief of their countrymen "brought through the Providence of God to necessitie." And how timely it was when we consider that in 1650 and later, hundreds of Scotsmen taken prisoners of war at Dunbar and in other disastrous battles were landed in Boston. Then was the occasion for "the charitable and provident Scotsmen, loving their countrymen as only Scotsmen could love them, to establish a society for the relief of these suffering prisoners," And they went about this work with a genuine spirit of benevolence and "pious trust in the great mercies of an over-ruling Providence."

How long Andrew Jameson continued in this society does not appear. The next of the name enrolled was WILLIAM JAMESON [18] who was recorded the twenty-fifth in the list of resident members "at Boston 25th October 1684."

No. 18.

William Jameson, parentage and birthplace unknown, was born in 1645. He married Oct. 18, 1877, 1 Sarah Price, daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Price. She was born in 1653 in Charlestown, Mass., where they resided. Mrs. Sarah Jameson died March 24, 1691. Mr. Jameson married *Sarah Phillips. She was born in 1649. Mrs. Sarah (Phillips) Jameson died Sept. 17, 1710. Mr. Jameson married 8Mary-----. born in 1651. Mr. Jameson died Feb. 25, 1714. Mrs. Mary Jameson died March 15, 1718.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, possibly, may have been the oldestson of James [1] and Sarah Jameson of Boston, Mass. He was a tailor by trade, an inhabitant of Charlestown, Mass. In 1676 he served as a soldier in Turner's company.

"William Jamison and Sarah Price were married Oct. 18th 1677 by Daniel Gookin, Magistrate.3

"Goodman William Jimmerson became a Church member Oct. 16th 1681." "William Jamison, tailor, Charlestown, Mass., became a member of the Scots' Charitable Society Oct. 25, 1684." "William Jamisone was chosen Feb. 24, 1685 one of the four 'Assistants for careing on of this good worke in order to the relief of oure poore" "William Jameson was chosen May 5, 1702 one of the two key-keepers and May 4th 1703 he was chosen VICE PRESIDENT of the Scots' Charitable

Mr. Jameson had certain transactions in real estate which are recorded,-" Sept. 4, 1683 Lawrence Hammond sells to William Jamison, Tailor of Charlestown, Mass., dwelling-house and shop with land, also land and wharf.'

"Oct. 7, 1684 Lawrence Hammond deeds slip of land to William Jamison of Charlestown.'

"May 4, 1694, James Lowden sells to William Jamison 1 acre at Ward's Point, North of land of Ionathan Bunker's heirs, Charlestown, Mass.," and "May 10, 1694 John Roy and wife Elizabeth deed land to William Jamison, Tailor, on 'Walnut Tree Hill' Charlestown Mass.

"April 4, 1696, Widow Mary Carter deeds to William Jamison 1 acre of land in Charlestown, Mass.

March 22, 1698 Joel Madiver sold to William Jameson, Tailor of Charlestown, Mass., 100 acres of land more or less in Falmouth, York county, next adjoining land of Thomas Staniford, and on the south side thereof are the lands of John Wallis known as "Popodock Point" with houses, fences, etc. (£20), twenty pounds "acknowledged March 22, 1697-8. Recorded in yo County Middx Decb 23, 1700."

Joel Madiyer, son of Michael and Rebecca Madiver, received a grant of 100 acres of land adjoining Staniford in 1680 and adjoining also the land of Wallis. This doubtless was the land he sold to William Jameson and which receives subsequent mention. Joel Madiver was killed by the Indians in August, 1703, at "Purpooduck."

" Jan 12, 1700 Edward Wilson sells to William Jameson Tailor and Samuel Phipps jointly 1-8 Grist Mill, known as 'Charlestown Mill.'" "This 1-8 of the Charlestown Mill was sold April 14, 1709 by William and wife Sarah Jameson to John Webb.'

William Jameson and Sarah, his wife, with others, sell 1-8 part of 28½ acres, more or less, of certain land March 8, 1705. He sells an acre, more or less, at Moulton Point, to Richard Boylston Jan. 28, 1707.

"William Jameson and wife Sarah sell to Jonathan Tufts of Newport land in Charlestown Mass., for £10, June 30, 1709.'

"Feb. 6, 1713-14 William Jamison Tailor of Charlestown and Mary Jamison his wife deed land to Henry Phillips."

Mr. Jameson's children were all of the first marriage. Mrs. Jameson's father, Matthew Price, was a tailor from 1654 to 1660, of Charlestown, and later, in 1668, of Salem, Mass. It is quite probable that Mr. Jameson learned his trade of his future father-in-law. It appears that Mrs. Jameson had a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth (Price) Edmunds, and a younger brother, Joseph, born March 23, 1656. Mr. Jameson made a will dated Jan. 29, 1713-14, which was probated May 9,

He bequeaths to his beloved wife Mary £15, makes his son, John Jameson, his sole executor and gives to him a double portion, i. e., a half of all his real estate and personal effects. To Thomas Ferrand 1-4 of the other half less £8, which is to be equally divided among his four grandchildren, three children of John Jameson and one child of Benjamin Purrington, i. e., £2 each. He gives to Benjamin Purrington 1-4 of the half and to Sarah and Elizabeth Jameson 1-4 each. John Jameson to pay the £15 to the widow, who signs a quit claim March 30, 1714, in consideration of £15, Inventory, £337. House, wharf, etc., £150. In Casco Bay, 112 acres, £20. House lot in Salem, Mass., 52 poles, £10.

Popooduck, where Mr. Jameson's land in Falmouth, Me., was located, means according to some, "Frozen over" and others, "Burial Place." By his will this land was bequeathed as follows: To his son John, 4-8; to son-in-law Thomas Farrand, 1-8; to son-in-law Benjamin Purrington, 1-8; to daughter Sarah, 1-8; and to daughter Elizabeth, 1-8.

Later, John Jameson having purchased of his sister Elizabeth, who, in 1714 was married in England, her share of 1-8 part, deeds the 5-8, in 1718, to his sister Sarah Jameson, "a single woman of Boston, Mass."

There is a coincidence of some interest in the following fact, that another William Jameson, son of William Jameson, born about 1675 in the county of Edinburgh, Scotland, from the Province of Ulster, Ireland, arrived from over the seas, Aug. 4, 1718, in the port of Boston, Massachusetts Bay, and a little later, with a few others. sailed for the coast of Maine and landed in Falmouth, where he settled and became the ancestor of the Jamesons in Maine.

From anything which appears, this William Jameson, from the north of Ireland. knew nothing of the then late William Jameson, tailor, of Charlestown, Mass, or that his heirs owned land in the vicinity, but he and his party dropped anchor in Casco Bay, and he established his home not far from the location of this hundred acres of land at that very time held in the Jameson name, in Falmouth, Me. Bearing the same name, ownership of land in the same vicinity about the same period has led sometimes to the wrong conclusion that they were one and the same person.

Sarah² Jameson (William¹), daughter of William [18] and Sarah (Price) Jameson, was born June 28, 1684, in Charlestown, Mass. She resided in Boston, Mass.

Memoranda.

MISS JAMESON received by her father's will one fourth of one half of his estate, which made her owner of an undivided one eighth of the 100 acres of land "in ye Township of ffalmouth in ye county of York," at his decease. About four years later she purchased of her brother, John Jameson, for "ye sum of Thirteen pounds currat money of New England " "sixty-two acres & a halfe, be it more or be it less, it is ye five parts of eight, being the whole of a hundred Acres of land which my Hon. ffather, Wm Jameson, late of Charlestown, decd, bought of Joell Medever of Beverly in ye county of Essex." This transaction was duly completed July 30, 1718. She must have purchased also the one-eighth share of one of her sisters, for we find she makes sale, April 1, 1721, of seven eighths of the 100 acres in Falmouth, called Purpoodock Point, for £43, 15s, to Anthony Bennett of Gloucester, Essex Co., Province of Massachusetts Bay. March 7, 1722, Mr. Bennett sells for £52, 10s, the above seven-eighths of the one hundred acres to John Smith, merchant, of Boston, and April 17, 1722, Benjamin Purrington makes sale of the remaining one eighth of these 100 acres for £6, 5s, to this same John Smith, so that at last this undivided tract of land of 100 acres which Joel Madiver sold to William Jameson, March 22, 1698, for £20, situate in Purpoodock Point, Falmouth, became, at a cost of £58, 158, April 17, 1722, the property of John Smith, merchant, of Boston, Massachusetts Bay

Miss Jameson was unmarried at the time she sold her real estate in Falmouth to Mr. Bennett of Gloucester. Whether she remained single is somewhat in doubt, for in the Records of Boston is found the following: "Joseph Uran & Sarah Jamison were married April 5, 1722, by Mr. Benj. Colman, Presn." May we conclude that she sold her real estate to provide for her wedding dress and fixings, or was this bride

county of York for £13.

MRS. JAMESON'S birth and parentage are not ascertained, as there were several of the name Abigail Carter born about the same time, viz.: (1) Abigail, born March 30, 1789, daughter of John. Jr., and Ruth (Burnham) Carter; (2) Abigail, born May 30, 1790, daughter of Samuel and Eunice (Brooks) Carter, and (3) Abigail, born March 18, 1792, daughter of Timothy and Anna (Fiske) Carter, and whether John Jameson made one of these, or some other Abigail Carter, his bride, has been a much considered, but is as yet an unsolved, problem. However, there is little doubt that she was a descendant of the Rev. Thomas Carter, first minister of Woburn, Mass.

MR. BENJAMIN and MARGARET JAMESON were married by Rev. Nathaniel Eels of Stonington, Conn. There were of the second marriage two children, viz.: Daniel, b. April 30, 1777; Louisa, b. Oct. 9, 1779.

DAVID BENJAMIN, son of John and Margaret (Jameson) Benjamin, married for his second wife, who became the mother of all his children, Lucy Park, daughter of Zebulon and Anne (Killam) Park; Anne Killam was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Rose) Killam; Samuel Killam was a son of Samuel and Grace (Endicott) Killam and Grace Endicott was a daughter of Zerrubabel Endicott, a grandson of Governor John Endicott.

PARK BENJAMIN, eldest son of David and Lucy (Park) Benjamin, and grandson of John and Margaret (Jameson) Benjamin, was born Oct. 5, 1770. He married, Aug. 22, 1801, Mary Judith Gall of the Isle of Barbadoes. She was born June 14, 1777. They resided in Demerara, British Guiana, S. A. Capt. Benjamin died June 23, 1824; Mrs. Benjamin died June, 1848.

Their children were: Park, b. Aug., 1802; d. April, 1803. Sarah, b. Jan. 2, 1804; d. April, 1804. William Christopher, b. Nov. 28, 1806; lost at sea June, 1824. Park, b. PARK BENJAMIN, journalist and poet of New York city, was a great grandson of John And Margaret (Jameson) Benjamin. He was born Aug. 14, 1800, in Demerara, now Georgetown, British Guiana, S. A. Capt. Park Benjamin, his father, owned two large sugar plantations there, and made frequent voyages on his own ships between Guiana and Connecticut; making one of these passages in 1824, he was lost at sea on his brig, "The Falcon." Mrs. Benjamin, with her children, soon after removed to Norwich, Conn. She was a native of the Island of Barbadoes, was of noble family, and a relative of the British prime minister, Lord North.

Mr. Benjamin pursued his preparatory studies in New Haven, Conn., and in Boston, Mass., and in 1825, at the age of sixteen years, entered Harvard College, where he remained two years and then entered Trinity College, in Hartford, Conn., from which he graduated in 1829 with high honors. Subsequently he pursued a course in the law school in Cambridge, Mass., and was admitted to the Bar in 1833. But having a great fondness for literature ne abandoned the practice of law and entered upon a career of journalism. In 1835 he became connected with the New England Magazine, which a year later was transferred to New York and the name changed to The American Monthly Magazine. Mr. Benjamin in 1837 removed to New York city, but terminated his connection with the magazine in 1838. He became associated in editorial work with Hon. Horace Greeley, and later edited the Brother Jonathan. In 1840 he became associated with Rufus W. Griswold, Esq., in establishing The New Yorker, which for five years was conducted with great success. In 1846 he published The Western Continent, and later The American Mail, in Baltimore, Md. These papers were short-lived, and Mr. Benjamin ended his connection with the newspaper press.

PARK BENJAMIN.

During all this period of journalism he was a frequent contributor in prose and verse to the periodicals of the day, and he was in much demand as a lecturer. His poems were very popular, and "The Old Sexton" and others were set to music. Some of his best known poems are "Consolation," "The Departed," "The Stormy Petrel," "The Nautilus," and "Press On." Among his longer metrical compositions are "Infatuation, a Satire," and "Poetry, a Satire." These were published in pamphlet form. His shorter poems have never been collected.

He was married in 1848, and subsequently devoted himself almost entirely to lecturing, and was eminently popular and successful. He continued to reside in New York city until his death, which occurred Sept. 12, 1864, at No. 107 West 45th street. His burial was in Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Benjamin was a large man physically and of an impressive personality. When a child he met with an accident which so disabled him for life that he walked with difficulty and pain, supported by two crutches. When he lectured he sat in a chair. But as a writer, poet, and lecturer, he had a world-wide reputation, and his death was universally lamented.

Mrs. Benjamin, daughter of Henry M. and Hannah (Romaine) Western, was born Jan. 6, 1826, in New York city. Her marriage took place in Glen Cove, Long Island, N. Y., and she now, 1900, resides in New York city. Henry Membery Western, Esq., her father, was born Dec. 28, 1797, of English parentage, a prominent lawyer of New York, and died July 6, 1853. Mrs. Hannah (Romaine) Western, her mother, was born Dec. 9, 1801, and belonged to one of the oldest Dutch families of Manhattan Island. She died in 1860.

GEORGE HILLARD BENJAMIN, son of Park and Maryl B. (Western) Benjamin, was born Dec. 25, 1832. He married April 29, 1875, 19ane Millen Seymour, who died Oct. 26, 1897. Mr. Benjamin married June 14, 1899, 2 Grace Tremaine. They reside at No. 46 East 74th street, New York city.

The children are: Frances Ford, b. May 5, 1876; m. 1897, Charles V. Page. Mary, b. Dec. 1, 1878. Rosalie de Villers, b. July 18, 1885.

WALTER ROMEYN BENJAMIN, son of Park Benjamin, the poet, was born Sept. 24, 1854, in Guilford, Conn. Hemarried Oct. 20, 1885, Cavoline A. Reed, daughter of Thomas Reed of Boston, and granddaughter of Sampson Reed, Esq. She was born Aug. 25, 1861, and died June 21, 1898, leaving a son, Walter Reed, born Aug. 8, 1886, in New York city. Mr. Benjamin married Nov. 1, 1899, Rachele Maria Cavolina Toussaint de Saint Seigne, daughter of General, the Baron Ottaviano de Saint Seigne of Florence, Italy. She was born Jan. 14, 1875. WALTER R. BENJAMIN.

MR. BENJAMIN was a student in Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and in the Union School, Schenectady, N. Y., graduated in 1874 from Union College, and received the degree of A. M. in 1877. He studied law for three years and then devoted himself to journalism. He was connected with The Schenectady Daily Union, The Saratoga Sun, and for eleven years after 1876 with the New York Sun. He wrote for many other papers, especially the humorous ones. In 1887 he established The Collector, a monthly historical magazine, which he still continues to publish, 1900, in connection with his business of collecting autograph letters. This peculiar business he has built up and thus done a great service to American history, having rescued from oblivion in all parts of the country, valuable letters and documents written by distinguished men, and furnished them to libraries, historical societies, and private collectors.

Mr. Benjamin, in 1897, was a member of the Republican County Committee of New York, and in 1897 and 1898 he was the historian of the Empire State Society of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. He has written and read several historical essays upon the Revolutionary times before this society which they have published. He has an office in the Townsend building, No. 1123 Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

WILLIAM EVARTS BENJAMIN, the youngest son of Park Benjamin, the poet, was born Feb. 19, 1859. He married Nov. 17, 1886, Annie Engel Rogers, daughter of H. H. Rogers, Esq. They reside at No. 113 West 57th street, New York City. The children are: Beatrice May, b. Jan. 5, 1889. Henry Rogers, b. Sept. 4, 1893.

MANY ELIZABETH BENJAMIN, a younger sister of the poet, married John Lethrop Motley, LL. D., D. C. L., an American novelist and historian. He was born April 15, 1814, in Dorchester, Mass., graduated in 1831 from Harvard University, and studied for two years in the universities of Berlin and Göttingen, Germany. As a student he was intimate with Bismarck. After leaving Berlin he traveled in 1taly and other parts of southern Europe. On his return to Boston he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1837, but having a preference for literature, he contributed historical articles to the North American Review, and wrote a historical romance entitled "Morton's Hope," and a second, "Merry Mount, a Romance of the Massachusetts Colony," The latter was very popular. In 1856 his "Rise of the Duty."

Republic" appeared, which the English historian, Mr. Froude, pronounced "as complete as industry and genius can make it." This work, in three volumes, attracted great attention, and was translated into German. French, Dutch, and Danish. Then followed later, "The History of the United Netherlands," and in 1874, "The Life and Death of John of Barneveldt," with equal success. It has been truly said that " Mr. Motley's pictures of characters, events, and social states are complete and vivid, and breathe in general a spirit of justice and truth."

He was honored with important public positions. In 1841 he became the Secretary of the Legation at St. Petersburg; in 1861 he was appointed the United States minister to Austria, resigned in 1867, and in 1869 he went as United States minister to England, but was recalled the following year. In the midst of his valuable public service and historical writings his health failed, and he died May 29, 1877, near Dorchester, England.

ELEABETH CABOT MOTLEY, Mr. Motley's eldest daughter, married Oct, 19, 1865, in Vienna, Lieut. Thomas Poynton Ives, U. S. N., son of Moses Brown Ives, Esq., of Providence, R. I. Lieutenant Ives died Nov. 17, 1865, in less than a month after their marriage. Mrs. Ives, eleven years later, married Dec. 2, 1876, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, who was a member of the British Parliament.

SIR WILLIAM GFONGE GRANVILLE VENABLES VERNON HARCOURT, LL. D., Q. C., M. P., P. C., was born Oct. 14, 1827, in England. He graduated with high distinction from Trinity College, Cambridge, Eng. He studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1854, and entered upon the practice of his profession. In 1866 he was appointed the Queen's Counsel. He was returned in 1868 to the House of Commons in the Liberal interest for the city of Oxford, and elected in 1869 Professor of International Law at Cambridge. He was a member of the Koyal Commission to amend the neutrality and naturalization laws, and a knight-bachelor in 1873. He was appointed Solicitor General in 1873–1874. He entered Parliament in 1885 for Derby, and in 1892. He held the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1836, and was reappointed to the same office in 1892. He was one of the original contributors to the

SIR WILLIAM VERNON HARCOURT ranks next to Gladstone as a quick and resourceful speaker in debate. His power of sarcasm equals that of Mr. Chamberlain, but is usually relieved by a dash of humor or a vein of wit.

He married 1 Therest Lewis, daughter of Lady Therese Lewis, and Dec. 2, 1876, 2Mrs. Elizabeth Cabot (Motley) Ives, eldest daughter of Hon. John Lothrop and Mary Elizabeth (Benjamin) Motley, and widow of Lieut Thomas Poynton Ives, U. S. N. They were married in the chapel of Henry the VIII, in Westminster Abbey, and spent their honeymoon at the residence of Sir William's aunt, Lady Waldirave, at Strawberry Hill.

John Jameson, son of William Jameson, was born about 1680, near Leith, Edinburgshire or County of Midlothian, Scotland. He married in 1705 Rosanna Irwin. She was born in Omagh, County of Tyrone, Province of Ulster, Ireland, where they resided until 1718, when they set sail for America. After their arrival, Aug. 4, 1718, they remained in Boston, Province of Massachusetts, a short time, and then settled in Milton, Mass. But in the spring of 1726 they removed to Voluntown, Conn., where Mr. Jameson died in the early spring of 1734. Mrs. Jameson died prior to her husband.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON'S father, William Jameson, was a vigorous Presbyterian and a strong supporter of the Covenant, and thus identified with the so-called Covenanters of that period, who suffered severe persecutions under King James II. William Jameson to escape from these unhappy conditions, made up his mind to leave the land of his birth, where for three hundred years his ancestors of the name had lived, and seek a new home. Accordingly, in company with many others of a like determination, he took his wife and children, about the year 1685, and passed over into the North of Ireland and settled in Omagh, County of Tyrone, Province of Ulster. John Jameson, at the time his father with his family removed into Ireland, was a small boy of about five years. He had three brothers older than himself whose names were Robert, Henry, and William. The two older ones, Robert and Henry, when grown to manhood, emigrated to America in 1708, and landed in Philadelphia, Pa. became of Robert is unknown, but Henry was doubtless the same Henry Jameson who in 1724 purchased a thousand acres of land, in various tracts, in Bucks Co., Pa., and became the ancestor of numerous descendants, some of whom still reside in Warwick and vicinity, on the very lands which Henry Jameson bought in 1724.

Mr., Jameson when a young man learned the trade of a linen weaver, and for some years, probably in company with his next older brother, William, carried on the manufacture of linen in Omagh, where they and their parents lived. Meanwhile they were both married and had children growing up about them. But in 1718 there was a great tide of emigration to America, and these two brothers, William and John Jameson, their parents probably being dead, closed their linen business in Omagh, gathered together hand-looms and other property, and with their families, shipped for Boston, Province of New England, where they landed Aug. 4, 1718. William Jameson, in company with a small party, later in the autumn sailed to the eastward, and sought a place for settlement along the coast of Maine. The cold season overtaking them, they dropped anchor in Casco Bay, and after a hard winter Mr. Jameson and a few of the party decided to settle on the mainland called Falmouth, now Portland, Me. WILLIAM JAMESON became the great ancestor of The JAMESONS IN MAINE, who appear in a subsequent chapter of this volume. The most of his party returned toward Boston, sailed up the Merrimack river as far as Hawerhill, Mass., and became the first settlers of Nutfield, afterwards called Londonderry, N. H.

JOHN JAMESON, whose history now especially concerns us, may have remained in Boston for the winter, but soon he had established his home in Milton, Mass., where for a few years he doubtless plied his trade of linen manufacture by spinning wheel and hand-loom, as in the old country. But it appears that under date of Oct. 25, 1725, Robert Lord of Fairfield, Conn., one of the proprietors of the new town of Voluntown, Conn., organized in 1721, sold to "John Jemason residing in Milton, Mass.," for £20, the fourth lot, twelfth tier, containing one hundred and forty-two acres of land. The following spring of 1726, Mr. Jameson, with his wife and seven children, removed to his farm in Voluntown, Conn. They found quite a number of Scotch-Irish settlers already there, who had encountered the strong prejudices of the Connecticut yankees against this increasing element of their population. But soon these prejudices had so far abated that on Dec. 23, 1728, Mr. Jameson, with thirteen other sturdy Scotch-Irish immigrants, were admitted inhabitants of the town, and many of them united with the church. He was also entrusted with public duties, which shows the respect in which he was held. Mrs. Jameson gave birth to her youngest child shortly after their settlement in their new home. The next year their oldest son died. The date of Mrs. Jameson's death is unknown, but her husband survived her, and he died prior to April 23, 1734.

 £23.—6. Four of the children were minors, and placed under the guardianship of Charles Campbell and Joseph Parke. Mr. Jameson had the confidence of his fellowtownsmen. He was chosen grand juryman, and for several years held the himportant office of pound-keeper. He has been characterized as a man of strong will and prejudices; he was one who never yielded until convinced of error.

"He was of that stubborn crew, Presbyterian true blue, Who proved their doctrine Orthodox By apostolic blows and knocks."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was not four years old when his pirents arrived in America, and a lad of only eleven years when they removed to Voluntown, Conn. He married Agnes Dixson, who came to America in 1726, when three years old, with her father, Robert Dixson, who settled in Voluntown, Cond. Here the newly-married young people commenced life together, on the old farm where Mr. Jameson's parents, now deceased, had spent their last days. Twenty years passed in industry and a happy home life. They now had a group of thirteen children, the oldest not twenty-one and the youngest less than a year old.

MR. JAMESON was a man of affairs in the town, and highly esteemed for his uprightness and business ability, and to him was entrusted the administration of the public finances, which were in a depressed condition. Mr. Jameson was chosen town treasurer, when by no fault of his "the financial affairs of the town were greatly embarrassed; . . . a heavy debt accrued to the government, for which the town treasurer, Mr. Robert Jameson, was held responsible." Having no funds to meet this demand, Mr. Jameson was arrested and confined in Windham jall. In 1771 a committe was appointed "to go to Windham in term of the Superior Court, and get the best advice concerning a trouble for which Robert Jameson is now confined in jail." Isaac Gallup was ordered to take and have secured all said Jameson's estate for the use of the town in settling the debt for which he was imprisoned, but in no wise at fault. This imprisonment lasted for two years, when Mr. James Gordon was appointed agent to settle with Robert Jameson onew confined in Windham County jail for the colony tax due for said town," and soon effected his liberation.

Mr. Jameson soon after his release removed to Wyoming with his sons, Robert, William, John, Alexander, and Joseph, who gained a permanent home in that beautiful valley, and were numbered among its most respectable and influential citizens. Among valuable families from Windham Co., Conn., were those of "George and John Dorrance, ROBERT JAMESON, Cyrus Kinne of Voluntown," who emigrated to Wyoming valley on the Susquehanna.

Mr. Jameson, some years before March 30, 1768, had purchased of Robert Dixson, for nine shillings, one whole right or share in "Purchase of Susquehanna Land Company." The above Robert Dixson was an ancestor of the Hon. Nathan F. Dixson, who in 1840-1842 was a United States senator from Rhode Island. The charms of the Wyoming were described in verse as follows:

"Canaan of old, as we are told, Where it did rain down manna, Wa'n't half so good for heavenly food As Dyer makes Susqu'hanna."

The tide of emigration being strongly set in that direction, Mr. and Mrs. Jameson in the autumn of 1776, after the trials of the last few years, were easily pursuaded to take advantage of the current, and so set out with all their sons and daughters, except John, the eldest, who had already preceded them, for the land of promise.

They bade a last farewell to their old home and neighbors in Voluntown, Conn., and with such luggage as they could take started for the Wyoming valley on the Susquehanna, Penn. "They took with them a few articles of household furniture and an agricultural implement or two which they conveyed in a large cart drawn by three yoke of oxen. The sons walked along side, driving the oxen and helping the cart over new and badly opened roads. The daughters, clad in homespun, traveled afoot, and drove thirty head of sheep. The journey was performed in about three tedious weeks."

John Jameson, the oldest son, who had gone before to prepare a home in the new country met them at Lackawaxen and conducted them to their rude dwelling in Hanover township, Luzerne Co., Pa.

Mr. Jameson before leaving his Connecticut home had obtained from the authorities the following passport:—

" Windham No. 4, 1776

"The bearer Son of, Mr. Robert Jameson has been for many years an inhabitant in the town of Voluntown in the County of Newhaven and State of Connecticus, and is now on his journey with his wife and family and family furniture, to remove to the town of Hanover on the Susquehanna river, and is a friend to the United States of America and has a right to remove himself and family as above."

"Sam'l Gray, Justice of the Peners.
And one of the committee of sa Virnahame."

Scarcely had a year and a half elapsed since these Connecticut emigrants had gone to the attractive lands of the frontier, when there came to old Windham county appalling "rumors of Indian descent and massacre in Wyomings lovely valley. These rumors were but too literally confirmed. Robert Durkee, Robert Jameson, ir, Anderson Dana . . . and many other honored sons of Connecticut and Windham County had been most barbarously tortured and butchered, their homes burned, their farms ravaged, their families taken prisoners or driven out naked and starving into the wilderness."

Mr. Jameson lived nine or ten years after his removal to Hanover Township, Pa., and during this period three of his sons, Robert, William, and John, were cruelly slain by the Indians.

He died in the seventy-second year of his age, and was buried in the graveyard of the old Presbyterian church in Hanover, Pa. Mrs. Jameson survived her husband a number of years, and died, aged 81 years, in Salem, Pa. In the old graveyard is found a stone with the following inscription: "AGNESS JAMESON widow of Robert and daughter of Capt. Robt. Dixson. She died 24 Sept. 1804, aged 81 years."

Rober Gamelon

Her gravestone was erected by her son, Alexander Jameson, shortly after her death.

Mrs. Jamson was the daughter of Capt. Robert Dixson, whose father was John, and whose grandfather was Robert Dixson, a native of Ayrshire, Scotland, a "Covenauter" who fled from Scotland and settled, 1666, in the Province of Ulster, Ireland. It is thought that Capt. Robert Dixson, his wife being deceased, came with his daughter, Agnes, 1726, to America.

The name was spelled Dixson until 1800, or later, and since it is spelled Dixon.

ROBERT JAMESON, JR. [44], when twenty years of age enlisted July 10, 1755, as a private from Voluntowa, Conn., in Co. Second, 8th Regt., Conn. Militia, served until Dec. 16, 1775, and was honorably discharged. His regiment was stationed on Long Island Sound about two months and then was ordered by Washington to Boston, and went into camp in Roxbury, Mass.

In 1776 he went with his father's family to the Wyoming Valley, Pa. And in 1778 he was a member of the 5th Company, 24th Regiment, Connecticut militia, and was with his company July 3, 1778, in the battle of Wyoming, Pa., and was slain early in the fight. His older brother, William Jameson, who was in the same company, was wounded and had the lock of his gun shot off, but with the assistance of his brother John managed to escape from the battle-field. Later, Aug. 16, 1778, he joined a detachment of his regiment, and on the following Oct. 14, while on his way from the garrison in Wilkesbarre to Hanover to ascertain the condition of things there, when near the bridge which crosses Buttervood Creek he was shot by Indians and fell from his horse, and in a vain attempt to gain the woods he was overtaken, tomahawked and scalped by his savage foes. He survived two days and died Oct. 16, 1778.

Memoranda.

Mr. Jamesos, when about twenty-four years of age, left his native town, Voluntown, Conn., and pushed his way westward as far as the Wyoming valley, on the Susquehanna river in Pennsylvania. This was in 1773. His object was to make a settlement for himself and for his father's family. On arrival in the Wyoming valley he selected a tract of land within Hanover township, Luzerne county, Pa., on the public road leading from Wilkesbarre to Nanticoke. Here he cleared several acres and erected a comfortable log house, which contained two rooms, and a half-story loft reached by means of a ladder. The freplace was constructed without jambs, after the Dutch fashion. The windows were small, with six panes of olded paper instead of glass. The house was built of hewn logs, and was considered superior to any dwelling in the neighborhood. To this abode he welcomed his father's family in 1776, and the same year brought home his bride, Abigail Alden, who had resided with her father in Wyoming since 1773. Mr. Jameson performed more or less mili-

He was present in Plunkett's Battle, in December, 1775, near the Nan-In the spring of 1776 he enlisted in a company under Captain Strong. and was elected lieutenant. This company was united with the Connecticut troops and marched to New Jersey to join the army under Washington. He was probably the John Jameson who was ensign in the Fifth Connecticut regiment, Jan. I, 1777, and resigned July 22, 1777. Mr. Jameson, with his brothers, William and Robert Jameson, and a hired man, James Coffin, on the morning of July 3d, 1778, seized their guns and hurried from their home to resist the approaching horde of Indians and Tories moving forward with fire and sword to enact the terrible tragedy of the Wyoming Massacre. In the bloody encounter Robert Jameson and the hired man were killed, William Jameson wounded, and Mr. Jameson barely escaped with his life. On reaching home he found his aged father and mother, with his wife, sisters, and younger brothers, anxiously awaiting news of the battle. "What news, John?" shouted his father. "We are defeated!" was the hurried answer. "Robert and Coffin are dead, and William is wounded, the Indians are sweeping over the valley spreading fire and death in every direction, and we must fly for our lives." The Jamesons, Aldens, Hurlberts, and other families set out at once for old Hanover township, in Lancaster county. The old men, women, and children were placed in boats and sent over the Susquehanna river, while Mr. Jameson, with his brothers Alexander and Joseph, and his wife, who carried her son Samuel in her arms, made the journey on foot to Fort Augusta, now Sunbury, Pa. They undertook with poor success to drive the cattle before them. The most of the herd were lost by reason of the haste, the thick underwood, and the almost impassable paths. The families thus escaping the massacre were safely housed in old Hanover, Lancaster county, where they remained until 1780. But Mr. Jameson returned to look after the farm and household goods, and only occasionally visited his family in old Hanover. William Jameson, who had been wounded, a few months after the massacre, was killed, Oct. 14, 1778, by the Indians, while returning home from Wilkesbarre, near where the canal crosses the road below Carrytown. And July 8, 1782, Mr. Jameson, with his youngest brother Benjamin, and a neighbor, Asa Chapman, starting from his old home in Hanover township, Luzerne county, for Wilkesbarre, as they rode on horseback along the highway near the open ground adjacent to the old church on Hanover Green, Mr. Jameson saw Indians in the thicket on his right, and exclaimed, "Indians!" and immediately fell from his horse dead, pierced by three balls; the horse fled, leaving his rider dead on the ground, where he was afterward found scalped and tomahawked. Chapman was mortally wounded, but clinging to his saddle, his frightened horse bore him beyond the reach of the savages, to the house of Dea. John Hurlbert, near the creek, below where the "Red Tavern" now stands, where he lingered for several hours, sent for his wife, bade her an affectionate farewell, and died. Benjamin Jameson, his horse wheeling about at the first firing, was carried home in safety.

Mr. Jameson, after many "hairbreadth 'scapes," thus met a tragic death at the age of thirty-four years. He was a man of perseverance and great powers of endurance. In every respect he was a thorough-going pioneer. He was buried in the graveyard of the Hanover church, near the spot where he was killed. Mrs. Jameson, daughter of Prince Alden, was a lineal descendant of John Alden of the Mayflower, her father being the great-grandson of the Pilgrim Father John Alden, the descent being Prince, Andrew. John Alden, married Mr. Jameson Sister, Agnes Jameson. Mrs. Jameson, after the death of her husband, managed her affairs with prudence and economy, and five years later married for a second husband, Shubael Bidlock, who came, igail Tomeson in 1777, to the Wyoming valley from Windham county, Conn Mrs. Jameson's house was for years a home for the Methodist ministers who came to preach in those early days. She was a member of the first "class meeting" formed in Hanover township. She died at the age of forty-two years.

There was a monument to commemorate the massacre of July 3, 1778, in Wyoming valley, erected in 1842, and at its dedication Elisha Blackman was the only surviving soldier who took part in the terrible fight, and after the slaughter assisted in the burial of the slain. Mr. Blackman died three years later, December, 1845, and lies buried in the cemetery on "The Green" in Hanover township, Pa.

Memoranda.

MR. HARVEY came to Wyoming, Pa, in 1772, from Voluntown, Conn. He was made a prisoner by the Indians in December, 1780, and carried to Canada, where he was detained until August, 1782, when he returned home. Exposure to the severe climate and harsh treatment by the savages broke down his health. In 1786 he was married, and for several years resided with his father in the old homestead in Plymouth township. Shortly after his father's death, which occurred in 1795, Mr. Harvev erected a substantial stone dwelling house at the eastern extremity of the Plymouth "plantation." This was on land inherited from his father's estate. This house was nearly two miles east of Harvey's creek, and hardly two rods from the "old Shawnee line." Its site is much disfigured by the coal mining operations of later years, but is marked by an old ruin in which is seen a portion of the stone wall of the original house.

SITE OF ELISHA HARVEY'S STONE HOUSE.

Here Mr. Harvey passed the few remaining years of his life, and died much lamented. The Wilkesbarre Gazette of March 18, 1800, says of him: "For his uprightness he lived esteemed by all who knew him, and died not less lamented. Notwithstanding his agricultural pursuits forbade him to mix so much with men as some, yet his virtues were many and his exemplary conduct not less distinguishable, . . . and when called to bid adieu to sublunary enjoyments, he was resigned to the sleep of death, with the comfortable hope of awakening among the blest of God."

Mrs. Jameson survived her husband forty years. She continued to reside in Plymouth, Pa., and to manage the homestead farm. Her children were well cared for until grown to manhood and womanhood. She spent the later years of her life in the home of her son, Jameson Harvey, Esq. She was familiar with the tragic history of the Wyoming valley, and often rehearsed the sad story to her grandchildren. It is said "she was greatly beloved by all who knew her."

OSCAR J. HARVEY, ESQ., of Wilkesbarre, Pa., her great-grandson, has recently published a large and attractive volume of local and family history, called THE HARVEY BOOK, in which may be found extended biographies and genealogies of the Harvey, JAMESON, and other familes. Mr. Harvey says: "My statements relative to the early representatives of the Jameson family in Ireland and America are based on the facts recorded by Joseph* Jameson [49]. (Robert, John), and verified and added to by my original investigations in New England and elsewhere."

HARVEY'S CREEK.

Near the site of the old mills of Benjamin Harvey.

HANNEY'S LAKE is the largest lake within the limits of Pennsylvania. It lies in the township of Lake, Luzerne county, northwest of Wilkesbarre, at a distance of about fourteen miles. It is a long, narrow, irregular body of water, in area about six hundred and fifty acres. The water of this lake comes from springs below the surface, and is pure, clear, and cold.

HARVEY'S LANDING.

Its outlet forms Harvey's Creek, which runs in a zigzag course some twelve miles south to West Nanticoke, where it empties into the Susquehanna river at the southwestern end of Wyoming valley.

BENJAMIN HARVEY, son of Elisha and Rosanna (Jameson) Harvey, was born May 9, 1792, in Plymouth, Pa. He married July 9, 1815, Sally Nesbitt, daughter of Abram and Bethiah (Wheeler) Nesbitt. OSCAR JEWELL HARVEY.

OSCAR JEWELL HARVEY, son of Elisha B. and Sarah Marion (Garretson) Harvey, was born in Wilkesbarre, Pa. He married June 23, 1880, Fannie Virginia Holding, daughter of Eben B. and Martha Phedora (Smith) Holding. She was born Dec. 11, 1859, in Philadelphia, Pa. They reside in Wilkesbarre, Pa. The children were: Thorndyke, b. May 18, 1881; Ethel and Helen, twins, b. Sept. 18, 1883; Ernest,

b. June 2, 1886; Walter, b. Oct. 31, 1887, d. Aug. 18, 1888

Mr. Harvey graduated in 1871 from Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., and in 1874 received the degree of A. M. He was one year professor of mathematics in Wyoming Seminary, Orington, Pa. Studied law, spending some months abroad, was admitted in 1876 to the Bar of Luzerne county, and in 1879 was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. He has been a member of the fraternity of Free Masons, of the Odd Fellows, and captain of a company of infantry. In recent years he has devoted himself largely to literary pursuits, especially along lines of local history, and family genealogy. As above stated he has recently issued a large and attractive volume of local and family history called, "The Harvey Book," and will soon publish a full and elaborate history of Wilkesbarre, Pa.

JAMESON HARVEY, son of Elisha and Rosanna (Jameson) Harvey. Married Mary Campbell, daughter of James and Margaret (Stewart) Campbell. They resided in West Nanticoke, Plymouth township, Luzerne county, Pa. Mrs. Harvey died July I. 1860, in Wilkesbarre, Pa.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

Margaret Campbell, b. Oct. 13, 1835; m. June 22, 1858. Robert G. Rieman. William Jameson, b. May 13, 1838; m. Dec. 9, 1869, ¹ Jessie Wright; m. Oct. 21, 1880, ²Mrs. Amanda M. (Larring) Merritt.

Henry Harrison, b. Sept. 30, 1840, m. April 15, 1885, Jennie J. DeWitt. Mary, b. Sept. 6, 1843. She resides in Wilkesbarre, Pa.

MR. HARVEY, by inheritance and purchase, became the owner of a large farm of three hundred and fifty acres of excellent land, bounded on one side by Harvey's Creek and on another side by the Susquehanna river. He was a strong, muscular man, and gave himself to the vigorous cultivation of his wide acres.

In 1832 he erected a commodious dwelling on a hillside, overlooking the river, presenting a very attractive view. To this house late in that year he brought his young wife to preside in a beautiful home. But he soon found that his lands were not only good for agriculture, but that beneath the surface were beds of coal. He erected one of the first breakers in Plymouth township, and developed his coal mines. In 1863 he turned his mining interests over to his sons and devoted his later years of active life to the manufacture of lumber. In 1869, he removed to a large handsome brick residence on South Franklin street, Wilkesbarre, Pa. In 1871 he sold out his farm and mining interests and machinery to "The Susquehanna Coal Company" for a large sum of money. Mr. Harvey passed a vigorous and hale old age in his pleasant home in Wilkesbarre, and died when within less than six months of being ninety years of age.

WILLIAM JAMESON HARVEY, the older son, was mustered into the military service of the United States, Oct. 15, 1861, Co. F, Seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Corps, and the following Nov. 7 was commissioned first lieutenant of Co. I, and on the 20th of the same month, appointed adjutant of the regiment. He resigned his commission Nov. 25, 1862, and returned home to relieve his father of cares in his advancing years.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON and his brother. Joseph Jameson, when young men, served in the militia, and for some time lived in the fort in Plymouth and farmed the flats, or as some one has expressed it, "occupied a block-house on the Shawnee flats and roughed it through the war." In 1788 they were appointed to administer their father's estate, and in 1793 removed, with their mother and sisters, to Salem, Luzerne county, Pa., where they spent the rest of their lives.

Mr. Jameson's brother, Joseph Jameson, the family genealogist, was unnarried, and lived to be ninety years of age. They "resided on their beautiful plantation in Salem, and had at their command all the good things that could make life pass pleasantly." Mr. Jameson's wife was a daughter of Capt. Lazarus Stewart, who made himself famous for his courage and military service during the Indian wars in the Wyoming valley, and was slain in the massacre, July 3, 1778, leading in the fight.

Mr. Jameson had a long, eventful, and honored life. He was a man of business habits, was for a number of years an approved magistrate, accumulated wealth, and

Robert Jameson, the second son, graduated in 1823, from Yale college, intending to become a lawyer, but his health failed, and he gave himself to farming, but died in early manhood at his father's house in Salem, Pa.

Memoranda.

MR, STEWART being the first-born son received a double share of his father's estate, who was killed July 3, 1778, at the head of his company, in the battle and massacre of Wyoming Valley, Pa. Mr. Stewart died at the age of forty years, leaving his wife with a group of children, the oldest being buteight years of age. Mrs. Stewart, soon after her husband's death, removed to Wilkesbarre, Pa., where she reared and educated her children and managed her affairs with rare prudence and economy. After some ten years she married Rev. Mr. Pearce, a Methodist minister in active service. In fulfilling his appointments in different places as a preacher, and for three years as presiding elder in the Northumberland district, it was necessary for his family to make several removals. But on his retirement they resided for eight years in Kingston, Columbia county, Pa., and later they resided in Berwick, in the same county, where Rev. Mr. Pearce died.

Rev. Mr. Pearce was married first to Jane Potter. Of this marriage there were three children. Mrs. Jane Pearce died October, 1818. After her husband's death Mrs. Pearce soon removed to Wilkesbarre, Pa., and resided with her son. Stewart Pearce, Esq., until her death. It has been said of her, "She was a woman of genial spirit and true piety, whose ready wit and pleasing conversation and manners drew about her many friends." Her youngest son, John Jameson Pearce, became a Methodist minister of distinction. He served as representative in the thirty-fourth congress from Pennsylvania, 1855–1857, with credit. Her other children who grew to maturity became prominent and useful men and women.

Stewart Pearce was a man of literary tastes, and wrote the history of various fami-

THE JAMESONS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

NARRATIVE.

The Province of Ulster, Ireland, which, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, had become well nigh depopulated by the Irish rebellions which had taken place, was repeopled early in the seventeenth century by immigrants from Scotland.

"The offer of land and other inducements soon drew a large population, distinguished for thrift and industry, across the narrow strait that separates the two countries. They were Presbyterians, and built their first church in the county of Antrim in 1613.

The population was largely increased the next fifty years under the persecutions of Charles II and James II in their efforts to establish the Church of England in Scotland. Intermarriages of the Scotch Saxons with the Irish were exceedingly rare, so that the Scotch race remained nearly as distinct as it was on the day of settlement in Ireland. In the course of time persecution followed these Scotch people into the land of their exile, and after bearing it as long as men of their spirit could endure it, they resolved to seek new homes across the Atlantic in America.

This emigration commenced in the early part of the eighteenth century, and increased yearly for a considerable time. A large number of these people landed at New Castle and at Philadelphia. Then proceeding to the interior of the country, they settled in different parts of Pennsylvania, and especially in York and Bucks counties. The valley of the Susquehanna and the lands from the Neshaminy to the mountains north of the Lehigh proved attractive and were occupied by these newcomers. The Jamesons were of those who had descended from the emigrants from Scotland to the Province of Ulster, Ireland, and were a part of that great flood of the Scotch-Irish which during the eighteenth century so largely peopled the state of Pennsylvania.

James Jameson, son of Alexander Jameson, was born about 1650 in Glasgow, Scotland. He emigrated to the county of Galway, Ireland, where he married and lived till about 1700, when with his two sons, Robert, of whom nothing further is known, and John, he sailed for America. They landed and settled in the southern part of Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna river, not far from the present city of York. Mr. Jameson's parents lived in Glasgow, Scotland, and they probably died there. Whom he married, whether there were children beside the two sons mentioned, and many other things which might be of interest, are to the writer unknown. It has been stated that, "The Jamesons have a strong passion for learning, and as a family cherish their gentleness of blood as of great value."

MR. JAMESON was a Virginia planter. In his early manhood he went out with the militiamen, under Washington, through the campaign that ended July 9, 1755, in Braddock's defeat. Soon after his marriage he settled in Georgia. While resident there, four children were born, and his wife, Mrs. Jane Jameson, died. Mr. Jameson then removed to a place near Charlottesville, Albemarle Co., Va., where his brother, Alexander Jameson [146], was residing. He lived at one time near a stream called "Pig River," in Franklin Co., Va.

Mr. Jameson's son, Samuel Jameson [153], was in the Army of the Revolution, and was with Washington when he took command of the army, July 3, 1775, in Cambridge, Mass. It is not known what became of him. A Samuel Jameson is mentioned in 1786 as an inhabitant of Lisbon, N. H., who had served in the War of the Revolution, and he may have been the one who accompanied Washington in

1775 to Cambridge

Mr. Jameson's son, John Jameson [154], also served in the Army of the Revolution, and later settled in Madison Co., Ky., where he died, leaving descendants

MRS. McWilliams [155] had two daughters. Polly married a Mr. Morrison, and the other married a Mr. Fitzgerald.

MRS. SKELTON [157] had a son, Thomas Skelton, who lived near Wagoner Station, Miami Co., Ind., and other children who lived in Hendricks Co., Ind.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a Presbyterian of the strict Scotch type, and Sally, his wife, an Episcopalian. They were married in Garrard Co., Ky., and there became converts, by Rev. Barton W. Stone, to what is known as Campbellism, or as they call themselves, Christians or Disciples.

Mr. Jameson moved, and settled in Jefferson Co., Ind., where through a long life he was a strong support to that church. Regular services were held in his house until he donated several acres of land and a beautiful grove, wherein he and his sons and some of the neighbors built with their own hands, a neat little church, which has been called ever since "Old Liberty.

He kept an open house and entertained all the preachers who came along, and on Sundays gave dinners to those who came from miles away to attend public service.

The Jamesons as a family have active, thoughtful minds, with originality of thought, love of knowledge of every kind, and often men of affairs, taking the lead in the communities where they live, and Mr. Jameson was no exception in these respects.

Mrs. Jameson was a remarkable woman, reared in a Southern family of wealth, with a crowd of slaves to wait her bidding, with plenty of money to spend freely, given to dancing and other pursuits of pleasure. From such a home she came with her husband to live in the woods of Indiana. But she became religious as was her husband, was a great reader of the Scriptures, was a fine talker, and men and women came from all around the settlement to obtain her opinion, or her advice, and to converse with her. She was an authority on all matters of housekeeping, care of the sick and nursing.

She was devotedly fond of her husband and her children. She loved her home. She was bright and witty, winning in her manners, and a fine singer.

Her surviving children still talk about the many old songs she used to sing, and how at a very advanced age she learned and practised a new system of notes. After the deaths of their parents the sons and daughters all drifted to Indianapolis, Ind.

The Jameson family have been characterized as having "great gravity and quietness of manner." It has been said of them, "They think a great deal and say very little. Strong in feeling and emotion but reserved in expression, quick in temper but cherishing no malice. The older ones were very religious."

Rhoda Jameson (Thomas, John, James), daughter of Thomas [147] and Hannah (Taggart) Jameson, was born Oct. 2, 1790, in Albemarle Co., Va. She married Samuel Cabell Humphreys, son of William and Sarah (Stakham) Humphreys. He was born 1782 in Albemarle Co., Va. They resided in Madison Co., Ky., and near Madison, Jefferson Co., Ind., where Mr. Humphreys died Oct., 1828. Mrs. Humphreys died in September, 1866, in Iowa.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

Memoranda.

Mr. Humphreys died at forty-six leaving a widow and a large family of children. Mrs. Humphreys, was a woman of intellectual ability, strong will, and great executive force, as shown in the management of her business affairs and her family.

The sons all died in early manhood except Thomas D. Humphreys, who went west in early life and settled in Hillsboro, Ore., where he became eminent as a lawyer, and as a judge distinguished for his ability. He lived to be over eighty years of age. The children were all remarkable for their fine looks and noble bearing.

Thomas and Rhoda Jameson, brother and sister, married Sally and Samuel Humphreys, sister and brother, and the admixture of the gay and lively nature of the Humphreys with the staid gravity of the Jamesons has afforded an interesting study in the character of their descendants.

MARTHA ANNE HUMPHREYS, the youngest child, and in 1900 the only survivor, was born in Jefferson Co., Ind. She married Philemon Vawder, son of Beverley and Elizabeth (Crawford) Vawter. He was born June 22, 1819, in Jefferson Co., Ind. They res ded the greater part of their married life in Kentucky. Rev. Mr. Vawter died Oct. 2, 1894, in Fairfax Co., Va. They had four children, viz.:

Samuel Humphrey, b. May 3, 1854; m. Mand Carler. Heffie Hawrs, b. Jan. 16, 1860; m. Dec. 2, 1856, Man ice M. Joyce; d. Aug. 18, 1884-Sallie Beverley, b. July 22, 1862; m. Nov. 29, 1886, William H. Harris. Robert Crawford, b. July 16, 1868; m. June 19, 1894, William A. Milliken.

REV. Mr. VAWTER was one of the most prominent ministers of the so-called Church of the Disciples.

SAMUEL H. VAWTER, his only son, graduated from Eminence College, Ky. He was a brilliant scholar, and the orator of his class. He went West, and died, leaving a son, Philemon Claude Vawter.

MRS. JOYCE died leaving a son, Maurice Humphreys, b. Oct. 11, 1878. Mr. Joyce died in 1881.

MRS. HARRIS was born in Boone Co., Ky. She had three children: Edwin Vawter, b. Jan. 14, 1888; Beverley Humphreys, b. May 28, 1892; Hettie Vawter, b. Oct. 29, 1895.

MRS. MILLIKEN was born in Richmond Station, Boone Co., Ky. Her husband was the son of Leonard Hugh and Mary Laomia (Moody) Milliken; was born Sept. 16, 1848, in Tennessee. They reside at No. 1741 F street, Washington, D. C. Their only child is Rhoda Jameson, b. June 21, 1895. Mr. Milliken is an attorney-at-law.

MRS. MILLIKEN received her education partly in Boston, Mass. Her mother's family were reared in the South, and were strong in their Southern sympathies during the War for the Union.

MR. JAMESON was an only child, probably young when his parents died. In the autumn of 1834 he went to Covington, Ky., where he spent the remainder of his days. When the Common Council of the city of Covington took action Jan. 20, 1842, relative to building a court-house, and when on the following Sept. 20, 1842, the council voted it expedient to erect a suitable building on the public square for the use of the city to be called the City Hall, and, also, when on the 24th of June, in 1843, the corner-stone of the City Hall was laid with appropriate ceremonies, Mr. Jameson was the city clerk, as appears from attested copies of city records found on deposit in a tin box taken from the corner-stone of this old City Hall when being demolished August, 1899, preparatory to the erection of a handsome modern building. In this tin box were found gold and silver coins, a copy of the city charter and various documents. One stating that John Tyler was then president of the United States; Robert P. Letcher, governor of Kentucky; Moses V. Grant, mayor of the city of Covington, and A. H. Jameson, city clerk. There were thirteen different things in all, but counting an odd scrap of paper found in the box there were fourteen. Was this odd scrap of paper placed there to avoid the unlucky number of thirteen!

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was born on the frontier, and familiar with pioneer life. From childhood he was religiously inclined, and when only eighteen years old preached his first sermon on Christmas day in 1829.

He was identified with a sect called Christians, or Disciples, then recently established, and was associated with its founders and early ministers, among whom were Revs. Alexander Campbell, Barton W.

Stone, and others of like faith. Mr. Jameson for several years was settled as pastor of a church in Dayton, Ohio, later in Madison, Ind., and in 1842 he was installed over the First, now the Central, Christian church of Indianapolis, Ind. He was appointed, in 1862, chaplain of the Seventy-ninth regiment, Indiana Volunteers, and served with great fidelity and usefulness to the close of the war. Rev. Mr. Jameson was an earnest and eloquent preacher, his manner was impressive, and his voice magnetic. He had rare musical gifts, and was much admired as a singer. He was also a writer of Christian hymns, a good Greek scholar, and a thoughtful student of the Bible. He was much interested in the study of flowers, and became an expert in botany. He preached his last sermon in December, 1891, after more than sixty years of gospel ministration.

LOVE HUMPHREYS JAMESON.

He was still vigorous in thought, although physically feeble. A few weeks later, after a brief illness, he died. A wide circle of friends in the city where he lived, and in the churches of the state where he was known, deeply lamented his death and cherish his memory as precious.

MRS. JAMESON and her two daughters, Mrs. Wallace and Miss Jameson, reside, 1900, at No. 1609 Ash street, Indianapolis, Ind.

CHARLES THOMAS JAMESON, a son, a very gifted young man and full of promise, was accidentally drowned while swimming in the river Rio Grande, near Lando, Texas. He was an enthusiastic student of natural history, and had already made a large and rare collection of specimens, and at the time of his sad death was on his way to Mexico and Central and South America for study and in pursuit of additional specimens along his chosen line of investigation. Young Jameson was also a writer who used his pen with facility and success in both prose and poetry. Since eighteen years of age he had been a contributor to the local papers, and some of his poems had found their way into prominent eastern magazines. One of his poems of merit, entitled RETROSPECTION, concludes with the lines following:

> " The page that bears the pencil's impress deep, Has room below for many a fair design The thought thy soul hath uttered need not be Its last: but let thy soul be like a mine. Which, at the first, may yield more dross than gold, But, as it sinks within the depths of earth, Becometh richer as it groweth old. The leaf turned o'er is but a single leaf; Let all to come in deeds of love be dressed, Be to thy fellow-man a brother true. And trust thy God for all. Peace, be at rest!"

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON'S father, Thomas Jameson, having strong religious sentiments, emigrated from Virginia to Kentucky, and from thence, in 1810, to the then Territory of Indiana, that he might live in a state where slavery did not exist. He settled just across the Ohio river, in a place where Madison now stands, Jefferson Co., Ind. It was here, two years before Indiana was admitted to the Union as a state, that Mr. Jameson was born. His early life was spent on a farm. He was a very studious, thoughtful boy, and having limited school advantages in his country home at the age of twenty-three he went to Cincinnati and studied under Professor Mathews, a very excellent educator of the times. Afterward he conducted a school in Carthage, Ohio, after which he went to Jefferson Co., Ind., and engaged in the silk culture. Mr. Jameson, in 1842, came to Indianapolis, and taught the first public or district school in that city, taking as tuition what little public money there was and such merchandise or work as his different patrons could spare him. His health failing he soon moved from the city to a farm in Wayne township, five miles west of Indianapolis, where he lived until his death. In 1851 he was elected Justice of Peace in Wayne township, and served the people in this capacity until he was asked to serve as township trustee. Under the law of Indiana, as it then existed, this was a very important position. He selected and hired all teachers, erected all school buildings, constructed and repaired all roads, and had charge of, and power to disburse, all public moneys belonging to the township. Notwithstanding the great party feeling that existed during the Civil War, he held this position by mutual consent of both political parties. He resigned from the office of township trustee to accept that of county commissioner, which office he held during the building of the Marion Co. court-house in Indianapolis. He was a lifelong member of the Christian church. He was a useful and honored citizen, a man beloved by all with whom he came in contact.

P.A. Jameson

DR. JAMESON was born of excellent parentage and ancestry. His father and mother, pioneers in the settlement of the state of Indiana, were intelligent, well educated, and devoulty religious people. His grandfather Jameson was a colonial and Revolutionary soldier. His grandfather Humphreys belonged to an old and wealthy family of Virginia.

Mr. James 5n, a young man of nineteen years, with a fair education, commenced teaching, and for four years taught school in Indianapolis, Ind. While thus employed he took up the study of medicine with a resident physician, Dr. John H. Sanders. Subsequently he attended medical lectures in the University of Louisville, Ky., and later, in 1849, he graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa. He then located in Indianapolis, Ind., and formed a partnership with his old teacher in medicine, Dr. Sanders. About a year later the death of his partner threw a large and increasing practice entirely into the hands of this young physician. But Dr. Jameson sustained himself well in the very responsible place, and in an amazingly short time won a professional eminence which he maintained for fifty years. In the early years of his professional life he encountered cases of the Asiatic cholera and some other epidemics and critical diseases, which he treated with such remarkable skill and success that he very soon had, and continued to have throughout his long medical career, a practice in extent and importance unequaled by that of any other physician in the city.

Dr. Jameson is one of the few surviving charter members of the Indiana Medical Society, which was organized in 1849, and his published papers and reports have been of such a character and value that he has a most honorable position and reputation among the medical fraternity of the state. In 1861 the Indiana legislature elected him Commissioner for the State Hospital of the Insane, and he was continued in that office until 1869, when he was made president of all the boards of the benevolent institutions of the state, including the hospitals for the insane and for the blind and for the deaf and dumb. He was twice re-elected to this important office for terms of four years, and he accomplished a great deal by enlarging the capacity of these institutions and by bringing their management up to a high standard of excel-

Dr. Jameson served throughout the War for the Union as military surgeon. He did much in the organization of soldiers' hospitals; was ranking surgeon in charge of the prisoners taken at Fort Donelson, and fulfilled an eminent medical service among the soldiers assigned and quartered in Indianapolis.

In 1862 he was elected to the city council, of which body he was a prominent member for six years, until he resigned his position. For four years he was chairman of the committee on finance, and did a very important service in relieving the city of a heavy debt, improving its credit, and placing the city finances on a sound basis. In different ways he contributed to the welfare and prosperity of the growing city of Indianapolis.

Dr. Jameson for many years was identified with the educational interests of the city, the development of its schools and higher institutions of learning. He was for a long time director and financial agent of Butler college, and was a pioneer mover in the establishment of the University of Indianapolis, which now has nearly a hundred instructors and more than a thousand students. Thus his life has been a very busy one, and of varied and distinguished usefulness.

MRS. Jameson is a daughter of Ovid Butler, Esq., a prominent lawyer of Indianapolis and the founder of Butler college. She is a lady of interesting qualities, rare abilities, and generous accomplishments.

MR. JAMESON was left an orphan at the age of ten years, and went to live with his uncle, Alexander Jameson, on a farm near Indianapolis, Ind. At the end of three years he was induced to leave this home and the opportunities of education, which were very limited at the best. When seventeen years of age, in 1861, he enlisted in Co. F, 11th Indiana Vols., under the command of Col., and later Gen., Lewis Wallace. He served three years, and was in all the campaigns and battles in which his regiment was engaged during that period except the Battle of Shiloh. Some of the more memorable were those of Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Champion Hills, and the Siege of Vicksburg. After his term of service in the army expired he went to Wabash, Ind., as an apprentice of Frederick Grant, to learn the carpenter's trade, where he remained until 1866. In the autumn of that year he was married, and in 1860 went to St. Louis, Mo., and for two years was employed on the Eads Bridge, and then was engaged as foreman on railroad construction work, Carbondale and Marion, in Southern Illinois. In 1873 Mrs. Jameson died, and Mr. Jameson removed with his two little girls to Indianapolis, Ind., which has since been his home. For twenty-five years he has been engaged successfully in the building business. He is a member of the Masonic order. He has quite a reputation as a master-builder of churches, having erected many fine church edifices in different parts of the state of Indiana. His daughters are both married, and he has his home at present, 1900, with the younger, Mrs. Roberson, No. 2306 West Morris street, Indianapolis, Ind.

MR. JAMESON removed to Buckingham, Bucks Co., Pa., purchased a hundred and sixty-six acres of land and kept a hotel. After his death the property was sold and purchased by his widow. Jameson's mill before 1760 was one of the four mills in Warwick, Pa., later known as Lewis Ross's mill.

In 1759 a road was opened from Henry Jameson's mill, on the southwest branch of Neshaminy creek, to the York road. Jameson's Corner, so called as early as 1817, was at the intersection of the York and Almshouse roads. It consists of a tavern, a store, and a few dwellings. The locality long known as Centreville has returned to store, and a few dwellings. The locality long known as Centreville has returned to its old name "Jamison's." Mary Jamison's name appears in 1772 in the assessors' list of innkeepers of Buckingham, Bucks Co., Pa. Under date of Aug. 15, 1773, a distinguished guest in his diary enters this: "House at Jamison's neat and clean, dinner indifferent, claret very bad."

"The Tavern in Centreville, Buckingham, has been noted in its day and considerably more than a century whitens its memory." It was known as the "Jamison Inn." Mrs. Jameson managed it for a few years after her husband's death, and on her second marriage it was in charge of Mr. John Bogart, whose wife she became, and was quite famous during the Revolutionary period. Bucks County Committee of Safety met there, and at one time it was the headquarters of General Greene. It is still kept in good condition.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a captain in the Continental army. His wife was a sister of Rev. James Grier, minister of Deep Run church. Capt. Jameson was under Col. Joseph Hart in a battalion sent in the summer of 1776 to the Flying Camp near Amboy.

ADAM KERR, who married Frances Jameson [311], was a son of Adam and Jane (Miller) Kerr. He was born in 1772, and died Dec. 2, 1814. Mrs. Jane (Miller) Kerr was a daughter of William and Ann (Jameson) Miller [289].

"Capt. John Jamison, in Col. Baxter's Penn. Regiment, commissioned Sept. 7, 1776; taken prisoner at Fort Washington, Nov. 16, 1776, and released on parole Aug., 1778; exchanged March 26, 1781.

"Capt. Jamison, while in command of his company of militia from Bucks Co., encountered a rough fellow, Stoffel Stuckafuss, who broke the captain's gun, refusing to pay the damages, and using such violent language that he was adjudged dangerous to the peace of the state and condemned to pay £2 ros. to Capt. Jamison for his gun and £4 1s. expenses.

"Toward the close of 1776, when called out, forty-nine men of Capt. Jamison's company from Bucks Co. refused to march. Gen. Putnam relates that after the Battle of Princeton some militia companies deserted almost bodily; one case, a whole company ran away with the exception of a lieutenant and one man who was lame."

HENRY JAMESON [316] resided in Philadelphia, Pa. He drew a prize of fifty thousand dollars in a lottery. At his death he left a small legacy of five hundred dollars to the Neshaminy church, which was used in 1818 to put a new roof upon the church building. The rest of his money enriched his relatives.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON came into possession, by his father's will of 1747, of the farm on which a certain William Booz was then living, with the conditions of paying the debt with which the place was encumbered, and also paying to his younger brother, Alexander Jameson, £100. It appears that in 1760 Mr. Jameson gave a mortgage on two hundred and thirty-six acres of land in Warwick, Pa., probably the farm he inherited, and it further appears that this mortgage was never satisfied, and the place was probably sold by the sheriff. In 1790 there was a Robert Jameson, an executor on the estate of James Armstrong, whose wife, Mrs. Ruth (Vastine) Armstrong, was a sister of Mrs. Jameson. And while Mr. Armstrong does not mention relationship, yet it would be quite natural for him to name his brother-in-law for such a service.

Mrs. Jameson's great-grandfather, Abraham Van de Woestyne, came prior to 1690, from Holland to New York. In 1698 he was in Germantown, Pa., where he and his son John owned real estate. John Van de Woestyne, about 1720, sold his land in Germantown, and removed to Hilltown, Bucks Co., Pa., where he bought a large tract of land of Jeremiah Langhorne. He lived in a quaint house with gables to the road, on the Bethlehem pike. He died in 1738. Abraham Van de Woestyne, his son, or Abraham Van de Vastine as the name came to be spelled, was Mrs. Jameson's father. He made his will as follows:

"Will of Abraham Vastine, Hilltown Twp. Bucks Co. Pa. Dated May 9 1770—Proved Oct 31, 1772—Will Book 3 page 197 Wife Sarah 1-2 interest in Grist Mill in Bedminster Twp. THE CHILDREN WERE:

HENRY, b. 1780; m. Mary Ann Walker; d. Feb. 7, 1812. MARY, m. Dr. William Hart; d. Sept. 28, 1802.

Memoranda.

REV. MR. IRWIN was pastor of the Neshaminy church for nearly thirty-eight years, being installed pastor Nov. 3, 1774, by the First Presbytery of Philadelphia, and remaining in that office to the time of his death, March 3, 1812.

He graduated in 1770 from Princeton College, N. J., a friend and college mate of JAMES MADISON, afterwards president of the United States. He was licensed to preach the Gospel May 19, 1773, by the Presbytery of New Castle, and for a year preached in various places in Central Pennsylvania and Virginia. In the spring of 1774, he came as a candidate to the pulpit of the Neshaminy church. He came among the people with little except his horse and Bible.

But his commanding personal appearance, being tall and finally developed physically, his noble bearing, intelligent countenance, powerful voice, his scholarship, his character, his animated and impressive preaching quickly won his hearers, and he was called to their pastorate. His ministry was long and successful. Mrs. Martha Irwin, his first wife, their two children, Dr. Hart, a son-in-law, and an infant grand-child, all passed on before him. Dr. and Mrs. Hart had one child, Louisa M., born Feb. 3, 1802, d. July 19, 1802, a few weeks later Mrs. Hart died, And Dr. Hart died Aug. 13, 1810, at the age of thirty-two years. Rev. Mr. Irwin married 2 Priscilla McKinstry, who survived him, and died Aug. 3, 1822. Henry Irwin, Rev. Mr. Irwin's only son, died a few weeks before his father. His widow, with several children, later removed to Ohio. Rev. Mr. Irwin's illness lasted but a few days. Only one Sunday intervende between his last sermon and his death. He was buried in a spot over which the pulpit of the original church once stood and on a horizontal marble tablet over his grave is the following inscription:—

REV. NATHANIEL IRWIN
DIED MARCH 3D, 1812
AGED 65 YEARS, 4 MOS., 15 DAYS.

To this sad tomb, who e'er thou art, draw near: Here lies a friend to truth: of soul sincere, Of manners unaffected and of mind Enlarged: he wished the good of all mankind: Calmly he looked on either life, for here His peace was made, and nothing left to fear.

CLARA [389], m. Charles L. Williams.

MR. JAMESON, at the age of fourteen years, entered South Carolina college. Leaving college his Senior year, he studied law, was admitted to the bar, and practiced his profession in Orangeburgh, S. C. But becoming interested in agriculture, he devoted himself to that, and became one of the representative planters of the state, He was a man of broad views and literary tastes. Having wealth and leisure, he surrounded himself with books, and was an ardent student. He had a fondness for military tactics, became attached to the militia cavalry, and rose to the command of a brigade. He had a noble and soldierly bearing, rode his horse and handled his sabre like one born to the service. He represented Orangeburgh District ten years, 1838 to 1848, in the legislature, and showed himself a broad-minded, judicious, and conscientious legislator. As chairman of the committee on the military he introduced the bill by which state military schools were established, and was appointed by the governor in 1842 one of the original members of the board of visitors of these academies. He had a clear mind, sound judgment, a high standard of action, which made him a most valuable member of the board, and enabled him to render important service to the state. His modesty was as great as his merit, and he was regarded as one of the most substantial and distinguished citizens of South Carolina. The public placed the utmost confidence in him by reason of his character and ability. This was illustrated by the crowning distinction of his honorable public career.

When the secession convention met, Dec. 17, 1860, to consider the question of supernesst moment to South Carolina and to the whole South, it was the eminent citizen, DAVID FLAVEL JAMESON, who was called upon to preside over that august body. It needed the dignity of his bearing, the ripeness of his judgment, the wisdom of his counsel, and the prestige of his name. That convention, composed of one hundred and sixty-nine delegates, after three days of debate, passed, Dec. 20, 1860, the ordinance of secession, to which he attached his name as president. But General Jameson's work did not end with this. Afterward he gave his whole time, his thought, and his devoted service to the civil affairs of the state and of the Southern Confederacy, until his sudden death by yellow fever on the 14th day of Sept., 1864.

General Jameson was a person of scholarly attainments and exquisite literary taste. He was a fine conversationalist, held the pen of a ready and graceful writer. He had a keen sense of humor, was refined in manner, and of charming personality.

His "Life and Times of Bertrand du Gueselin," printed in two attractive volumes, is a work of uncommon merit, and happily illustrates his scholarship and the grace and beauty of his diction. These volumes were printed and the covers made in England, and ran the blockade into Charleston, S. C., where they were put together.

And thus as a model citizen, a statesman, and a scholar, General Jameson adorned the times in which he lived. And in the full possession of his faculties, after a brief illness, he passed on out of this life into the higher. His sun went down as sinks the God of day in the trooics.

"No pale gradations quench his ray, No twitight deeps his wrath alloy, With disk like battle-target red, He rushes to his burning bed, Dyes the wide cowe with bloody light Then wink at once—and all is might

A monument of solid granite, about eight feet high, was erected Sept., 1897, over the grave of General Jameson, which bears the following inscription:

GENERAL DAVID FLAVEL JAMISON.

PRESIDENT OF THE SECESSION CONVENTION.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, as stated by his son, Dr. Horatio Gates Jameson, in a written sketch of his father's life, was a graduate from the medical department of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. He practised his profession in York, and as late as 1796, in Shippensburg, which is the oldest settlement in Cumberland Co., Pa. He was an officer in the Provincial forces of Pennsylvania, between May, 1757, and 1760, holding commissions of captain, brigade major, and lieutenant-colonel, serving in the Colonial wars against the French and Indians. He was commissioned also as colonel in the militia of Pennsylvania, in the war of the Revolution, and it is said served under Washington in the battles of Princeton and Monmouth, a part of the time acting as a surgeon in the army. These various military commissions, much worn and obliterated by time, are in the possession of Gen. Horatio Gates Gibson, of the U. S. army, now of Washington, D. C., a great-grandson of Col. David Jameson, M. D. Under date of Dec. 31, 1776, the committee of York Co. wrote to the Committee of Safetvin Philadelphia, Pa., as follows:

"In these times of Difficulty several gentlemen have exerted themselves much in the Grand Cause" * "The gentlemen who deserve the most from the publick are David Jameson, Hugh Denwoody, Charles Lukens and Mr. George Eichelberger. They have been exceedingly useful."

Dr. Jameson came from Scotland in company with a friend, also a young surgeon, Dr. Hugh Mercer, afterward the distinguished General Mercer of the Continental army, who fell at Princeton. As showing the service rendered and the esteem in which Dr. Jameson was held, there are many papers referring to him in the Colonial Archives of Pennsylvania, a. g., a letter from Horace Hamilton to Capt. Potter, dated, or Fort Littleton, April 4, 1756. . . we have sent an express to Fort Shirley for Dr. Mercer, supposing Dr. Jamieson is killed or mortally wounded in the expedition, he being not returned—" "Capt. Jameson is a gentleman of education, does his duty well and is an exceedingly good officer." "Col. David Jameson had commanded at Fort Hunter, Fort Augusta, Fort Aughwich, and was at the battle of Loyal Hanna, March 14, 1769."

Col. Jameson held by executive appointment various civic offices in the county of York, Pa. He was appointed justice of the peace, Oct., 1764, and June, 1777, and had a special commission to try certain offenders, etc.

There is an accredited family tradition that Dr. Jameson, the young man from Scotland, in 1740, was a descendant of the "Campbell Clan" and a nephew of the Duke of Argyle, a sister's son.

MRs. Jaarsson was the eldest daughter of Thomas Davis of York, Pa. She had two sisters and one brother. After Dr. Jameson's death Mrs. Jameson married $Col. Gorge Irwin, a merchant of York, Pa., where they resided. Col. Irwin was one of the deputies from York to the Provincial Convention in Philadelphia, Jan. 23-28, 1776. He was the owner of the property on the southwest corner of Main and Beaver streets, known as Irwin's Corner, and opposite the National Hotel, York, Pa. He was a man of considerable wealth. His will was probated April 1, 1812. Mrs. Irwin, according to records, prior to May 3, 1803, removed with her family to Franklinton, now Columbus, Ohio. She married April 10, 1815, $Col. Robert Culberton, a gentleman of wealth and distinction, who had removed, previous to Sept. 25, 1807, from Franklin Co., Pa., to Franklin Co., Ohio, and purchased lands situated on but sides of the Scioto river. He was an elder and prominent member of the First Presbyterian church of Columbus (Franklinton), and signed the call Sept. 5, 1807, to Rev. Dr. Hoge, of Richmond, Va., to become its pastor. At one time the Jameson and Culbertson families constituted about half the congregation. It is now one of the most wealthy and influential churches in the etily of Columbus.

Col. Culbertson's will was offered for probate March 14, 1820. He had children by a previous marriage. Mrs. Culbertson survived her husband two or three years.

practised for more than forty years in Baltimore, Md. He was the founder and president of the Washington Medical College of that city, and the first president of the Ohio Medical College in Cincinnati, Ohio. Dr. Jameson was very celebrated for his surgical knowledge and skill. He won a wide reputation for his successful treatment of the cholera, which was epidemic in 1832 in Philadelphia and in Baltimore. He wrote several medical books which were accepted as authority by the profession. Dr. Jameson spent some time with his family in Europe, and his distinguished learning and ability were recognized in the medical and surgical circles of the continent. He died while on a visit to New York city. Dr. Jameson left in manuscript a memoir of his distinguished father, Col. David Jameson, M. D., which has been printed but not published by his grandson, Gen. Horatio Gates Jameson Gibson, U. S. A., to which is added an interesting appendix of genealogy and memoranda. This appendix furnished the author of this volume much valuable data.

MRS. HANNAH JAMESON survived her lamented husband nearly thirty years.

CAPT. FEARSON, Mrs. Jameson's father, was famous in the Revolutionary period as the commander of the privateer, Bucaneer, which was such a terror to the British mercantile shipping. Memoranda.

MR. GIBSON when a lad of seven years crossed the ocean, with his father, to America. He was educated for the ministry, and became a clergyman of the Reformed Presbyterian church. He possessed a large measure of intellectual ability and was distinguished as a gifted and eloquent preacher. Old Covenanters from Vermont to the Carolinas, from Maryland to the Mississippi, loved, admired, and honored him.

Besides ministering to his congregation, he had in charge for some years a large classical school. He was devoted to his work as a minister, and as a teacher of his people "from youth to hoary age." He passed away at the age of nearly fourscore

MRS. GIBSON was quite celebrated for her personal beauty. It was conceded in her day that the palm of beauty belonged to the Baltimore belles, "and there were two Elizabeths that gave Bultimore its prestige of beauty, Elizabeth Jameson and Elizabath Patterson."

MRS. SCHISSLER, the daughter, was the mother of two girls, one of whom married James H. Hopkins, Esq., a lawyer of distinction. a bank president, and a member of congress, and the other married Frederick J. Nelson, Esq., a lawyer of Frederick, Md., for many years; a candidate for congress, and prominently named for the position of attorney-general of the state.

WILLIAM GIBSON, the oldest son, was distinguished as a commander in the United States Navy, and was also gifted as a poet.

HORATIO GATES JAMESON GIB-SON, the second son, and in 1900 the only survivor of his father's family, is a retired officer of the United States Army.

JOHN GIBSON, the third son, was a prominent lawyer and judge now deceased, in York, Pa.

ROBERT FISHER GIBSON, ESQ., a son of Hon. John Gibson, is the popular mayor, 1500, of the city of York, Pa. He has a brother, John Edwin, Esq., of Chicago, Ill., and a sister, Charlotte Packard, of York, Pa., where their mother resides.

ROBERT GIBSON, the youngest son of Rev. John and Elizabeth Gibson, was a brave officer and died in a cause which he believed to be just.

HORATIO GATES JAMESON GIBson, son of Rev. John and Elizabeth Jameson Gibson, was born in Baltimore, Md. His early school days were passed in his native city, in Philadelphia, and in York, Pa. He was appointed March 8, 1843, a cadet at West Point, from the York, Pa., congressional district, reported there June 13, 1843. graduated June 23, 1847, and made 2d lieutenant of Second artillery, Sept. 8, 1847. He served in Mexico, made a vovage to the Hawaiian Islands, was on duty as aide-de-camp to General Riley in California, and was

Gr. Aneuly H. G. Giban made first lieutenant of Third artillery, May 26, 1851. During the next ten years he was almost continually in service on the Western frontier, and was severely wounded Nov. 1, 1855, in a battle with the Oregon Indians. Three years later he was regimental quartermaster, and made captain of Third artillery, May 14, 1861. He served during the War for the Union, and was in the Siege of Yorktown, the battles of Williamsburg, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and many others. He was brevetted major, May 6, 1862, for gallant and meritorious conduct at the Battle of Williamsburg, Va , and Sept. 17, 1862, he was made brevet lieutenant-colonel for gallant and meritorious service at the battle of Antietam, Md. He was made lieutenant-colonel Second Ohio Heavy Artillery Volunteers, Aug. 1, 1863; colonel of Third Ohio Heavy Artillery Volunteers, Aug. 15, 1863, and served with it until Aug. 12, 1865. He was made brevet colonel and brevet brigadier-general, U. S. volunteers, March 13, 1865, for valiant and meritorious conduct during the war, and was mustered out of the volunteer service Aug. 23, 1865. He became major of the Third artillery, Feb. 5, 1867; lieutenant-colonel of the Second artillery, April 19, 1882, and colonel of the Third artillery, Dec., 1883, in the U. S. A. He was on duty in command of Washington Barracks, D. C., from June 8, 1885, to his retirement from active service, May 22, 1891. Since then General Gibson has resided in Washington, D. C., and has been called upon to take in command American troops on various occasions, as at Gettysburg, July, 1888, and the Capital Centennial Celebration, Sept. 18, 1806.

General Gibson, a young cadet at West Point, was regarded as the handsomest man in his class, and in later life he has been described as follows:

"General Gibson is a fine, soldierly appearing officer, well proportioned and straight as an arrow. He has a bright eye, massive forehead, a straight nose, and a mouth indicative of firmness. He has a genial way about him that wins confidence after a short acquaintance. His record is filled with creditable achievements."

Thomas Jameson, parentage unknown, was born in Scotland, or in Ireland. He married Jane Irwin. She was born in Ireland, where they resided for a few years.

In 1742 they determined to emigrate, and accordingly set sail for America on board the ship, "William and Mary," and in due time landed safely in Philadelphia, Pa. Soon after their arrival they settled in Marsh Creek, York Co., Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Jameson died a tragic death, being massacred by the Indians in the spring of 1755.

ROBERT [509], b. 1749, in Marsh Creek, Pa., massacred by Indians in spring of 1755.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, with his wife and three children, sailed from some port in Ireland, where they had lived for a short time, in 1742, for America. Their voyage was without incident save that while sailing the middle Atlantic there was born to them a little daughter, and they named her Mary, partly, perhaps, for the ship on which they sailed, which was the "William and Mary." They landed in Philadelphia, Pa., but soon pushed to the frontier and established a home in a fertile region called Marsh Creek, Pa. There they lived and cultivated the land with industry and success for some twelve years. Meanwhile two little boys were added to the family circle; first, Matthew, and about three years later, Robert. In 1754 there sprang up trouble with the Indians, and the seven years' war with the French and Indians commenced with a bloody battle at Great Macdows, between Washington, at the head of his soldiers, and their enemies. In this fight it is said that Mr. Jameson had a brother, John Jameson, a soldier, under Washington, who was killed July 3, 1754, at Fort Necessity; and tradition says that Henry, Robert, William Jameson of Leith, Scotland, were his cousins.

Mr. Jameson had just made a good beginning, and, with his family about him, quite enjoyed his frontier life.

With the assistance of his older sons, now young men, he had cleared and brought under cultivation a goodly number of acres of valuable land. But, alas! the perils and the cruelties of those early times! What a tragic history opens in the awful experience of this happy family. A single day changes everything!

It was on a lovely spring morning in 1755, before breakfast, Mr. Jameson was busy at the side of the house shaving an axe-helve, Mrs. Jameson was preparing the morning meal, the older boys were doing the chores at the barn, the smaller children were playing about the house, when all were startled by the report of a gun, and almost instantly there pounced down upon them an armed band of six Indians and four Frenchmen, making them all captives except the two older sons, at the barn, who escaped and fled to where their grandfather Irwin lived in Virginia. The savages after plundering the house of everything, made off as quickly as possible, with their captives and plunder, to the woods, and did not stop until night came, and a long distance had been placed between them and all possible pursuit. The next morning, in the gloom of those dismal forests Mr. Jameson, his wife, the older daughter, Betsey, and the two small boys were all cruelly butchered and scalped. Mary, a miss of thirteen years, was the only one of the family spared. Whatever became of her older brothers, who fled to Virginia, is, to the writer, unknown: but the story of Mary Jameson, born on the sea, made an orphan by the cruel tomahawk of the savage, carried off into the wilderness a captive, adopted, given a new name, Deh-hewä-mis, and arrayed as an Indian girl, taught the language and customs of savage life, made the wife of an Indian warrior and chief and the mother of Indian children. leading a life of unparalleled vicissitudes, accustomed to scenes of blood and savage cruelty, reaching the great age of ninety-one years, the life of MARY JAMESON, the white Indian woman, constitutes a page of unique, tragic, and thrilling history.

Memoranda.

MARY JAMESON was born on the ocean, her parents, with three older children, being on their way from Ireland to America. At the age of thirteen years, spring of 1755, she was carried away a captive by a party of the Shawnee Indians, by whom her parents, an older sister, and two younger brothers were cruelly massacred, and their scalos taken and borne away as trobies.

At the end of five or six days journey through the forests, the Indians, with their little captive, reached Fort Du Quesne, at the junction of the Monongahela and the Alleghany rivers, where the Ohio river begins. Here her face and hair were painted red, in fine Indian style, and she was given to two pleasant looking squaws of the Seneca tribe, who with little Mary were soon floating down the Ohio river, and at night they arrived at a small Seneca Indian town at the mouth of a river called Shenan-jee, where these squaws had a wigwam.

Having dressed their captive in a nice, clean suit of Indian clothing, and placed her in the center of the wigwam, all the squaws of the village came to see her, and after a ceremony of their own Indian style she was adopted into the family as a sister of the two squaws mentioned and given the name of pretty girl or a good thing.

By this name she was ever afterward called by the Indians. She was adopted by these squaws to supply the place of a brother who had been killed in a battle between Washand the French and Indians. They were very kind to their adopted sister, and did everything for her comfort, and were diligent in teaching her the language and customs of Indian life. When autumn came, with their harvested corn, their horses and canoes. the Indians abandoned their summer home at the mouth of the She-nan-iee. and proceeded down the Ohio, some eight miles to the mouth of the Sci-o-to river. where they established winter quarters and these hunters ranged the forest for game. They found the woods well stocked with elk, deer, and other large animals, and the marshes with beaver, muskrat, and other fur-bearing creatures. With the coming of spring they returned to their summer home in Wi-ish-to, thus for three summers they lived in Wiish-to spending each winter in Sci-o-to.

It was their first summer in 1757 that Deh-he-wä-mis was married to She-nin-jee, one of the Delawares. He ·· was a noble man, large in stature, elegant in appearance, generous in conduct, courteous in war, a friend in peace, and a lover of justice." Their married life was happy, but short, as She-nin-jee sickened and died about three years after their marriage.

The family into which Deh-he.wä-mis had been adopted belonged to that part of the Seneca tribe which lived in Genishau on the Genesee river. And to this place with her brothers and little son, a distance of six hundred miles through the wilderness, in the autumn of 1760, she journeyed, and after much hardship by the way, she arrived and was made very welcome by her Indian brothers and sisters. Her husband was expected to rejoin her in the spring, but instead she received the sad news of his death, shortly after they parted at Yish-kab-wa-na in the autumn.

Deh-he-wä-mis, on her arrival on the Genesee river, resided in Little Beard's town, the largest Indian village of the region. Here, when her little boy was three or four years old, she married a second time, to an Indian warrior named Hi-ok-a-too, called Gardeau, by whom she had five children; and within the Genesee valley she lived for seventy-two years. In 1797, at the "Council at Big Tree," there was granted to her a reservation six miles long and nearly four and three-fourths miles wide, containing 17,027 acres, with the Genesee river running through it, from south to north, a very fertile region known as the "Gardeau Reservation." In 1823 she sold all except a tract two miles long and one mile wide, lying on the Genesee river.

MARY JAMESON, Deh--he-wä-mis, in the autumn of 1823, when upwards of eighty years of age, gave the narrative of her life, which was published in 1824. This was forty vears after the close of the War of the Revolution and almost seventy years since she was carried captive by the Indians. James E. Seaver, Esq., listened to her story, collected the materials, and prepared the work for the press. Shortly after its publication he died. In 1842 the work was revised by Ebenezer Mix, Esq., and Chapters V, VIII, and XV with the Appendix, added by him. In 1856 a new edition was prepared, with illustrations and numerous foot-notes, and published

The Senecas, in 1825, sold their reservations on the Genesee river, and removed to To-na-wan-da, Buffalo Creek, and Cat-tar-au-gus reservations, leaving Deh-he-wā-mis, her two square miles, sinher two square miles, surrounded by the whites.

DEH-HE-WÄ-MIS NINETY YEARS OF AGE, 1832.

Thus situated she and her children grew discontented and determined to leave their isolated abode and again join their tribe, and share the fortunes, the joys and sorrows, of their Indian kindred and friends. Accordingly, she sold her annuity for ready money, also her two square miles of real estate, and in the summer of 1831 removed to Buffalo Creek Reservation, where she purchased a good farm on Buffalo Flats, and there, in peace and plenty, she spent the remnant of her days.

In the summer of 1833, in a friendly manner, she left the pagan and joined the Christian party of her nation, and embraced the Christian religion. On the 19th day of September, 1833, she suddenly died in her own house, at the age of ninety-one years. Her burial was after the manner of Christians and attended by a large concourse of people.

In the graveyard of the Seneca Mission a marble slab marks her grave, with the following inscription:

DAUGHTER OF

THOMAS JEMISON AND JANE IRWIN

Born on the Ocean between Ireland and Phila. in 1742 or 3. Taken captive at Marsh Creek, Pa., in 1755. Carried down the Ohio. Adopted into an Indian family. In 1759 removed to Genesee River. Was naturalized in 1817.

Removed to this place in 1831,

And having survived two husbands and five children, leaving three still alive;

She died Sept. 19th, 1833, aged about ninety-one years, Having a few weeks before expressed a hope of pardon through

IESUS CHRIST.

" The counsel of the Lord that shall stand."

THOMAS JAMESON, son of She-nin-jee and Deh-he-wä-mis, was born in Wi-ish-to on the Ohio. He was married four times and died at the age of fifty-six years, leaving a widow and eight children.

JACOB JAMESON, his second son by his fourth wife, entered Dartmouth College, N. H., in the spring of 1816, and pursued his studies there for two years. He completed a regular course of medicine with good success. He received an appointment as ASSITANT SUKGEON in the United States Navy, in which capacity he sustained an excellent moral, social, and professional character.

His commanding officer bore this testimony: "There is no person on board the ship so generally esteemed as Mr. Jemison, nor a better surgeon in the Navy." Dr. Jameson died about 1850 on board a ship in the Mediterranean squadron, when about forty years of age.

BUFALO TOM, son of Thomas Jameson and grandson of She-nin-jee and Deh-he-wä-mis, in 1878, being nearly ninety years of age, was living near Brant, N. Y., and was called a "noble specimen of an Indian." In paying a debt of wheat he insisted on heaping the measure; and when the white man did not have his boots made at the time agreed upon, "trade closed between the shoemaker and Tom."

JOHN, the elder son of Hi-ok-a-too and Deh-he-wä-mis, was born on the Gardeau Reservation, Genesee-Valley, N. Y. He had two wives (the Seneca Indians allowed polygamy) and nine children. He proved to be a "bad Indian," and his death was a tragedy.

JESSE, the youngest child, was intimate with the white people and cultivated their habits; was industrious, amiable in disposition, of great assistance and very kind to his mother, and her best beloved. He shunned the company of Indians and never attended their frolics. This seems to have been the exciting cause or reason of his early and tragic death, which occurred at the age of twenty-seven years.

BETSEY, NANCY, and POLLY, the three married daughters, survived their aged mother but six years, and all died within the period of three months in the autumn of 1839 at their homes on the Seneca Reservation, leaving a large number of children and grandchildren to lament their loss

The descendants of Mary Jameson, the White Woman of the Senecas, De-he-uūmis, were numerous and respected while they occupied the Seneca Reservation, and to-day, having taken their departure from the land of their fathers, it is believed they are leading upright lives, filling important positions in social and civil life in the Indian country beyond the Mississippi.

De-jih-non-da-weh-hoh, a grandson of Deh-he-wä-mis, resided in the Buffalo Creek Reservation until 1845, when he removed to Cattaraugus Reservation, where he died

Nov. 8, 1859.

Francis Jameson and his wife, Margaret, were born of Scotch ancestry in Ireland. They lived for some years in Buckina, Ireland. But about 1764 sailed for America, and located first in eastern Pennsylvania. Later they removed and settled in Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland Co., Pa., where they spent the rest of their lives.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

JOHN [511], m. Jane Martin. ROBERT [512], m. Elizabeth Gaff. MARMADUKE [513]. FRANCIS [514]. MARGARET [515], m. 1— Robinson; m. 2 — Peoples. Rose [516], m. — Kilgore. Mollie [517], m. — McCartney.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON before leaving Ireland received from the parish minister the following certificate: that

"Francis Jamison, his wife and family of 4 sons and 3 daughters had lived in the bounds of that congregation from their infancy and that this would admit them to church privileges in any Christian society where it might please Providence to call their lot. Signed, Buckina this 17th day of July 17th by me John Logue, Minister" The above certificate is beautifully written on an old slip of yellow paper. The letters are as plain as when first written so many years ago. It is in the possession of Joseph Jameson [540], a great grandson of Francis Jameson. The family probably left Ireland shortly after receiving this certificate. They landed in Philadelphia, Pa., and proceeded west to the Cove or Connoshaque, near Mercersburg, Franklin Co., Pa. In 1769, the land office being opened for Westmoreland Co., the two older brothers, John and Robert, went there to settle. Robert took land near Pleasant Unity, which was improved and planted with corn the first summer, and a cabin built. In the fall they stored their corn in the cabin, took their horses and went home. The next spring they returned with one of their sisters to keep house for them. In three years they had enough land cleared and cabins built to make homes for themselves and their parents. The old people had their cabin on their son, Robert Jameson's farm. The land being rapidly taken up, John Jameson, the oldest son, established himself on a farm two miles further north. The children were all married except Marmaduke, the third son, who passed his summers on a farm in Mercer Co., Pa., and having stored his gathered crops he took his horses and drove to Westmoreland Co. and spent the winter months in the families of his brothers.

Frances Jameson, the youngest of the sons, served through the War of the Revolution. Subsequently with his wife and family, in company with his brothers-in-law McCartney and Kligore and their families, he removed to some place in Kentucky and was not much heard from afterward. It happened, however, during the War of 1812, that James and Robert, sons of Robert Jameson, John and Benjamin, sons of John Jameson, a son of Francis Jameson, and a son of Mr. Kilgore, the two last from Kentucky, all being soldiers in the army, these six cousins met at Fort Meigs, Ohio, and discovered their relationship.

MR. JAMESON, when a young man, went from his home in Ohio to St. Louis, Mo., and after gaining some knowledge and experience in the dry-goods business he started a store in company with Amos Cotting, who subsequently married his sister, Elizabeth Jameson. Messrs. Jameson and Cotting were very successful in their business, and shortly after the close of the War for the Union they went to New York city with about a million dollars each, and entered the banking business. In this they were also very successful, and at the time of his death Mr. Jameson was many times a millionaire. Mr. Cotting, his brother-in-law and partner died, and Mr. Jameson felt his death wery succh, and did not long survive him. His death was sudden, and universally lamented in Wall street among his business friends, as well as among his family relatives.

Mr. Jameson was a man of sterling qualities of character, quiet and retiring in his disposition, without any political aspirations, and devotedly attached to his home and kindred. In business he was energetic, far-sighted, and industrious in his habits from early life to its close.

Minor Story Jameson, the youngest son, graduated in the class of 1896 from the School of Technology, of Boston, Mass.

TRADITIONAL.

There is a vague and shadowy story told and repeated as a family tradition by different ones, which runs something as follows:

"There was one of our ancestors, presumably the first of our line, who came to this country in the early days, who had left behind in the old country a lady whom he was to wed. This lady is said to have been of high degree. By an understanding between these two, the lady came over in a ship to join her lover here; whether against her parents wishes or not, does not seem to have come down to us, possibly not.

"Her presence on the ship was indicated by waving her handkerchief. No doubt her lover awaited the arrival of each ship, watching for this signal from the shore. At any rate, the tradition has it that they found each other and were straightway married then and there."

James Jameson. His parentage and birthplace are unknown. He married Margaret — . They resided in St. Anne's Parish, Essex Co., Va. Mr. Jameson died in 1736.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

THOMAS [737], d. 1768. JAMES [738], b. 1720; m. 1742, Mary Gaines; d. Dec. 6, 1766. DAVID [739], m. Mildred Smith; d. 1793.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was doubtless of Scotch lineage. His ancestors, it is said, were engaged in trade with the colonies, in which he also may have been interested, for there is found in the Diary of Rev. William Homes of Chilmark, Martha's Vineyard, the following record: "November 3ª 1717 John McClellan and Tames Tamison came to my house . . . this Lords day." And it may have been that his ship was lying at anchor, over Sunday, at Homes Hole, on her way from Scotland to Virginia. Mr. Jameson may have been the son of James [1] and Sarah Jameson of Boston, Mass., "born 22:10 month" and baptized "28 day 10 mo. 1751," of whom there appears no further record, who may have found his way to Virginia. Or he may have been the son of a James Jameson [554] whose death it is said occurred Jan. 17, 1720, in Middlesex Co., Va.

Mr. Jameson and wife Margaret, according to record, resided in the Parish of St. Anne, which was established in 1692, County of Essex, Colony of Virginia. They gave a deed conveying fifty acres of land to Thomas Short, which was admitted to record May 17, 1720, Margaret Jameson freely relinquishing her right of dower in said land the same day.

JAMES JAMESON, Samuel Sally, and Elizabeth Gray, Jan. 5, 1721, witnessed the last will and testament of Thomas Ayres, the great-grandfather of Samuel Ayres who married Dorothea Graham Jameson [769].

MRS. JAMESON probably died before her husband, as no mention is made of her in his will, which was dated April 19, 1736, proved Nov. 17, 1736, and reads as follows:

"In the Name of God Amen: I, James Jameson, being sick and weak, but of sound and perfect memory, do make, constitute and ordain this my last Will and Testament in manner following:

"Imp. I give and bequeath to my son James the land I bought of Richard Coleman, lying in King & Queen County

"Rem. I leave ten pounds current money to my son David and one Goldring with a stone to Mrs. Eleanor Roy: and will that all the remainder of, my Estate of what kind soever be Equally divided amongst my beloved sons, Thomas James and David. Appointing the Rew Kobert Rose, M'Daniel Gaines, Mungo Roy & my said son James, Exr. of this my James James

The inventory and appraisement of his estate were made Nov. 17, 1736, by commissioners appointed, Daniel Gaines, Thomas Short, and Charles Sharp, and admitted to record May 17, 1737. James Jameson, the son named as one of the executors, being a minor, John Vawter was appointed in his place until he should become of age. Rev. Robert Rose became the guardian of James Jameson and Thomas Jameson the guardian of David Jameson, during their minority, and filed their bonds of £1,000 each Dec. 18, 1737.

HARRISON SOUTHWORTH, Esq., in 1897 clerk of the circuit and county courts of Essex Co., Tappahannock, Va., makes the following statement: "The Records of Deeds and Wills go back to 1656; Orders of Courts go back to 1683; but there are no records of births, marriages, and deaths prior to 1853." He states further that he has searched the records in that office from 1707 to 1741, and a summary of all Jameson items is as follows:

"James Jameson qualified as constable Dec. 17, 1717; James Jameson sued Mary Quarlis in 1717; James Jameson of St. Anné's Parish made a deed to Thomas Short for 50 acres of land, and the same was acknowledged by Margaret, his wife, May 17, 1720; James Jameson vs. Jno. Hawkins, suit in 1721 for Trespass and Assault; Thomas Jameson in 1737 allowed compensation as witness in court; James Jameson's will, dated and probated in 1736, mentions sons Thomas, James, and David; Thomas Jameson qualified as guardian of David Jameson in 173."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON is mentioned in Thomas Walker's Journal of 1750 as "Capt. Jemyson near Panther Gap." This place is in Rockbridge Co., Va.

MR. JAMESON, in 1737, gave bonds as guardian of his youngest brother. David Jameson [739]. Capt. Jameson must have died between Thursday, Nov. 26. 1767, on which day he witnessed some transaction on record, and the following July 28, 1768, when his son Thomas Jameson was granted letters of administration on his father's estate. The estate was appraised Sept. 24, 1772, by William Pannell, Wm.

Bronaugh, and Uriel Mallory.

Capt. Jameson, it appears, must have been a resident, for a time, of Orange Co., Va. Little is known of him beyond his military standing as a captain, socially he is styled "gentleman," and held the office of a justice of the peace. May 26, 1757, the commissioners who appraised the estate of Jeremiah Morton were sworn by Capt. Jameson, gentleman.

"WILLIAM JAMESON, orphan of Thomas Jameson deceased, being above the age of 14, March 23, 1769, chose his brother, Thomas Jameson, his guardian, Toliver Craig, jun., Security."

The above record refers doubtless to the youngest son of Mr. Jameson, William Jameson [745], who was a soldier, or an officer, in the army of the Revolution with his older brother Col. John Jameson [743], and testified at the trial of one Smith, in connection with Arnold's treason and the capture of André.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was not of age when his father died in 1736, and Rev. Robert Rose, one of the executors of his father's will, was appointed his guardian during his minority. Mr. Jameson died in the meridian of his manhood.

Mrs. Jameson's father, Daniel Gaines, was one of the commissioners to appraise the estate of James Jameson, her husband's father, and also one of the executors of his will in 1746. Daniel Gaines, whose will was recorded July 18, 1757, bequeaths a negro girl to his granddaughter, Martha Jameson.

Mrs. Jameson had a brother, Bernard Gaines, who married Sarah Ayres, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Scott) Ayres, and sister to William Ayres, whose son Samuel Ayres married Dorothy Graham Jameson [769], daughter of Thomas and Mary (Robinson) Jameson.

The above Thomas Ayres, Samuel Ayres's grandfather, died in 1755, leaving a widow and a large family of children, of whom William was the oldest of some ten or twelve. Scarcely had two years elapsed when the widow and mother of these many children married again. Her second husband was John Boulware. And it is to Mrs. Mary (Ayres) Boulware née Scott, i. e., to his wife's mother, that Bernard Gaines writes a letter, dated "January vi 20th 170" in which he says:

"I have sent by William Gaines, my son Daniel to go to scoole, for I cant get him to school here." He adds also, "I have sent down a horse for Peggy to ride to my house, and nothing will give me more pleasure than to see some of them there."

She was born in 1733, in Yorktown, Va., where they resided. Lieut. Gov. Jameson died in 1793. Mrs. Jameson died Dec. 10, 1778.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON it is said graduated from Princeton College, N. J. He established himself in business as a merchant, and was a prominent citizen of Yo.ktown, and favorably known throughout the state of Virginia. He was made in 1777, one of the privy council, in 1780-1 he was Lieutenant-Governor of the commonwealth in the administration of Gov. Thomas Nelson, and in 1783 he was a member of the state senate.

LIEUT. GOV. JAMESON was the first person in Virginia, and probably in America, to invent and use a rain-gauge, by which he measured the rain-fall for the entire year. Among recorded transactions are the following:—Under date of Nov. 10, 1775, David Jameson, of the town and county of York, Va., gentleman, and Mildred, his wife, gave a deed to Charles Mennis, of the town and county aforesaid; under date of Sept. 1, 1792. David Jameson of Yorktown, sells negroes to Dorothea Graham Jameson and Thomas Jameson, children of Thomas Jameson [747] deceased, late of Yorktown, Va.

Lieut. Gov. David Jameson made his will Oct. 14, 1792, and to it added a codicil May 21, 1793, and the instrument was probated July 22, 1793, so that his death must have occurred between the last two dates.

His will reads as follows:

"IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN. I, David Jameson of York Town, being of sound mind, but at present of indifferent health, do make, constitute and appoint this my last will and Testament. I give and bequeath unto my Nephew John Jameson one moiety of my estate both real and personal of which I may die, possessed of, to him the said John and his Heirs forever.

"I give the other moiety of my Estate that I may die possessed of both real and personal to be equally divided between my nephews, David Jameson of Culpeper & David Jameson of Caroline county, to them & to their Heirs forever.

"Witness my hand and seal this 14th day of October, 1792.

Signed.

"Memo. On the 21st of May 1703 Mr. David Jameson of York desired me to add by way of Codicile to his will, that Cupid & Frank, two of his slaves, should at his decease be Emancipated, the last mentioned to be bound out to some trade of the Administrators of his Will, cipated, the last mentioned to be bound out to some trade of the storm.

and that Grace a Girl at present about the House should be given to Mrs. Mary Mennis.

WM. REYNOLDS."

Mrs. Jameson was a granddaughter of Col. Lawrence and Mildred (Chisman) Smith, and received her grandmother's Christian name, and as a descendant of the Martians and Reades of Yorktown, Va., she was of the kinship of George Washington. Mrs. Jameson died in her forty-sixth year, and was buried in what was known as "Temple Field," and later as Temple Farm. Her tombstone has the Jameson arms impaled with the arms of Smith, and the following inscription:

> " Underneath this marble lies the Body of MILDRED JAMESON Wife of David Jameson, and Daughter of Edmund and Agnes Smith of York County She departed this Life the 10th Day of December, 1778, in the Forty-sixth Year of her Age."

The arms on the tombstone above mentioned are dexter: Az a saltire cantoned with four ships under sail or: Az a chevron between three acorns slipped and leaved or.

The dexter corresponds in Burke to the Jameson arms of Scotland, and the sinister to the Smith arms of Tottness, Devonshire, England.

YORKTOWN, VA., prior to the Revolution, had a high social and religious standing. Some one writes as follows of the place: "We learn that before and sometime after the Revolution there was one of the most delightful societies to be found, consisting of Amblers, Archers, Gibbons, Jamiesons. . . . These, with other families of the place and from the country around filled the Episcopal church in York and formed a happy and undivided society. During the war all fled who could; some did not return, or only returned to bid adieu to its ruins. . one interesting and venerable establishment in the vicinity of York which deserves notice. It is called TEMPLE FARM.

"It was in the mansion house on this farm that Cornwallis met Washington and signed the articles of capitulation." "It may be said, without fear of contradiction. that there is not, on all the York river, a more picturesque spot than Temple Farm," which is located about a mile and a half below Yorktown.

Mrs. Jameson was buried in the very field which became, three years later, the scene of a bloody conflict between the forces of Lord Cornwallis and those of Washington, and here, Oct. 19, 1781, was one of the most decisive victories of the American colonies. The surrender of Cornwallis is presented in this picture, copied from a painting by Col. John Trumbull, son of Gen. Trumbull of Connecticut, the historical painter of the Revolution. This was sketched by him in 1791.

TEMPLE FARM received its name from Rev. Peter Temple, who occupied it at the time of its transfer to the Smiths. Robert Smith in 1768 estimated its acreage at 500 acres. Since the Revolution this historic farm has had many owners down to a recent date. May 5, 1881, it was deeded to the Yorktown Centennial Association, and is well worthy of preservation for its history.

Mrs. Jameson's father, Edmund Smith, died in 1750 in Yorktown, Va., and his son, her brother, apprenticed himself June 15, 1753, to David Jameson, "To Learn the art of Merchandize and book-keeping.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, July 28, 1768, was granted letters of administration on his father's setate, and the following March 23, 1769, he was chosen by his youngest bother William, then over fourteen years of age, for his guardian. He was commissioned Feb. 25, 1773, ensign of militia, and was one of the two hundred and sixty-eight persons of the most respectable families who subscribed to an oath of allegiance to the Commonwealth of Virginia, renouncing allegiance to George the III, early in the history of determined resistance of the American colonists to British oppression.

Mr. Jameson purchased, on the first day they were for sale, land office treasury warrants for twenty-five hundred acres of land, which he located May 9, 1780, or entered, the clerk recording his name limmerson, a little north of Mt. Sterling, Montgomery Co., Ky. Adjacent, or in this vicinity, at the same time, his uncle, David Jameson, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, located thirty-five hundred acres, which, with two thousand acres belonging to John Gore, Esq., and fourteen hundred acres the property of Mr. Enoch Smith, all together making a total of nine thousand and five hundred acres on and near Mt. Sterling, of as finely located and as fertile and productive as any tract of land of the same size to be found in the state of Kentucky, and perhaps in the whole territory of the United Colonies. In 1782 Mr. Jameson removed from Culpeper, Va., to his new landed possessions in Montgomery Co., Ky. Twenty years later, in 1802, he erected a substantial brick dwelling-house about three miles to the north of Mt. Sterling, overlooking a beautiful reach of country which is traversed by a small stream called Hinkston creek. The house was not far from the battle-field of Estill's defeat, March 22, 1782. It has remained in the family until the recent date of Nov., 1894, and it is still occupied as a dwelling house.

Mr. Jameson was buried near Mt. Sterling, Montgomery Co., Ky., and his tombstone now, 1900, standing, is inscribed as follows:

"Thomas Jameson, Sen., emigrated from Culpeper C. H., Va., 1782. Died Aug. 14, 1827, aged 84 years."

Mrs. Jameson was a sister of Mrs. James Jameson [740], and a granddaughter of Samuel Ball, who was a kinsman of Mrs. Mary (Ball) Washington, whose son, the eldest of her six children, was George Washington.

Sept. 29, 1830; m. Oct. 10, 1867 Jane Bethune Craig.

EDMUND WALLER, Mrs. Hawkins's father, was a descendant of Edmund Waller, the English poet, who was born, 1605, in Coleshill, Warwickshire, and died 1667, in Beaconsfield, England. Mrs. Hawkins's mother was of French Huguenot descent, and born in Westmoreland, Va.

CHARLES WALLER, a brother of Mrs. Hawkins, was an immigrant to this country. JOHN PARKER HAWKINS, the youngest son of John and Elizabeth (Waller) Hawkins, married Jane Bethune Craig, the daughter of Gen. Henry K. and Maria (Bethune) Craig. She was born Sept. 13, 1831, in the Watertown Arsenal, Watertown, Mass. They resided in the United States army until his retirement from service in 1892. Since then they have spent some time in foreign lands, and now reside at 1408 Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Their only child, Louisa Craig, was born in 1870, and died the same year.

JOHN PARKER HAWKINS graduated in 1852 from the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, and assigned to the infantry. He was promoted Oct. 12, 1857, to first lieutenant, and served on the Indian frontier. When the War of the Rebellion broke out, he was made brigade quartermaster of the defence of Washington, D. C. He was appointed, Aug. 3, 1861, commissary of subsistence, with staff rank of captain, and April 13, 1863, was made brigadier-general of volunteers. From Aug. 17, 1863, to Feb. 7, 1864, he was in command of a brigade of colored troops in Louisiana. General Hawkins became commissary general of the United States army in 1892. He was placed on the retired list by the following general order:

GENERAL ORDERS.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY. ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, September 29, 1894.

The following has been received from the War Department:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, September 29, 1894. By direction of the President, the retirement from active service this day, by operation of law, of Brigadier General John P. Hawkins, Commissary General of Sub-istence and Brevet Major General, U. S. Army, under the provisions of the act of June 30, 1882, is announced. General Howkins was graduated at the Military Academy in 1822, and served upon the Indian frontier from that time till the outbreak of the late war. For a short period in 1861 he was with General Patterson's army in Pennsylvania and Virginia, and immediately thereafter with General MeDowell's army in the first Bull Run campaign, and while with it received commendation for distinguished service. Transferred to the West, he served with the local rank of lieutenant colonel, as Chief Commissary of Subsistence, first of the 13th Corps, and later of the army commanded by General Grant, on the staff of that general in both capacities, and was engaged in the battle of Shiloh and in the early operations at Vicksburg. Appointed brigadier general in 1863, he succeeded to the command of a division the following year. He was engaged in the campaign of Mobile and also in the storming of Blakely, in which the troops under his command bore a conspicuous and gallant part. He received the brevets of major for gallant and meritorious services during the siege of Mobile, Alabama, and of lieutenant colonel, colonel, brigadier general, major general, and also major general of volunteers, for gallant and meritorious services during the rebellion. After long service which carried him to every portion of the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the British boundary to the frontier of Mexico, he became Commissary General of Subsistence with the rank of brigadier general in December, 1892.

Correct in all the relations of life, dignified and modest in deportment, of sterling character, an able officer and gallant soldier, the honors which have come to him in his profession have been worthily bestowed.

DANIEL S. LAMONT, Secretary of War.

General Hawkins will repair to his home. The travel enjoined is necessary for the public

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a graduate of William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., the oldest college in the country, except Harvard. It was chartered Feb. 8, 1692.

He was appointed clerk of the court in Culpeper Co., Va. This county was formed in 1748 from Orange Co., and named for Lord Culpeper, who was governor of Virginia from 1680 to 1683

Colonel Jameson held this office of clerk of the court for thirty-eight years until his death, in 1810. He inherited by will one half of Lieut. Gov. David Jameson's estate, being his uncle's favorite nephew. He belonged to a distinguished Virginian family. While his course has been severely criticised in relation to sending André to Arnold, with regard to "The honesty of his purpose and the military propriety of his action there has never been any question."

Colonel Jameson acknowledged his mistake in a letter to Washington, dated Sept.

27, 1780:

"I am very sorry that I wrote to General Arnold. I did not think of a British ship being up the river, and expected, that if he was the man he has since turned out to be, he would come down to the troops in this quarter, in which case I should have held him.

Mr. Jameson was doubtless a leading spirit among those famous Culpeper minutemen. Culpeper was distinguished early in the War of the Revolution for the services of her gallant who, as John Randolph said in the U. S. Senate, "were raised in a minute, armed in a minute, fought in a minute, and vanguished in a minute,"

These were the first soldiers raised in Virginia. The flag used by the Culpeper men was inscribed as follows: The head of the snake was for Virginia and the twelve rattles were for the other twelve states. This corps was dressed in green hunting shirts, and were called by their enemies contemptuously, "The Shirtmen." The words "Liberty or Death" were in large letters on their bosoms.

They wore in their hats buck tails, and in their belts tomahawks and scalping knives. Their savage, warlike appearance excited the terror of the inhabitants as they marched through the country to Williamsburg.

Those armed with rifles, 150 of them, marched into Norfolk Co., and were engaged in the battle of Great Bridge, near Dismal Swamp, Dec. 9, 1775, between Lord Dunmore's band of British and Tories, and Col. Woodford, leading 300 Colonial soldiers.

Dunmore was defeated with the loss of 100 men; Woodford sustained no loss. LEUT. COL. JOHN JAMESON was, it is said, "a very fine looking man, six feet tall, black hair, blue eyes, remarkably fair." This is the description that has come down to us of his personal appearance

Mr. Jameson was elected June 13, 1776, by the Virginia Convention, captain of the Third Troop of Horse. He had six competitors for the position, and received fortyeight vote, while his competitors received respectively 17, 15, 9, 4, 3, 2 votes. One of his competitors was Henry Lee. He took command June 16, 1776, as captain in a Virginia regiment of dragoons; promoted March 31, 1777, major 1st Continental Dragoons, and transferred April 7, 1777, to 2d Continental Dragoons. He was wounded Jan, 21, 1778, near Valley Forge; was commissioned lieutenant-colonel

Aug. 1, 1779, and served to the close of the war.

Col. Jameson was in command of a regiment under Arnold, and some of his men captured André near Tarrytown, about the time that Arnold made his escape to the British fleet, and he has been severely blamed by historians for what he did in relation to the capture of André; but Brigadier-General John P. Hawkins, late commissary-general of subsistence and brevet major-general of the U. S. army, writes under date of 1897 :

"But it seems to me that Jameson showed only that he was not suspicious of Arnold, his The first enems to me that Jameson showed only that new an ort suspicious of Armold, his commanding officer, and that like a true soldier he had no thought of calling in question the act of his commanding officer, whom he doubtless thought within his rights." And he con-tinues, "Col. Jameson was a man who had a high standing in Virginia, both before and after the war. He must have shown himself to be a good soldier or he would not subsequently have been transferred with increased rank to the Continental line."

COL. JOHN JAMESON, 1751-1810.

Gen. Hawkins's estimate of Col. Jameson's conduct in the affair of André ought to correct the mistake of the historian, as the judgment of a distinguished military man, confirmed as it is by the fact that Col. Jameson was advanced in the line of military promotion soon after this occurrence

Col. John Jameson was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, in Virginia, and was present at their meeting held Dec. 13, 1802, in Richmond, Va., when it was voted to appropriate some of their funds, to the amount of $25,-000, to found Washington Col-

He was a member of the same Masonic Lodge in Alexandria as Washington

MAJOR JAMESON of Virginia referred to freely in the Fournal of Sally Wister was doubtless later Col. John Jameson.

PHILIP LIGHTFOOT JAMESON [791] of Culpeper, the grandson and only surviving de-scendant of Col. Jameson writes, "I am quite sure he was a graduate of William and Mary College." Mrs. Rachel Jameson's mother, Mrs.

Sarah (Fish) Berrim, was of the same family as Hon. Hamilton Fish. Gen. Hawkins restates what he had before written under date of June 25, 1900.

He writes:

"I do not think that history has treated Jameson justly; great blame has been attached to him for sending André and the papers to Arnold, but as a good military man he was faithful to his commanding officer, and was naturally not suspicious of his conduct. Jameson was a gullant soldier. The archives of the American Revolution give the vote by which he was elected to the captaincy in the cavalry company. Henry Lee was one of his competitors.

A tomb of stone, suitably inscribed, marks the grave of Col. Jameson located on his farm two miles north of Culpeper, Va.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a Revolutionary soldier. "He fought in the battle of Great Bridge, Dec. 9, 1775, and served in the southern states in Stevens' brigade in 1780, 1781. In 1790, 1791 he was a delegate to the Virginia legislature, and was afterward a magistrate and high sheriff of Culpeper Co., Va."

"He was also an officer in the Revolution and did great service in the Virginia militia." He was known as Col. Jameson.

A granddaughter, now living in Boston, Va., has a distinct remembrance of him, as he seemed to her in her girlhood, "a man of handsome face, fine physique, and elegant apparel, dressing in the English style, knee pants, silk hose, knee- and shoe-buckles. Clothing as well as furniture imported from London, England." He inherited one fourth part of the large estate of his uncle, Lieut. Gov. David Jameson of Yorktown, Va., while his older brother, Col. John Jameson, inherited one half, and his cousin, David Jameson of Port Royal, Caroline Co., Va., inherited the other one fourth of the same estate.

THOMAS JAMESON, the oldest son, was a physician. His father gave him a valuable farm near Bowling Green, Ky., to which he removed. Dr. Jameson was never married, and died at the age of thirty-eight years. After his death his property was never recovered by his friends.

DAVID JAMESON, the second son, was a lawyer, died at the age of twenty-eight years, while the youngest son died in infancy, leaving George Washington Jameson sole heir to inherit his father's wealth.

But as the granddaughter writes:

"All of which was nearly squandered at his death at the age of forty-seven years, leaving his wife a widow with nine children. The elegant farms surrounding historic old Culpeper were sarrificed, numerous slaves had to be supported until the Rebellion. They were well cared for and many of them parted tearfully. I rejoice in their freedom; most of the race are making independent fortunes and doing much better than some of the whites."

Obituary. Published 1839.

Died, at his residence in the county of Culpeper, Va., on the second day of October, 1839, Col. David Jameson, in the 88th year of his age.

The eventful times through which he lived and the part he acted in some of the occurrences of those times make it an act of justice to notice them in this obituary memoir.

The 20th of April, 1775, is memorable in the revolutionary annals of Virginia by the seizure of the guspowder in Williamsburg by Lord Dunmore, at that period governor of the colony, News of this act of executive usurpation reached Culpeper county, 170 miles distant from the theatre of the outrage, on the evening of the 25th day of April of that year. The independent companies acted voluntarily, but organized by the committee of safety for the county, then commanded by Edward Stevens and John Green, were on the heights of Fredericksburg, a distance of forty miles, early in the morning of the 27th of April, in full march to the seat of government, the abode of Dunmore and the theatre of executive outrage, to make reprisal for this wrong.

In these companies David Jameson, then a young man, was an officer, and to him was entrusted the duty of standard bearer of that celetrated flag bearing as its emblem the rattle-snake in his coil, with the monitory motto, "Don't tread on me!" At Fredericksburg they found others assemblied by the perils of the times and the anxiety which the pervading alarm had awakened. They were then dissuaded from further pursuit of Dummore by the councils of an assembly of many of the most wise and patriotic of the colony, and they were particularly influenced by the letter of Peyton Randolph, late speaker of the general assembly, borne to them by the estimable and enlightened burgess from Spotsylvania, the late Mann Page of Mansfield, and in which they were assured that further military pursuit for satisfaction would thwart and frustrate a pacific negotiation then in progress with the royal governor. They did not, however, return to their homes until they uttered a noble and fierce address to their countrymen, breathing indeepnednee of all usurped authority and defance to all its actors, aiders, and abettors. This address bore date, Saturday, the 29th of April, 1775; and the movement of these firm and fearless men, though one hundred miles more removed from the scene of action, was six days in advance of that made on the 2d day of May by Patrick Henry and his gallant associates.

The next military movement in the colony was the assemblage and march of the Culpeper minute battalion, united with those from Fauquier and Orange counties, in September, 1775. David Jameson and his brother, John, were again in this heroic band, and both were chosen to command in that battalion

Early in December a part of this force, under the command of Colonel Stevens and Major Thomas Marshall, were posted for duty at the Great Ridge, near Norfolk, and fought this distinguished courage and signal success that first battle with the enemy, at daybreak, the 9th of December, when Fordyce fell and Leslie was wounded. In this battle the courage of David Jameson and that of his brother was conspicuous. Following this victory they moved into Norfolk, carrying dismay to the enemy, and fought, under the intrepid Stevens, the bloody fight at the water's edge on the morning of the 1st of January, 1730.

bloody fight at the water's edge on the morning of the 1st of January, 1776.

An accomplished historian, Gerardin, writing under the eye of Jefferson and with free access to his full and faithful documents, says of this affair: "The intrepid Stevens, of whose officers Janeson was one, still added to his fame. At the head of his hardy, indefatigable, and irresistible band he rushed with the rapidity of lightning to the water side, struck a large party of British who had just landed there, and compelled them to retire with slaughter are dismay to the protection of their wooden walls.

These actions were demonstrations of voluntary valor and patriotism, conducted by that American spirit which at that early period stood up in the stead of an organic and established government. What followed was under the system that necessity created and molded into form and gave to it the sanction of enacted law.

In the military forces raised by act of assembly or ordinance of convention the elder brother, John Jameson, received a distinguished command with its accessions by promotion to the close of the war. They could not both leave the county, of which John was the clerk, and David Jameson renained to perform these more peaceful and equally useful duties. He was, however, frequently out with the militia, and in the years 1780 and 1781 performed an eighteen months' tour in the southern states in the capacity of lieutenant in the brigade of Stevens.

After the war terminated, Colonel Jameson devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, discharging with faithful ability the useful functions of county magistrate, and devoting a large

He was himself, though without the aid and discipline of early education, a chaste and accurate writer of good English; that good and chaste English which Addison wrote, and which he learned from the pure and classic pages of this his accomplished model.

Colonel Jameson removed to that part of the commonwealth that was distinguished by the sharpest conflicts in the ratification of the present constitution of the United States. He acted a manly and efficient part in those contests, giving to Mr. Madison in the popular controversies an aid so marked as to call forth the acknowledgments of that virtuous, just, and troverties an aut so manage as of can be a season was a delegate for the county of Culpeper to he legislature of Virginia, and in that service he illustrated his own merits, and approved the selection of his county by a wise, steady, and able execution of the trust which he had assumed.

When he abandoned political life he still continued in that active sphere of useful labors which lay before him in the office of justice of the peace in the country and the court to which these labors appertain. Large as these duties are to the country magistrate, and blending in their execution legislative and judicial powers to some extent, the subject of this sketch was universally acknowledged to be one of the most efficient magistrates in Virginia.

In all criminal trials, and particularly when the county courts are judges in the last resort, he administered justice and rendered judgment in that clear and firm and benignant spirit of mercy and of law which is the guard, the ornament, and the support of its wide and salutary administration.

The latter years of his life were distinguished by an apathy of spirit that was not congenial with the anxieties of his constitutional intensity and ardor. From this state he was aroused by the interest he felt and took in the first election of General Jackson to the chief magistracy. But so great was his disappointment in the measures of that illustrious man when raised to power that he seemed for a while more than anxious for his removal, and defeated in this, he returned to that state of indifference to political events which for a time he left, increased by the results of disappointment and despondency.

Colonel Jameson had by continuous service as a magistrate twice reached the office of high sheriff of his county, and the ability, fidelity, and dignity which marked his service in office leaves a benefaction to the community, both in the service itself and in the example it.

He was a good soldier in war and a good citizen in peace. Faithful to the duties of a Christian and a magistrate, he leaves at his death a reputation without a blemish, which the memory will hold in just and grateful recollection.

Colonel and Mrs. \bar{J} ameson lie buried side by side on his old homestead in Culpeper, Va.

Martha Jameson (52005; 270005), daughter of James [738] and Mary (Gaines) Jameson, was born June 13, 1743; in Liberty Hall, Essex Co., Va. She married Francis Meriwether, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Thornton) Meriwether. He was born Oct. 31, 1737; in Louisa Co., Va. They removed about 1785 to Georgia. Mrs. Meriwether died in 1818.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

THOMAS, b. Dec. 20, 1761; m. Rebecce Mathews. MARCARET, m. Dr. Yohn Bradley.

MARY, m. William Barnett.

LUCY, m. Groove Howard.

ELEABETH, m. William Mathews.

MILIBRED, m. Yoll Barnett.

NICHOLAS, m. Mary de Gamfert.

Memoranda.

MR. MERIWETHER was of English or Welsh descent. His great-grandfather, Nicholas Meriwether, son of Nicholas Meriwether who died in England or Wales, Dec. 19, 1678, came with two brothers, Francis and David Meriwether, to America at an early day.

Mr. Meriwether was a student in William and Mary College. He then studied medicine, intending to complete his medical education in Edinboro, but the war between England and France prevented. He removed about 1785 to Georgia, where he was greatly esteemed by reason of his life of benevolence and usefulness. While not professionally a practising physician, he did a great deal for the sick, giving his money freely for medicines, and devoting his time in attendance upon the suffering without charge.

Mr. Meriwether's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth (Thornton) Meriwether, was a sister to Mildred Thornton, who married Charles Washington, a brother of Gen. George

Augustus and Mary (Ball) Washington had five children, viz.: George, m. Mrs. Martha (Dandridge) Custis; Charles, m. Mildred Thornton; Samuel, m. 1 Jane Campe, m. 2 Mildred Gregory; Betly, m. as second wife of Col. Fielding Lewis, whose first wife was Catherine Washington, a cousin to his second wife, Betty Washington; Mildred.

Mr. Mernwettier's eldest son, Thomas Meriwether, married Rebecca Mathews, daughter of Governor Mathews of Georgia. She was a woman of admirable virtues. Their eldest daughter, Anne, married Col. Fleming Jordan, a descendant of the Indian Princess Pocahontas. The other children were, Frank, George, David, and Mary Gaines.

Valentine Meriwether, second son of Francis and Martha (Jameson) Meriwether, married Barbara Minor Crosby. They had five daughters and two sons. Industrious and successful Southern planter. The cotton he raised was of superior quality and commanded in the market a half cent the pound higher than other cotton.

MAKY MERINETRER, the eldest daughter, married William Barnett, son of Nathaniel and Susannah (Crawford) Barnett. He was born in Rockfish, near Nelson Co., Va., and went in early life with his parents to Georgia, where he became a prominent citizen. He was an officer under Marquis de Latayette, president of the state senate of Georgia, and for some years a member of the 12th and 15th congresses of the United States. He was a cousin, as was also Joel Barnett, of the distinguished statesman, William H. Crawford of Georgia, Hon. William Barnett was appointed a member of the commission of 1815 to establish the boundaries of the Creek Indian Reservation. They had six children, viz.: Martha Fameson, m. Francis Meriwether Gilmer; Thomas Meriwether, m. Margaret Micon; Vadhauled, m. — Hudson; Mary, m. David Taliaferro; Liney.

m. Geo. E. Mathews; Frances, m. Isaac Ross.

ELIZABETH MERIWETHER married William Mathews, a son of Governor Mathews of Georgia, and a brother of Mrs. Thomas Meriwether. She was a most excellent woman. They had five children: Annie, m. Nicholas Marks; George Elbert, m. Lucy Barnett; Frank, m. Sarah Burgin; Charles L.; Samuel B.

MILIDRED MERIUSTHER was the second wife of Joel Barnett, his first wife being Elizabeth Crawford. He was a brother of William Barnett, who married Mildred's eldest sister, Mary Meriwether, and cousin of Hon. William H. Crawford. He was a famous soldier and partisan in the struggle for independence. They had four children. He lived to be ninety years of age, and was worth $15,000.

There were four other daughters of Francis and Martha (Jameson) Meriwether, and a third son, Nicholas, who married Mary De Gampert.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Meriwether resided in Montgomery, Ala. They had six children, viz.:

James B., m. Sophia Taliaferro; Thomas, m. Matilda Baldwin; George M., m. Sophia Flating particles; Cherles Lewis, m. Fannie Baldwin; Nicholas, m. Mrs. Susan Hazzard; William, m. Clara Baldwin.

Thomas *Jameson (*Jameso, *Jameso, *), son of James [738] and Mary (Gaines) Jameson, was born July 17, 1745, in Liberty Hall, Essex Co., Va. He married, 1767, *Mary Robinson, daughter of Rev. Thomas and Edith (Tyler) Robinson. She was born 1749. They resided in Yorktown, Va. Mr. Jameson died Jan., 1770. Mrs. Jameson died in 1771.

THE CHILDREN WERE:

DOROTHEA G. [769], b. July 27, 1768; m. Oct. 3, 1792, Samuel Ayres; d. April 18, 1848. Тиомая Robinson [770], b. 1769; m. 1792, Mary Samuel; d. 1805. George [777], b. 1771. He died in infancy, 1771.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a merchant and died at an early age. The event was announced as follows: "Thomas Jameson, merchant of Yorktown, died January, 1770." Mrs. Jameson died very soon after her husband. Her will was proved Aug. 19, 1771. The two surviving children, upon their mother's death, went to live with their grand-mother, Mrs. Robinson. Rev. Thomas Robinson, Mrs. Jameson's father, was master of the grammar school and professor of Latin, Greek, and commissary in the William and Mary College. Williamsburg, Va.

Mrs. Jameson mentions in her will her mother, Editha Robinson, and speaks of her children, but does not give their names. Will proved Aug. 19, 1771.

Mrs. Edith (Tyler) Robinson was a daughter of John Tyler, of James City Co., Va. John Tyler, her brother, was marshal of the Vice-Admiralty court. His son, Judge John Tyler, was speaker of the house of delegates of Virginia during the Revolution, and governor of Virginia from 1808 to 1811; and Gov. John Tyler's son was president of the United States, 1841-1845.

Mrs. Robinson's parents were John and Elizabeth Tyler, of James City Co., Va. She had a sister, Mary Tyler, who married Rev. William Preston, another professor in the college. Their great-grandson, Rev. Charles M. Preston, is now a minister in Warcop, Yorkshire, England. Mrs. Robinson, it is thought, went to England about the time of Mrs. Jameson's death, and took the children with her. There is this record:

"Power of Atty from Editha Robinson now in Colony of Virginia, but intending shortly to depart from same, to Lewis Tyler. Acknowledged Feb. 19, 1771."

Lewis Tyler was her nephew and a brother of President Tyler. It is thought that David Jameson, an uncle of the two children, went to England and brought them back to America, and they were for a time in his family. When about nineteen years old the daughter Dorothea wrote a letter to her grandmother Robinson, who was still in England. This letter, dated "Virginia, Carolina, May 23, 1757," is still extant in the possession of her grandson, Hon. David Jameson Ayres, No. 509 South Main St., Keokuk, Iowa. There is still preserved a family cross of hair, and with the names of Thomas Robinson and Edith T. Robinson written together. Then lower down is written Mary Robinson Jameson, and still lower down Mary Jameson Ayres.

It is a pathetic fact that, in 1898, Mrs. James A. Semple (Letitia Tyler), a daughter of President John Tyler, who on the death of her mother assumed the duties of the "Lady of the White House," and performed them to the satisfaction of all, should be living on a bare pension of eight dollars a month as her only income, at the age of eighty years, an inmate of the Louise Home, an old ladies' home in Washington, D. C. And she sends a touching appeal to the U. S. senate to consider her case and increase her pension, that it may be equal to her personal necessities.

"Editha Robinson's estate in account with Reuben M. Garnett Adm² appointed Adm² 16 Nov. 1818, on the estate of E. R. and administered by Edmund L. Briggs dec^{ed}. Mentions Dr. Ayers son of Samuel Ayers dec^{ed}. Distributes the debt obtained from Dr. Lyons as Admin¹h of John Robinson dec^d."

Lyon Gardner Tyler, I.L. D., President of William and Mary College, is a son of the late President of the United States, John Tyler, and a great-grand-nephew of Mrs. Edith (Tyler) Robinson, the mother of Mrs. Mary (Robinson) Jameson, the wife of Thomas Jameson [747]. He was born August, 1853, in Charles City Co., Va.; graduated in 1875 from the University of Virginia; married Nov. 14, 1878, Annie, B. Tucker, and in 1888 became president of William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON received a fourth part of the estate of his uncle, Lieut.-Gov. David Jameson, of Yorktown, Va. In his later life he removed to Kentucky. His will was probated in 1812. The following autograph letters are still extant:

This will be handed to you (by) Mr John Broadono, it serves to inform you that we have had a very sick family this fall, at present I am hardly able to keep out of my Bead, tho. I do flatter myself you & my Dear niece are now enjoying that great & inestimable blessing of health.

Diessing or nearm. I am truly sorry to inform you that I cannot get any money for you & you have every reason to expect some this fail. The money from the spéaker Robinson Est, has not as yet been paid, tho am informed it is good, the sum I hope with interest is not less than $\int 600 \, \&$ the pay of money from Judge Tyler, Tommy has not got nor never will, if he does not apply for it & no other can without his giving a power & that you me be assured he never will as he expects you to have a part, without being urged to it.

he expects you to have a part, without being urged to the control of the part of the control of the part of the control of the money you are sure or. 10mmy tor ms own part appears rather inclined not to pay any on this own part appears in the law appears the propert which is strange indeed. I offered him ten per ct. discount for the amt. of his Bond due you, but to no purpose. I do know Wm. Miller & Co. are owing him the amt. of the Bond & would pay it if he would give me an order for it. The first day of November is the day the Bond becomes due & as the distance we are apart think to days would make very little difference of the sum of the pay that the pay is the sum of the pay the p to any man that would wish to pay a debt.

I have neglected to inform you of the death of our poor old Uncle Jameson, he has made a very diff^e will to what I did expect. he has given half of his estate to Col. John Jameson & the other half to David Jameson of Culpeper and myself. I shall set off tomorrow if able to attend his sale as I am one of the ad^{ma} & his having no ext to his will.

You may be assured I shall come to the State of Kentucky, next fall with my family if it pleases God to spare my life—if nothing turns up more than I now expect will come out with Col.

John Hoomes next spring to prepare a place to move to next fall

I have inclosed you a power of attorney to act and do for me relative to some lands wh information I will give you more fully on my return from York. the reason for now sending the power is that I shall write you by the post & by sending the power inclosed will cost a good deal more. I hope that you will not neglect to write me by every opportunity as you may rely that it will at all times give us pleasure to hear from you. Sally has sent out in the case of Garnett some dryed May cherries & a few Damsons. Apphia has sent Dolly flower seeds & roots & I have sent you a few cions of good fruit & some shrubs wh be sure to have set out as I may git from them when I come out.

I shall conclude with desiring you to give my love to my dear niece & be assured I am Dr Your afte friend

DEAR SAMUEL.

DEAR SAMUEL.

I wrote you a few lines by Mr. Taylor at Fredericksburg and to imform you of my family's health, wh' I hope you have rec⁴. I have been in long exp⁶ of getting a letter from you, but have got disappointed have not rec⁴ a serbid of a pen since the letter by Mr. Jed Nocl. I was in great hopes of sending you the Bal. of T. Jameson's Money tho have fallen thro this much I will assure you I will send it by Mr. Jno Samuel or sooner if a safe hand offers. I flatter myself it will be in my power to give you a pleasing acct of the money one from the Speaker Robinson's est. as also from the Honble Ino Tyler's by the Fall, as there is hope of geting it all. I flatter myself I shall have matters so aranged as to permit my coming to your state this fall if health will permit.

We are all in health at present but myself who never will & do not expect ever to enjoy that great Blessing again, tho hope & flatter myself you and my Dear Niece are, as also your family. In a most respectful manner to you & Dr. Dolly my wife joins me in love & hoping once more to see you adieu.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON exected a brick house, in 1809, about a mile south of where his father lived and in full view of the field on his father's farm where a battle was fought, March 22, 1782, and Estill was defeated. In this house Mr. Jameson died, and it is still occupied by the family. The old mantels are unchanged, giving a good idea of the stive of architecture ninety veras ago.

Mr. Jameson's house and that of his father overlooked the Hinkston creek. Mt. Sterling is near the source of that stream and about sixty miles southeast of Frankfort, Ky. It is said that the largest crop of tobacco ever raised in Kentucky was grown on this Jameson land.

ENOCH SMITH, Mrs. Jameson's father, had land cleared in 1775, and in 1776 raised the first crop of corn every raised by a white man in Montgomery Co. His patent began on "the top of a little mountain," on the present site of Mt. Sterling, a single Indian mound. He built a brick house, date unknown, which is now occupied, just outside of Mt. Sterling, Mr. Smith was a brother of Hon. Daniel Smith, one of the Virginia commissioners who ran the boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina, and later was United States senator from Tennessee. Enoch Smith was a son of Henry and Sarah (Crosby) Smith, born June 20, 1750, in Stafford Co., Va. He was an ancestor of Andrew Jackson Donelson and Daniel Smith Donelson of Tennessee.

MR. JAMESON was a man of substantial character. For many years he was a justice of the peace. By occupation a farmer, having abundant means. He died when but forty-seven years of age. A few years later, in 1858, the old homestead dwelling was destroyed by fire, and the family Bible with its valuable records was reduced to ashes. Other important papers which escaped the fire, later were entrusted to a lawyer who undertook to recover large money said to be waiting in the Bank of England for the Jameson family in America, heirs of David Jameson of York. The lawyer became insane, the money was not recovered, and these valuable papers, with many others, were hopelessly lost,

MRS. AYRES was a most charming woman, beautiful in person, cultivated in manners, and lovely in charac-She was greatly beloved by all her kindred and friends while living, and her memory is most fondly cherished by her descendants, The accompanying picture is copied from an oil painting in the possession of her granddaughter, Mrs. Vaughan of Louisville, Ky. Mrs. Ayres, while a girl in her teens, wrote to her grandmother a very interesting letter which is still extant. In this letter she mentions a trunk filled with valuable articles of clothing, etc., which her grandmother, Mrs. Edith (Tyler) Robinson, then in England, had sent to her across the water. Among other valuable things in that trunk were two silk gowns, which are still in existence, and of which the writer has sample pieces.

The letter referred to was as follows:

Mrs. Dorothea Graham (Jameson) Avres. 1768-1848.

Virginia, Caroline, May 23, 1787.

My Dear & Honored Grandmamma:

Your kind and agreeable letter dated May 23, 1786, I did not get until 27 April 1787, the receipt of it you may be assured gave me great satisfaction, tho on reading it, was much affected to hear you were in so low a state of health, I hope with the blessing of God before this date, you have recovered your health, and that this letter will find you enjoying a perfect state of health. The trunk and contents came safe to me, and without being damaged, for which I do most sincerely return you many thanks, be assured my Dear Grandmamma I will take the greatest care imagniable of the clothes and other things you sent me for your sake and my Dear Mamma's. You have put yourself to a great deal of trouble on my account and I am artial the distance we are apart will prevent my ever having it in my power to make you amends. I shall certainly wear the apron, slippers and handkerchiefs with as much pleasure for your sake as you worked them for mine.

The stays fit me very well as also the green silk gown by letting the sleeves out a little. The piece of silk I do not think I shall ever part with, that particularly for your sake I shall keep. I will not part with any of the trinkets that were in the cabinet on any account whatever. I have delivered to my brother the things you sent him, except the teaspoons and them I will deliver when he wants them. I have the locket you sent me some years ago with some of my Dear Papa's & Mamma's hair in it which I intend to keep as long as I live.

The stone ring you sent me I do prize above all things and shall forever keep it as a memorial of you and my Dear Papa and Mama. I hope my dear madam you will not think meso ungrateful as not to thank you for an enty purse, be assured I am not of that disposition, nor would not be for the world. I am very much obliged to you for the Books, they every agreeable companions to me as I am fond of reading and shall obey your last commands to read them with the greatest attention.

You accuse me in not writing to you which I confess was a neglect in me, though not for want of affection, but for the want of not knowing in what manner I could possibly get a letter to you, not knowing where to direct one.

My Dear Grandmammā I must now conclude with informing you I enjoy a perfect state of health, and may God Almighty give you grace while I live you shall not want the prayers of your sincere, affectionate and dutiful Grand Daughter.

Dolly Graham Jameson.

The above is a copy from the original letter, which is in the possession of a grandson, David Jameson Ayres, Esq., of Keokuk, Ia.

DAVID JAMESON AYRES, an uncle of the above just mentioned, and the eldest son of Samuel Ayres, married first Maria Thornton Garnett, the youngest daughter of Reuben and Mary (Jameson) Garnett [751]. Elizabeth Adams, his second wife, was from Boston, Mass., where she died. They resided in Danville, and later in Lexington, Ky. There were no children.

JOHN YEISER, who married Martha T. Ayres, was born in 1799 in Danville, Ky.

There were no children.

Mr. Yeiser had by a previous marriage four children, viz.: John Clark, Daniel Henry, Katherine Samuel, Edwin Philip. VID. No. 773, Memoranda.

Dr. EDMUND HOLLINGSWORTH, who married Melinda Ayres, son of Robert H. and Susanna (Rice) Hollingsworth, was born in 1796 near Winchester, Va. He was a cousin of Dr. John Hollingsworth, who married his wife's younger sister. They resided in Fayette Co., Ky. Dr. Hollingsworth died in 1851 in Greenup Co., Ky. Mrs. Hollingsworth died in 1857 in Frankfort, Ky.

They had three children, viz.: Samuel, b. 1843. He was a bright, talented lad of finen years, prepared to enter college, but in 1858 disappeared from his home near Paris, Kv., and no trace of him was ever found. Mary Dorothea, b. 1847, and Eliza, b. 1849; both died in early childhood.

THOMAS ROBINSON AYRES, the second son of Samuel Ayres, married Sarah Ann Smith, daughter of Nathaniel R. and Margery (Smith) Smith. She was born Jan. 7, 1820, in Robetown, Pa. They resided in Danville, Ky.; removed in 1857 to Lewis Co., Mo., and in 1865 to Keokuk, Ia., where Mr. Ayres died, Oct. 18, 1883, Mrs. Ayres died Oct. 22, 1881, in Mount Pleasant, Ia.

MR. AYRES, after his school days, learned the watchmaker and jewelty business from his father. He devoted his entire life to his chosen business, in which he was an expert in every department. Mr. Ayres, at the age of nineteen years, in 1824, when Lafayette was in this country on his last visit, sketched from life and engraved the accompanying picture, which has a place here as an illustration of his skilful handiwork. While eminently a man of public spirit, he persistently declined to hold any public office.

DAVID JAMESON AYRES, son of Thomas Robinson Jameson Ayres, was born in Danville, Ky. When a lad of twelve years, in 1857, his father removed with his family to Lewis Co., Mo., and later, in 1865, to Keokuk, Ia. Mr. Ayres married Virginia M. Burkitt, a daughter of William and Ann Eliza (Foster) Burkitt; she was born Sept.

Mr. Ayres and his younger brother, Joseph James Ayres, still continue the jewelry business of T. R. J. Ayres & Sons, which was established by their grandfather a century and more since.

David Jameson Ayres is a prominent citizen, as well as successful business man. In 1880 he was chosen a member of the city council, and in 1883 he was elected mayor of Keokuk, Ia. He was made in 1892 a delegate from Iowa to the presidential national convention in Chicago, Ill., and in 1893, without solicitation, he was appointed postmaster of the city of Keokuk, and served four years and three months. Since then he has retired from politics, and given his time entirely to his business, which is extensive and profitable, as reflected by the fine building here presented, in which it is conducted.

Mr. Ayres is a physician, No. 30 New York Life building, Ransas Samuel, b. Dec. 22, 1859. City, Mo.

Dr. Samuel Ayres, Sen., was the "beloved physician." A man of an attractive personality, erect in form at seventy-five years of age, with fair and rosy complexion, he was a very handsome man; courteous in manner, devotedly fond of his mother, and with great reverence for woman, revealing that he was well born. The last time he visited his daughter, a few months before his death, which was sudden, from heart disease, holding her hand as he sat by her bedside, he sang the song his lamented mother was wont to sing to him, each verse ending—" I shall see my Saviour in the morning." At his death a gentleman remarked: "Surely God never made a man with so fine a form and face without a heart to correspond."

Mrs. Ayres still survives, and resides with her daughter, Mrs. Vaughan, at No. 1125 Third avenue, Louisville, Ky.

MR. VAUGHAN has been a busy man, being an exporter of an American product to foreign markets, and is now retired from business to care for and enjoy the results of his years of trade and activity.

MRS. VAUGHAN is cultured and attractive; their sons are intelligent and manly, and their daughter, a lovely girl, is, 1900, in her senior year in Vassar College, N. Y.

DR. JOHN HOLLINGSWORTH, who married Dorothea Apphia Jameson Ayres, the youngest daughter, was a son of Isaac and Hannah (Parkins) Hollingsworth. He was born 1809, in Winchester, Va. MR. JAMESON spelled his name Jamieson. This is the spelling found in all their family records for at least two hundred years, and still retained and proudly cherished by all of this branch now living. The Scotch pronunciation is Jimmyson. Mr. Jameson's grandfather, Robert Jameson, resided in Falkirk, Scotland. He was a farmer and an elder in the Parish of Larbert. The family crest is a ship in full sail and the motto "SINE METU," or "Ad littera tendit." This, it is said, "is from the London College and has been used by Scotch Jamiesons since 1300.1

Mr. Jameson's grandson, Andrew Jameson, 1900, of Baltimore, Md., has in his possession a paper which shows somewhat the family of Robert Jameson, his grandfather. This paper was brought from Scotland by Mr. William Gregory, who was on a visit to his native land and by request of Mr. Jameson's son, Robert Jameson of Alexandria, Va., called on Mr. John Jameson of Largo, Scotland, who copied it for him. It reads as follows:

In my own house at Glasgow, 17 Octo' 1815 Mrs. Kidston, senior, relict of the minister at Stow, gave me the following account of our ancestry which I wrote down as nearly as possible in her own words-

ROBERT JAMIESON, farmer on the Carse of Falkirk, and an elder in the parish of Larbert had family as follows:

THOMAS-of whom she recollects but little-thinks he died in England-had one daughter, about . . . (illegible) at whose death this branch of the family became extinct

ANDREW,-a merchant in Edinburgh, his shop in Luckenbooths-he was grandfather of And, Steele W. S. Edin GEORGE-Farmer, was father of Robt Jamieson, mason in Falkirk and of Charles &

Andrew Jameson the latter of whom still lives, Alexandria, Virginia, & corresponds

MICHAEL-Cooper in Port Glasgow, my grandfather

MARJORY-was Mrs. Wilson and grandmother of Miss Nackie-who visited at my house

JANNET-Mrs. Smith, of Falkirk, Mother of Robt Smith, of Mrs. Walker and of my informant, Mrs. Kidston.

MR. JAMESON came to America when a young man, and returned in 1774 to Scotland to fulfil a marriage engagement, but "the lassie," tired of waiting his return, was already married. He, however, found another and was married a few years later. The War of the Revolution being in progress, Mr. Jameson remained in Sterling, Scotland. His wife died in 1781, and a few years after he sailed with his only sur-

Mr. Jameson had a brother, Robert Jameson, who was a mason and lived in Falkirk, Scotland. He had another brother, Capt, Charles Jameson, master of a merchant vessel, who died unmarried in Alexandria, Va.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON'S first wife was a descendant of John Leavens, born in London in 1581, who with his wife Elizabeth, in 1632, sailed in the ship William and Francis for America, and settled in Roxbury, Mass., where he died Nov. 15, 1647.

JOSEH LEAVENS, a grandson of John Leavens the immigrant, Mrs. Jameson's great-grandfather, lived in Killingly, Conn. He was major of the first troop of cavalry raised in Windham Co., Conn., and known as "Old One Thumb,"-called so by the Indians. Being bitten by a rattlesnake, he immediately laid his hand on a log and cut off his thumb with his ax, thus saving his life. The knoll where this occurred is still called "Rattlesnake hill." He lived to be ninety years of age.

His thirteenth and youngest child was Capt. John Leavens, who was born July 25, 1779, in Killingly, Conn., emigrated to Ohio, founded Putnam, now Zanesville, Ohio, and died Sept. 13, 1852, in Alexandria, Va. He was the grandfather of Mrs. Catharine P. Jameson, whose mother, Mrs. Sanford, was married in Zanesville, Ohio, and rode on horseback all the way to Alexandria, D. C.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jameson's mother was a granddaughter of Revel Dr. Watson of Ireland, who was invited to become the first president of Princeton College, New Jersey, but his wife's great fear of the Indians decided him to decline the invitation.

THE UNITED STATES TROOPS entered Alexandria, Va., "on Friday, May 25, 1861, at daybreak." The next "Monday, to o'clock A. M., May 28, 1861," there was flung to the breeze at No. 189 Cameron street a large Union flag, which covered the whole front of the little house. It was the first Union flag displayed in Alexandria since the place was entered by the Union troops, and the sight of it awakened great excitement along the whole line of Union soldiers. As they passed they cheered it and saluted it with the music of the bands, while the neighbors of the man who dared to display his colors at such a time on the side of the Union were greatly outraged, and sent word to him to pull it in or they would tear it down. But still the old flag, with its stars and stripes, continued to wave in graceful folds untouched, and little by little smaller flags began to appear along the streets of this Old Dominion town, where the secression sentiment was very strong and the ladies were exeedingly indignant at the invasion of the Northerners, and needlessly afraid of the Zouaves, the protectors of their homes.

The special war correspondent of the New York Work I World, writing from Washington, D. C., under date of May 30, 1861,—a letter which was published in that paper Thursday, May 31, 1861,—incidentally informs us who it was that had the courage of his convictions and dared to stand alone for his Union principles. This correspondent, in the above letter, mentions being a guest at dinner with Dr. Rosencrata, and says: "To-day I sat down with him at the residence of the British consul, Mr.

Hours omeerdy Andrew Jaminson After four years of terrific fighting the War for the Union ended. Thirty years elapsed, and the host, Andrew Jameson, the British consul, and his guest, Edmund C. Steadman, the Washington war correspondent of the New York World, had never met since they sat together at dinner in 1861. But there has been found on a scrap of paper the following: "Meme, August, 1894. Being in N. Y. this week, I called on Mr. Steadman at his office on Broad St., and had a pleasant chat with him. I had not seen him since 1861. Both of us have bleached heads and beards. A. J."

MRS. LOUISA COLE JAMESON'S mother was the daughter of John Cole, who wrote in 1800 the well-known tune "Geneva," and who was the author of this remark:

"That the battle of Blandensburg tried men's soles."

Memoranda.

Mr. Jameson died in early manhood, in Alexandria, Va., which was a part of the District of Columbia until 1847, when it became a part of Virginia. The two older children were born in Exeter, N. H., and the two younger in Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Jameson passed her school days in her native town, Exeter, N. H., and graduated from Miss Colcord's Seminary for Young Ladies.

Her husband died after ten years of happy married life, and two of her four children were taken from her about the same time. These great sorrows came to her in the early days of the War for the Union. These were sad times. She gave up her Virginia home and with her two little boys returned to Exeter, N. H., where she remained until her sons were well educated and of an age to care for themselves. Mrs. Jameson then left Exeter and resided for a short time in Worcester, and in 1882 made a permanent home in Cambridge, Mass., with the family of Rev. Edward Abbott, D. D., rector of St. James church in that city, where she made, with her own rare spirit and her own choice ways, a large place for herself in the respect and the affections of the entire household. This place she filled for thirteen years, until called away to her heavenly home. Dr. Abbott pays a beautiful tribute to her worth and character in a memorial discourse preached Thursday, Oct. 31, 1895, on the eve of the Festival of All Saints.

MR. JAMESON " was reared in a home of piety and culture, and in early life became a member of the Presbyterian church in his native city. At the age of eighteen he removed to the city of New Orleans to commence his business life, and entered the service of one of the most prominent and influential wholesale commission firms of the city. This firm set a high standard for its employees. Young Jamieson soon revealed to them his willingness to measure up to their standard; this brought to him

He soon became the confidential clerk of the firm, and served them faithfully in large and important trusts until the call was made on Louisiana for state troops for the Civil War. Brother Jamieson at once enlisted in the 5th company of the renowned Washington Artillery, in which he served with conspicuous gallantry. His record is remarkable and marvelous; he was engaged in twenty-four fiercely contested battles, he was never wounded, never captured, and received only one short furlough of two weeks during the entire war.

At the close of the war he settled in Alexandria and took up his old line of business as a commission merchant, to which he gave his close attention until within a few years of his death. His activities were not confined to his special business. In various ways, whether religious, civil, or political, he faithfully served his city and her citizens, and for many years previous to his death was British Vice-Consul at the the representative or her Majesty's Government."

"Brother Jamieson was a man of intelligence, industry, integrity, and firmness,

JOHN JAY JAMESON.

He was conscientious, generous, sympathetic, and unselfish. He was true to every trust committed to him by his fellow-man. As a Royal Arcanumite he was true and faithful in every position he was called to fill by his comrades. He was a charter member of Alexandria Council, No. 627, which was instituted Dec. 2, 1881. He was admitted a member of the Grand Council of Virginia, April 8, 1885; appointed on the Standing Committee of Laws in 1887; elected Grand Regent in 1895, and reelected in 1896, and was the Special Delegate of the Grand Council of Virginia to the twentieth anniversary celebration of the Order in Boston, in May, 1897.

• His work culminated in his appointment by Supreme Regent Schryver in October, 1898, as Deputy Supreme Regent for West Virginia. He found the Councils of that state in great need of what only toil could bring. He gave himself to this toil and summoned to its aid all the ardor and faithfulness peculiar to his strong nature.

"And here he fell in the discharge of his duty. On Saturday, January 21, 1899, after a day of toil, it is supposed that he laid down his pen from sheer inability to use it, to seek rest for his body, and awoke in three short hours to his immortal rest.

"Thus his last days were given to the service of the Royal Arcanum; the very best work of his heart, his hand, his pen, was for the Order he dearly loved and served with unflinching devotion. Of John J. Jamieson it can be truly said: He was a pure philanthropist, a good clizen, a true friend, a loving father, a devoted husband, and a zealous member of our order; therefore be it

"Resolved, That in the death of Brother John J. Jamieson this Grand Council mourns the loss of one of its most beloved and useful members, and as a token of our esteem we will dedicate a memorial page in our records to his memory and insert in our printed proceedings a lithograph likeness of our departed brother, and while we shall never again meet him in our Council chamber, yet from loving hearts we can truly say:

"We'll not for get thic, are who stay
To work a sittle langer have Thy name, the faith, thy love shall lie
On memory's page all bright and clear.
And when be evenewise by the totl
Of tife our heavy limbs shall be We'll come, and one by one lie down.

MR. JAMESON had two brothers, William and James Jameson, and two sisters, Mollie and Bettie Jameson, who emigrated from Virginia at an early day to Bath Co., Ky. It is not improbable that these were all the children of Alexander Jameson [146], who appears in the preceding chapter, and resided near Charlottesville, Albemarle Co., Va., for Alexander Jameson had a son, William Jameson [152], who resided in Bath Co., Ky., in 1815, who had a son, George [168]. JOHN JAMESON, one of his brothers, came to America about 1800, and settled near him in Ohio Co., Va. He had children, viz.: William, John, Henry, Margaret, and Mary, who settled, it is said, in the Southern and Western states. Mr. Jameson was a member of the English Episcopal church, and his wife was a member of the Presbyterian church. They both were very earnest Chistians.

James Hareer, Mrs. Jameson's father, when a young man came from Scotland and settled in New Jersey. He married a Miss Wallace, who was a descendant of SIR WILLIAM WALLACE, the champion warrior, who, with Robert Bruce, had such a hard time fighting the Catholics in Scotland. Mrs. Jameson named one of her sons for Sir William Wallace.

SAMUEL HARPER JAMESON, one of Mr. Jameson's sons, in a brief sketch of his father's family, writes as follows:

We were left orphans when the oldest child was only twelve years of age. My father was born in Belfast, Ireland, A. D. 1765, of Scotch parents, and came to the United States, A. D. 1784, and settled on a farm of two hundred and forty acres, in Ohio Co., Va.

In a letter dated May 23, 1893, Springfield, Ill., he writes:

THE JAMESONS IN MAINE.

NARRATIVE.

THE JAMESONS IN MAINE have become very numerous and widely scattered. To the eastward they are found in New Brunswick, and to the westward in Port Gamble, Wash. They are the descendants of a common ancestor, WILLIAM JAMESON, who came from the north of Ireland with a large company of immigrants, known as Scotch Irish, and landed Aug. 4, 1718, in Boston, New England. Before setting out on this adventure to the New World these people, among whom was William Jameson, dispatched a commissioner, The Rev. WILLIAM BOYD, with a memorial addressed to the governor of Massachusetts Bay. This commissioner sailed for America, saw the Governor in person, and brought back word favorable to the proposed expedition, with many kind words of encouragement and welcome from His Excellency. This original memorial to Governor Samuel Shute, dated March 26, 1718, with signatures undersigned, is well preserved in a frame under glass, and hangs on the walls of the library of the New Hampshire Historical Society, in Concord, N. H.

To HIS EXCELLENCY, the Right Honourable Collonel Samuel Suitte, Governor of New

WE, whose names, are underwritten, Inhabitants of ye North of Ireland, Doe in our own names, and in the names of many others our Neighbours, Gentlemen, Ministers, Farmers and Tradesmen Commissionate and appoint our trusty and well beloved Friend, the Reverend Mr. William Boyd of Macasky to His Excellency the Right Honourable Collonel Samuel Suitte, Governor of New England, and to assure His Excellency of our sincere and upon our obtaining from his Excellency suitable incouragement And further to act and Doe in our Names as his Prudence shall direct.

Given under our hands this 26th day of March Annog. Dom. 1718.

The above memorial was signed by three hundred and twenty-two persons, and among these signatures appear the following:

" John Jameson."

The former doubtless was the William Jameson who, with his family, in the late autumn of 1718, landed in Falmouth, Me., where he settled and became the ancestor of THE JAMESONS IN MAINE.

And the latter was no doubt the identical John Jameson who was found later in Milton, Mass., and removed with his wife and children, in the spring of 1726, to Voluntown, Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life, and whose descendants emigrated in 1776 to Wyoming Valley, Pa., where three of his grandsons were massacred by the Indians, an account of which may be found in another part of this volume.

John and William Jameson, who signed the above memorial, were doubtless among those who arrived in Boston in response to Governor Shute's invitation to come, for it appears that "His Excellency Governor Shute returned a favourable reply," and accordingly five shiploads of immigrants from the north of Ireland arrived Aug. 4, 1718, in Boston, province of Massachusetts Bay.

John and William Jameson were said to be brothers, and the sons of William Jameson, a Covenanter, who fled with his family from Scotland in 1685, and settled in Omagh, County of Tyrone, province of Ulster, Ireland. On arrival in America these brothers sought and found homes in different sections of the country, and probably never met each other again.

William Jameson and his family were of the twenty families from among the large number landed in Boston who chartered a brig and a few weeks later sailed to the eastward, with the view of finding some favorable place for permanent settlement. They voyaged along the entire coast of Maine, but the season getting late, they returned as far as Falmouth and dropped anchor in Casco Bay, now Portland harbor. The cold weather coming on, they determined to spend the winter there, so taking their vessel up the river and making her secure, they established themselves as well as they could on the south shore of the Casco or Fore river, at a place known as Purpooduck, in Falmouth, Me. It proved a winter of want and suffering; their own provisions failed, and the inhabitants had neither shelter nor fuel sufficient for so large an accession to the population. The inhabitants of the town, therefore, in their sympathy for the destitute strangers arrived amongst them, and themselves not being "so well furnished as that they were able to supply them," sent a petition to the General Court in Boston, for Falmouth was then a part of the province of Massachusetts Bay and, "they pray that the Court would consider their desolate circumstances by reason these poor people arrived amongst them and take speedy and effectual care for their supply." And upon this application the General Court ordered: "That one hundred bushels of Indian meal be allowed and paid for out of the public treasury for the poor Irish people mentioned in the petition.

With the coming of the spring the greater part of those who had wintered at Purpooduck, Falmouth, reëmbarked for Boston. They proceeded only to Newburyport, and then sailed up the Merrimack river as far as Haverhill, where they landed April 2, 1719. Leaving their families, the men journeyed inland into the wilderness some miles to a place called Nutfield, where they arrived April 11, 1719. They put up log cabins, staked out their lands, and soon were joined by their families, and became the first settlers of Londonderry, N. H.

There were, however, a few families who remained in Falmouth, viz.: Those of John Armstrong, Robert Means, who married Mr. Armstrong's daughter, William Giles, Mr. McDonald, and WILLIAM JAMESON.

They were of Scotch descent; their ancestors were of a colony from Argyleshire, Scotland, who crossed over and settled in the north of Ireland. They were of rigid Presbyterian stock, and the local historian says of them: "These became valuable inhabitants, and their descendants still remain amongst us."

FALMOUTH, ME., where they located, was within the province of Massachusetts Bay, for the government of Massachusetts came into the possession of the ancient province of Maine as far as to the eastern bounds of Falmouth in 1658, which she held, with the exception of about three years, until the final separation in 1820.

" THE NECK" in Falmouth was incorporated July 4, 1786, as Portland, Me. PURPODUCK was on the south side of the Casco river, across from "The Neck," connected by a ferry-boat.

The first meeting of the inhabitants to organize the town of Falmouth after its incorporation was held March 10, 1719. Among one hundred and thirty-eight persons admitted as inhabitants in 1727 one was William Jameson.

A church was organized in the town March 8, 1727, and nine men subscribed to the Covenant, viz.: "Thomas Smith, Isaac Sawyer, Thomas Haskell, John Barber, Robert Means, Samuel Cobb, John Armstrong, William Gyles, and William Jemison."

THOMAS SMITH was ordained their pastor the same day and made this entry in the church records:

"We are the first church that ever was settled to the eastward of Wells." The church held its first meeting July 10, 1727, and Samuel Cobb was chosen deacon. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated for the first time by this church Aug. 20, 1727, and about thirty communicants were present.

Mr. Smith was a graduate in 1720 of Harvard College. He married Sept. 12, 1728, Sarah Tyng, daughter of William Tyng, Esq., of Woburn, Mass. It is said that Rev. Mr. Smith had the best house provided in the town, and in 1740 was the only house which contained a "papered-room," the paper being put on with nails.

At the time of his settlement it was arranged that Rev. Mr. Smith should preach every third Sunday on the south side of Fore river, i. e., in Purpooduck, to accommodate the people living there. But in 1733 this part of the town called Purpooduck was made a distinct parish, and accordingly members of the First Church living on that side of Fore river were dismissed to form a second church, viz.: "John Armstrong, William Fameson, Robert Means, Robert Thorndike, Jonathan Cobb, and later Joshua Woodbury, Dominicus Jordan, and Joseph White." The new parish of Purpooduck held their first meeting Sept. 18, 1733, and voted to build a meetinghouse

Rev. Benjamin Allen was chosen as their minister, and installed Nov. 10, 1734.

The dividing line between the two parishes of Falmouth passed up the Fore river to a point half a mile south of Stroudwater river, thence due west to Scarborough, This subsequently was the boundary of Cape Elizabeth.

In the church and parish of Purpooduck there was a strong element of Presbyterianism; the Scotch-Irish immigrants were all of this sect, and they could not easily lay aside the convictions in which they had been educated and severely disciplined.

Armstrong, Means, Jameson, and others there were in whom "the fires of the old faith and discipline of John Knox still freshly burned," and at times the sectarian feeling in Purpooduck parish manifested itself with great violence.

ROBERT BAYLEY was the first teacher employed. He was hired in 1733 on a salary of £70, to keep school six months on "The Neck," three months at "Purpooduck," and three months on the north side of "Back Cove." Mr. Bayley probably came from Newbury, Mass.

The conditions of the locality and of the people when William Jameson with his family established themselves in a new country on Purpooduck shore have thus been briefly sketched, as of historic interest to his numerous and widely scattered descendants.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, when a lad, removed with his parents and their other children from Scotland into Ireland. His father was a rigid Presbyterian, and a zealous supporter of the "Solemn League and Covenant," and shortly after the accession of King James II the persecution of the Covenanters was vigorously renewed, and became so intolerable that, taking his wife and children, he abandoned his home and the scenes in the midst of which his ancestors had dwelt for generations, quit Scotland forever, passed over into Ireland, and settled at length in Omagh, county of Tyrone, province of Ulster. This was about 1685. A little later, in 1689, at the siege of Londonderry, it is said that William Jameson, Sen., was engaged in its defence, and, as tradition has it, served with such gallantry that subsequently he was freed from all taxation by order of King William.

Mr. Jameson, like his father, was evidently a man of courage, enterprise, and strong religious convictions. This appears in the fact of his braying the perils of the ocean with his wife and family to come to America, and on arrival not remaining in Boston but pushing his way along the coast to the eastward, and after much privation and hardship making a settlement as a pioneer in the woods of Maine.

Landing in Falmouth, the first winter was passed in want and suffering hardly second to those of the Pilgrims at Plymouth a hundred years before. But no sooner had he established himself and family and made his home in the new country than he manifested a spirit of active interest and zeal in the church and in civil affairs. His piety and his patriotism are reflected by records now extant. Not only is his name enrolled on the records of the church, but in active service against the Indians on the "Muster-roll of Capt. John Gray and Company, from June 1st to Nov. 30th, 1725," appear the names of William Jameson and his son, Martin Jameson.

lived for a time in Milton, near Boston, Mass., and a few years later settled in Voluntown, Conn., of whom and his descendants some account has been given in a previous chapter of this volume.

Robert and Henry Jameson, who came to America and landed about 1708 or later in Philadelphia, were also his brothers.

Mr. Jameson reared a large family of children, some of whom were born in Ireland and some in Falmouth, Me. Seven of the children were married and had families. PATIENCE JAMESON, the youngest daughter so far as known, receives only the fol-

"PATIENCE JAMESON, Under care of John and Sarah Libbey united with the Church in Scarboro, Me., April 17, 1743, and was baptized the same day.'

Mr. Jameson appears in certain transactions in land, among which are the following: Jeremiah Jurden, April 2, 1723, sells to William Jameson of the town of Falmouth 50 acres of land in Spurwinch. William Jameson of Falmouth Dec. 25 1733 conveys 60 acres of land in Falmouth Barbary Creek to his son Martin Jameson of Falmouth. William Jameson of Falmouth in 1734 conveys 60 acres of land in Scarborough to his grandson William McKenney.

MR. JAMESON first settled and lived for a few years near Goffe's mill brook in Arundel, Me. This town was, from July 4, 1653, known as Cape Porpoise, but June 4, 1719, incorporated Arundel, and became, Feb. 19, 1821, Kennebunkport, Me.

About 1745, during the war to the eastward, he removed from Arundel and became the first permanent settler in Meduncook, now Friendship, Me.

JOHN SMITH, Mrs. Jameson's father, made his will April 8, 1748, dividing his estate between his two daughters, his only children, and Mr. Jameson was constituted one of the executors. Mr. Jameson's younger brothers, Alexander and Paul Jameson, some years later, about 1753, followed him and also settled in Meduncook, now Friendship, Me. He served in the French and Indian wars, and suffered many hardships. Among others we have this record: "From June 19th to Nov. 20th, 1755, besides the regular garrisons at the Fort and Block-houses, a company of rangers scouting to the eastward was kept in service. This force consisted of about fifty men, of whom Samuel Jameson was one, under command of Capt. Thomas Fletcher."

Samuel Jameson and his brother, Alexander Jameson, Sept. 11, 1758, were taken prisoners. "Mary Jameson made Alacation" for her husband Alexander and his brother Samuel.

The will of Samuel Jameson was dated "Meddunkcooke July 3º 26th 1767." Mr. Jameson speaks of death as nigh, and proceeds to constitute his "loving wife Sarah" and "son Martin" joint executors of his last will and testament. He mentions his eldest daughter, Jane Jameson of Falmouth, his sons, Martin, Joseph, Samuel, Brice, and George Jameson, also two other daughters, Mary and Rachel Jameson. The exact date of Mr. Jameson's death is unknown, but his will was probated Aug. 9, 1768.

MRS. JAMESON, after her husband's death, married ² William James, son of William and Catherine (Cunningbam) James. He was born in Warren, Me., where they resided. Mr. James died July, 1774. There were of this marriage two children, viz.: William, who died young, and Nancy, m. Aug. 26, 1790, Leonard Fales, d. March 6, 1843, who lived and died in Thomaston, Me. Mr. James's parents, William and Catherine James, were among the Scotch-Irish settlers of 1735 in Warren, Me. Mr. James, sonior, died Oct. 29, 1770, aged 81 years.

Mrs. Priscilla (Jameson) Newhall of South Thomaston, Me., more than forty years since wrote, under date of April 29, 1757, as follows:

"My grandfather, Samuel Jameson, was one of the first settlers of Warren, on the Oster river. Where he came from I do not know. To my best recollections I have heard my father say he was a widower with two children when he married his mother, Surah McLelan, a son and daughter, the daughter's hame, I think, was Jane. I think he said she married and went West, the son went to sea. They knew not what became of him. My grands mother, Sarah McLellan, I think belonged in Thomaston, near what was then called "Mill River." By her he had five sons and two daughters. My grandfather was engaged in the French and Indian wars, wounded, taken prisoner, thrown into prison, and by not having proper care, died shortly after his release. I have heard my father say he could not rememen much about him but his pale looks and emaciated form. Grandmother's children I canot give in order, but will do the best I can. Martin, Joseph, Mary, Rachel, Brice, George, and one died when a young man, his name I cannot state orcret, but I think the names of Alexander and Samuel belonged between the two, the one that died and the one who went to sea."

Memoranda.

MR. PORTERFIELD settled about 1749 on Mr. North's lot, No. 48, in Thomaston, Me., where he continued to reside while he lived. He married for a second wife Mrs. Mary (Webster) McLellan. She was born in 1727, and died Aug. 28, 1797.

Mr. Porterfield became something of a military character, and received in 1770 a captain's commission of the militia in Thomaston, Me. He has been spoken of as an energetic, liberal, and popular man, but somewhat passionate in temper and capable of using strong terms in speech. His death was sudden, apparently caused by undue mental excitement over some trifling matter, of which record has been made.

Mrs. Martha Porterfield died of a prevailing and very fatal disease, which seemed quite like yellow fever. She was buried near the Knox mansion, in the "Old Fort Burying Ground." In 1860 a stone turned up by a plough proved to be her veritable William Porterfield, the eldest son, married and settled in a place called "Clam Cove," Negunticook, written Megunticook, which is now Camden, Me. Cook it is said meant bay or harbor, and Megunticook, large bay or harbor. He had a son Patrick, who died Jan. 27, 1811, a lad of twelve, and was buried in Rockland, Me.

John Porterfield, the second son, was a young man full of promise, who perished at sea in 1770 on a voyage to Boston, Mass. He was on board a new sloop, the first vessel ever built on the St. George's river, named Industry. There was a William Upham who settled with William Porterfield in "Clam Cove," and was doubtless the same who married his sister, Catherine Porterfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Buckland lived and died in Camden, Me.

Capt, and Mrs. James Watson had nine children. They resided on "Watson's Point," Thomaston, Me. He was born July 25, 1745, and followed the seas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shibbles removed to Ohio. He was born April 3, 1770. They died in the West.

Robert Porterfield, the youngest son, taught school in his native town before marriage. His wife was the widow of Caleb Howard, and daughter of Maj. Hanse and Priscilla (Hyler) Robinson of Cushing, Me. They resided in Rockland, Me., but later removed with their son William and four other children to Ohio.

No. 971.

Paul ² Jameson (William ¹), son of William [963] Jameson, was born Oct. 17, 1720, in Cape Elizabeth, Me. He married Nov. 30, 1749, Elizabeth Pebbles, daughter of Patrick Pebbles. She was born Dec. 15, 1730, in Cape Elizabeth, Me. They resided in Meduncook, now Friendship, Me., where Capt. Jameson died in 1795. Mrs. Jameson died Dec. 10, 1829.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, when a young man, followed his older brothers, Samuel and Alexander, to the eastward in 1748, and with them was among the earliest settlers in Meduncook, now Friendship, Me. The following year he married a young lady from his native place, but also belonging to the newer settlement, her father, Patrick Pebbles, having been among the earliest Scotch-Irish settlers of Warren, Me., where he died in 1745.

Capt. John North, the accredited author of a written list of the early settlers of Maine, mentions " Paul Jamison, St. Georges Lower town," and doubtless refers to Mr. Jameson of Meduncook Plantation. Mr. North died in 1763. "St. Georges Lower town " later became Warren, Me.

Mr. Jameson was the captain of a Meduncook company for coast defence in the War of the Revolution. His son William, a lad of fifteen years, fought by his father's side, and drove out the English from the harbour. When quite an old man, a certain Tory, Benjamin Bradford, called at Mr. Jameson's house, whereupon the old gentleman lifted his cane over the Tory's head, and with a stunning voice told him to clear out or he would split him down.

Capt. Paul Jameson was an uncle of Alexander Jameson of West Isles, N. B.

Mr. Jameson was appointed administrator, May 30, 1890, of his son Isaac's estate, who followed the seas, and died in 1798, in Friendship, Me. Mr. Jameson's will mentions his wife, Elizabeth; four sons, Robert, Charles, William, executuor, and Jeremiah; also three daughters, Jane Gay, Martha Bradford, and Sarah Parsons. Mr. Gay has been spoken of as "A respectable inhabitant of Burton's Island,"

22 and Nov. 24, 1779, and received state and continental bounties."

Mr. Jameson and his younger brother, Charles Jameson, with their cousin Alexander, all from Meduncook, now Friendship, Me., settled about 1770 at a place near "Leverett's Point," called Clam Cove, within the limits of Camden, now Rock-land, Me. This place became known as "Jameson's Point." "Owl's Head," a projection of Thomaston on the south, and "Jameson's Point" on the north, included Rockland Harbor.

There is recorded an interesting Revolutionary anecdote of Robert Jameson and the Tory, Pomeroy. It appears that British marauders plundered Robert Jameson's place at Jameson's Point, having been piloted there by one Pomeroy, an old schoolmate of Jameson's, for which deed of unkindness Jameson swore he would "some day punish the rascal," and a few years later the opportunity occurred and Jameson gave said Pomeroy a sound thrashing.

MR. JAMESON was a Baptist clergyman. He commenced preaching in 1829, and with the exception of a two years' pastorate in Newton, N. H., his labors in the Gospel ministry until 1856 were in York and Lincoln counties, Me. He then removed to the West, and for seven years preached in Illinois, when his health failed and he was obliged to give up his chosen life-work. But he continued to go to the house of God in which he delighted, until two weeks before his death.

Mr. Jameson was a good minister of Jesus Christ and died in his eightieth year in the faith and the comfort of the Gospel which he had preached.

MRS. JAMESON survived her husband several years, and died at the age of nearly ninety years, while on a visit at the home of her youngest son, Rev. E. H. E. Jameson, in Lansing, Mich. Her remains were taken back and buried by the side of her lamented husband in Chillicothe, Ill.

Rev. Mr. Jameson wrote a letter to the compiler of this book, under date of April 15, 1857, expressing his interest in the undertaking, which then had but a small beginning, but which in these more than forty years has grown to a large volume.

Below is a fac-simile of his autograph on the letter of April 15, 1857, above

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON'S biography, so far as is known, is set forth in a letter dated Feb. 26, 1857, written by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Abiezer Jameson of Chicopee, Mass., as follows:

SAMUEL JAMESON received a good education and was brought up as a farmer. He followed that summers and taught school winters. He was a devoted Christian, belonging to the Baptists, and between the ages of thirty and forty he thought he had a call to preach, and did so for quite a number of years until his health failed (all the family have died of consumption); afterwards he became editor of the Baptist magazine, but his health would not permit him long to continue; and for quite a number of years he was unable to attend to any business. Being advised to go South, he did so, and found it improved his health, so much so that he went to teaching school. About a year ago he ceased to write and we could learn nothing of him, until after great search we found he died about that time, but could learn no particulars. My husband intends soon to go in person and learn when and reasoning powers; but few men had such a memory, he could repeat any passage of Scripture you might mention the chapter and verse. When Millerism was in its glory, Miller challenged any one to refute his theory; my father accepted the challenge, but after Miller found whom he had to contend with, be would not hear his argument.

Mr. Jameson's second son, Samuel Jameson, Jr., was a machinist, and about 1849 went to California, and nothing further is known of him.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a man more than six feet in height, weighing over two hundred pounds and well proportioned, a very commanding personality. He followed the seas for forty years, and for the greater part of this time he was the master of a vessel. He retired when about sixty years of age. During his scafaring life he had been a castaway three times, and barely escaped death. In the crisis of these perils each time he promised the Lord that if he would spare his life he would become a Christian, but the promise was not kept.

It was a year or two after Capt. Jameson had retired from the seas, in Jan., 1863, that the Rev. Silas S. Cummings, later well known in connection with the Home for Little Wanderers, was holding a series of revival services in the town, and a great religious interest was prevailing. At one of the evening meetings Capt. Jameson's wife, a very devoted Christian woman, arose and requested prayers for her busband, at the same time pointing him out and saying, "There he is in the gallery." A solemn hush fell upon the audience, when shortly a young man, John Bradford, a nephew of Capt. Jameson, came forward, fell upon his knees at the altar, and prayed with a loud voice and great earnestness,—"Lord fetch him!! Lord fetch him!!! It was all he could say. The excitement was intense. The result was the following evening Capt. Jameson rose in the meeting, confessed his broken promises made to the Lord in the time of peril and wreck at sea, and then added, "I am going on board the ship of Zion," and turning to his comrades and friends he urged them to come with him. The Lord had facthed him. And there were during the meeting some seventy-five or eighty hopeful conversions, many of whom wished to be baptized by immersion. Among these was Capt. Jameson. There were hundreds present on the occasion of the immersing. The minister, Rev. Mr. Cummings, was small of stature like Zaccheus of old. And when this little man went into the water with Capt. Jameson who was large of stature, a powerful man, there ran through the multitude of spectators a tremor of apprehension as to the result. However, the administration of the rite was successful, and the great crowd once more breathed freely. Subsequently Capt. Jameson for the next twenty-five years of his life was a very active and useful Christian man. He became a class-leader in the Methodist church, was called to fill many offices of public service in the town, and was elected for two terms to the State Legislature. He commanded the universal confidence, respect, and esteem of the community.

Capt. Jameson, under date of Dec., 1862, wrote the author an interesting letter,

His three sons who were of sufficient age. Jonah

IN MEMORIAM

CAPT. WILLIAM SYMMES.

DIED NOV. 6, 1884. BORN AUG. 19, 1802.

Though thy years fourscore outnumbered, When the sands of life outrun, Even yet we mourn the briefness, Of a life so nobly done.

As the fragrance from the spice-tree; As the clouds of incense rise, Comes the sweetness of thy mem'ry, Stirring deep affection's ties.

Man of virtue! Man of honor! Round thy mem'ry ere shall cling, Thoughts of heaven-earned life in future, Fair as this world's work can bring.

F. I. SYMMES.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON'S Christian name was Winbourne Adams Wiggin. This was changed by an act of the legislature to Charles.

REV. CALER BRADLEY, speaking of the martiages in the Webb family at the time Mr. Jameson married Ruth Webb, says: "The fee, $3.00, I gave to her and told her to purchase a Bible with the money. This is the tenth wedding I have attended in this family. There were nine daughters, and I married one of them twice, and only one son."

JOHN WEBB, the father of both Mrs. Jamesons, was a soldier in the Battle of Bunker Hill, and served under Washington. He was an Englishman by birth and became one of the earliest settlers of the town of Westbrook, Me. He first cut a few trees and built a log-house in the midst of a dense forest. In the progress of years he had cleared and brought under cultivation a farm of a hundred and fifty acres, and in the meantime built a new and better house. It was no uncommon occurrence for Mr. Webb to shoot bears that trespassed on his field of corn. It was hardly safe to venture far from the house after dark on account of the wolves that preyed about.

Mr. Webb when advanced in years gave his farm to his son-in-law, Charles Jameson, who in turn bequeathed it to his son, John Henry Jameson, who spent his lifetime upon it, and it is still retained in the possession of his children.

MR. JAMESON was appointed from Massachusetts Major Additional Paymaster United States Volunteers, Nov. 26, 1862. Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel United States Volunteers, March 13, 1865, for gallantry and meritorious service during the war. He was mustered out July 20, 1866.

The following incident may be of interest:

GEORGE W. LATIMER, a slave, escaped from Virginia to Boston, and was recaptured in 1842 by his master, Mr. Grey, and confined in Leverett street jail.

SIX BOSTON MEN, viz., Nathaniel Colver, Timothy Gilbert, Ambrose Lovis, Frederick
W. Cratix, William H. Jameson, and Samuel Hill, who were interested in the case, met at the residence of the latter, then on the corner of Broadway and F street, South Boston. The house has since been moved back and fronts on F street. A few others were present, among them Samuel Hill, Jr., then twenty years old, who is probably the only living witness of the meeting. Grey was sent If a and met with them, and they asked blan how much Latimer was worth. He said the "boy" was worth ($600) is hundred dollars to him. and each of the six men named above pledged six oo not he spot to pay for his freedom. But Grey refused, "and after some dallying was obliged to take a smaller sum than was originally offered,"

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON for a period of more than twenty-five years was an inspector in the custom house, Boston, Mass. His resignation of this position was noticed by a highly appreciative letter from the collector of the port of Boston, commending his faithful service and honorable record. He united with the Tremont Temple Baptist church in May, 1849, and for fifty-eight years he "kept the faith" and witnessed a good confession by a well ordered and useful Christian life. He was a man of sterning integrity, generous spirit, patriotic action, and gentlemally manners. He was respected and beloved by all who knew him. His presence and conversation were a benediction.

Humphrey Jameson

•• His end was peaceful. A note of praise was upon his lips up to the moment of his departure. His life ended joyfully in that home which was, in his affections, second only to the •• Father's home on high."

> "Thus pass they from our homes away To worlds above the skies, Where glows the fair, celestial day, And pleasure never dies. We miss them where of late they trod Along earth's sunny bowers, Yet joy to know they dwell with God In smuire clume than ours. Ours is the pain, the toil, the strife, The doubt, the fear, the grief: Theirs the immortal, glorious life, The endless, sweet relief. Life speeds apace; we'll struggle still, While sin and toil remain, Then soar to Zion's holy hill, And hall the loved again"

MRS. JAMESON, with her two daughters, resides at No. 151 West Newton street, Boston, Mass.

MR. JAMESON was born on one of the many picturesque islands which dot Passamaquoddy Bay. In youth he was a fisher-lad, then a sailor was a fisher-lad, then a sailor before the mast and on the quarter-deck, later a ship-wright, and when about thirty-five years of age he settled down to the life of a frontier farmer at Pleasant Ridge, then in the very heart of the backwoods of New Born West Jeles, April 29, 1808

Brunswick. Here he lived until his children were fully fledged for flight from the parental nest, and had scattered to build homes of their own, when he removed to St. Stephens, N. B., where he still resides, wearing lightly more than ninety years.

He is hale and vigorous, equal to long walks in the country and to writing a clear hand without the use of spectacles. At the age of eighty-eight years he wrote the following letter, inclosing a beautiful little flower:

St. Stephen Sept 5 1896

Dear Friend :

Dear Friend:
Your letter came to hand all right and I was glad to hear of your welfare.
I have been quite poorly for awhile but am better now. We have fine weather and good crops. We have peace and plenty and I consider these very great blessings.—Bless the Lord, O! my soul and all that is within me.—Fraite ye the Lord. Love to all

CHARLES JAMISON

Mr. Jameson's married life was long and happy. The event of his marriage was certified to as follows:

This certifies, that,-CHARLES JAMISON and ALICE WOODIN of Saint Andrews, county of Charlotte and Province of New Brunswick, were this day married according to the forms and usages of the church of Scotland by me

ALEXR. MACLEAN. Saint Andrews 16 Dec. 1820

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING was celebrated Dec. 16, 1880, in St. Stephens, N. B. The following lines were prepared for the occasion:

A RETROSPECT.

Keen blows the bitter, biting wind, December, Low swings the sun across thy leaden sky. Yet rarely bright, as wife and I remember Appeared this morn but fifty years gone by-

Fifty brief years, my Alice, since we started With hand in hand, on life's uncertain way; And Hymen's golden fetters, never parted Bind closer ev'n than on our marriage day.

Thy life and mine were in the budding May-time, For as the air was filled with birds and flowers; And, as our sun rose upward to the day-prime How bright and joyous seemed the passing hours!

And sweet flowers bloomed within our humble dwelling, Bestowal of God to cheer us on our way, But with what bitter pain our bosoms swelling. We watched the earliest fade and pass away

Too soon they faded from our earthly vision, Yet we rejoiced, though teardrops dimmed our eyes, Knowing that, far beyond earth's pain arisen, Our lost flowers bloom again in Paradise.

Through fifty years of storm and sunny weather Our bark has sailed o'er life's uneven seas; Captain and mate still tread the deck together, Our sails still spread to catch the favoring breeze.

God's guiding hand has led us onward ever; So may He lead till all our journey's o'er, Till we cast anchor in the bright Forever And reach His rest on yonder golden shore.

> TO THE LOVED ONES AT HOME. "Dar's whar my heart's returning ever, Dar 's whar de old folks stay.

My father-my mother!-what warm thrills of pleasure Vibrate on my heart-strings at each hallowed name!

A wealth of affection that words cannot measure— A love that still burns with a pure, quenchless flame. Ye who my first faltering accents detected, My earliest footsteps with fond care directed From life's chilling east wind my childhood protected, This heart's never-dving devotion must claim.

My mother, Llove theel Thy sons and thy daughters Though sundered data from each other and thee—Beside cold St. Lawrence's swift-us hing waters. Or where Mississippi rolls down to the sea—To-day all are present in spirit to meet thee, On this wedding morn with affection to greet thee. Oh, welcome us home, and accept, we entreat thee, Our hearts, swelled with love to our father and thee.

Let no saddened thoughts of our absence distress thee, Our hearts yet behold the though hid from our sight. Thy children and grandchildren rise up to bless thee; Thy memory shall ever be spotless and bright. A wedding-day greeting thy youngest would send thee, From evil and sorrow may Heaven defend thee, Throughout thy life-journey God's angels attend thee, To guard and protect thee by day and by night!

C. E. J.

A thrilling incident is told of Mrs. Jameson, by her daughter, Mrs. Craig:

It appears that in the late autumn of 1855, during the absence of Mr. Jameson and the older sons, he having gone a great distance for family supplies there being no stores near at hand, the family at home ran short of food; accordingly Mrs. Jameson leaving the oldest daughter with the six youngest children, the youngest an unweamed infant, started for the nearest neighbor's, a half mile away, to borrow food for the next day. She did not duly return, the snow began to fall, night came on, eight o'clock, nine o'clock, and no mother to nurse the baby and see the children in bed. With baby in arms the daughter fell saleep but soon awoke and realized the alarming situation, the boy George peered into the darkness, soon awoke and realized the alarming situation, the boy George peered into the darkness, bear the shape of the start of the darkness of the start of the star

MR. JAMES WOODIN, Mrs. Jameson's father, died Dec. 24, 1865; her mother died the year previous, Nov. 29, 1864.

Mr. and Mrs. Jameson celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of their marriage Dec. 16, 1895, and a brief month later death sundered the silken bonds and Mr. Jameson was left alone.

LOVE, GRIEF, HOPE.

Beside a new made grave he stood, His look was sad, his face was pale, Full fourscore years he had withstood The winter's frost and summer's gale.

On land or sea, through many a clime He'd proudly braved life's tempest blast, Till now, long past his manhood's prime, The shades of night were gathering fast. Silent he stood in reverent awe, Uncovered was his hoary head; Meekly he bowed to heaven's law, Alone, beside his honored dead.

Although no word escaped his tongue His thoughts went backward to the days When his beloved Alice sang With him sweet songs and gladsome lays:—

Sang their light songs of early love— Sang to their children on their knees— Sang unto him who reigns above In strains of sweetest melodics.

But manhood's years swept on apace, His children left him one by one, Until at last the saintly face Of darling Alice, too,—was gone.

And now he stood beside her grave,
The grave that held her honored dust,
To reverence her, so true and brave,
Who faithful proved to every trust.

At length he murmured soft and low, In accents like as in a dream: "Rest thou, my Alice, here below Till Christ shall send His sunlight gleam."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, when a lad of fourteen years, took Horace Greeley's advice, "Go West." He spent six years, mostly in the lumber region in Wisconsin and Minnesota, along the upper Mississippi. In 1854 he went to California by the way of the isthmus to engage in the hunt for gold. While out with a prospecting party in the summer of 1855 he struck the precious metal at Hazel Creek, in Northern California. This was the first discovery of gold in that part of the country. But they had hardly made a beginning when the Indians became troublesome, and in July of that year Mr. Jameson went with a party in pursuit of the savages, the Modocs and other renegade Indians. They followed them westward, between the headwaters of the Trinity and Sacramento rivers. On the way, they spent the night on a hillside under an article headed:

which was fairly alive with rattlesnakes, and sought protection and rest by climbing into the scrub oaks and tying themselves fast to the branches, where they passed a well-nigh sleepless night. After several days of hard climbing and marching they reached Cattle Rock, and had a fierce battle with the Indians, who, after a while, commenced a retreat. and four of the pursuing party, Lane, Whitney, Joaquin Miller, who has become the wellknown poet, and Jameson attempted to make a circuit and cut off their retreat. In this attempt they ran into a small band of the Indians, and, in the sharp encounter, Lane had one of his eyes shot out by an arrow. Whitney had his gunstock split into pieces, and Miller suddenly fell, pierced in the neck by an arrow, the flint head going completely through his neck. Jameson came to his assistance, cut off the head of the arrow with his knife, and pulled it back and out. It was an ugly wound, and bled profusely, but it was bound up, and so the life of the Western poet was saved. THE SEATTLE POST INTELLIGENCER, of Feb. 21, 1892, refers to this incident

What a Port Gamble Man did for Foaquin Miller.

The following paragraph has been going the rounds of the press:

"JOAQUIN MILLER, two or three years ago, was walking with Ex-Governor Semple in Tacoma when a curious thing took place: A man walked up, and, placing his finger on the left side of Miller's face, said: 'Yes, you are the boy.' It turned out that this man had saved the poet's life at the battle of Castle Rocks, fought years ago in California. He had drawn an arrow from Miller's neck when he was pretty far gone, and now the poet is very anxious to learn where the man can be found, for he forgot both the address and the man soon afterwards.

The man for whom Joaquin Miller is seeking is no other than W. S. JAMESON, of Port Gamble. Mr. Jameson, who has been logging and milling on Puget Sound for thirty years, is well known, not only in Seattle, but in all western Washington

Mr. Jameson, after mining several years in Northern California, went, in 1859, to Frazer river, where for two seasons he followed mining and packing, and finally settled in Port Gamble, Washington territory, now the state of Washington, where he has since resided. He has engaged in hotel keeping, lumbering, and dealing in real estate. For some years he has been the president and a trustee of THE SEDRO LAND AND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY, with a paid-up capital of a hundred thousand dollars, and having its general office in Seattle, Wash.

Mr. Jameson is a man of great business ability, sterling character, and large wealth. He has the confidence of business men, and the respect of all who know him.

W. S. Jameson

Lilian Vaughn Jameson

For forty years he has been interested in the research of family genealogy, and by his coöperation and generous assistance financially this volume has been carried through the press and given to the public.

Mr. Jameson has two sons, who are wide-awake, enterprising young men, with a fondness for adventure and frontier life, much as was their father in his early manhood.

FRED PATTEN JANESON, in company with his elder brother, Edgar Wise Jameson, and his cousin, Scott Elliott Jameson, from Reno, Nev., was out last summer, 1899, on a tour of exploration. They spent some time in prospecting for quartz in prince of Wales Island, Alaska, but with what success has not been reported.

MR. JAMESON, when a lad, removed with his parents to Oldtown, Me. His opportunities for education were limited. He was reared to a hardy life, became a full-fledged down east lumberman, embarked in the lumber trade, and became one of the largest manufacturers and shippers of lumber on the Penobscot river. Meanwhile he was active in politics and an enthusiastic commander of the state militia. He did much to keep up the old military organizations of the state and to inspire and keep alive a military spirit among the men. As the colonel of a regiment of the Maine militia he was a fine officer, of commanding presence, and maintained good discipline in the ranks. He was appointed division inspector, and inspected the brigade Aug. 31, 1858, with such penetration and fidelity as to receive mention in verse, a few lines of which were as follows:

"JAMESON, whose eagle eye detects Of light or shade the smallest specks, The order of the line inspects, And finds in fine condition."

In 1860 he was a delegate to the Charleston National Democratic Convention, and was always very active in the councils of the Democratic party. In the spring of 1861, while engaged in a large lumber business along the banks of the Penobscot river, in the depths of the forest, the sound of Ruffin's shot hurled at Fort Sumter startled the country, penetrated the woods of Maine, and roused the people of the North to the unwelcome fact that war had already begun. Young Jameson, although a Democrat, was a patriot. His blood leaped in his veins at the indignity done to his country's flag and the assault made upon the integrity of the Union. Leaving his business to others, he hurried to offer his services and his life to the government in its defense against an armed and determined rebellion.

Mr. lameson was the first man from Maine to be mustered into the service of the United States, and as commander of the Second Maine Regiment of Volunteers, he led the first troops from the Pine Tree State to the seat of war. His commission as colonel was dated May 2, 1861. He was with his regiment in the battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861, where his dauntless courage, the masterly handling of his troops in covering the retreat of our demoralized forces, and his holding in check and beating back the fierce onslaught of the famous Black Horse Cavalry of the rebels, won for him and his men the admiration and high compliment of Gen. Keyes commanding the Brigade and of Gen. Tyler commanding the Division.

COL. JAMESON, for his efficient and distinguished service, his marvelous heroism, and control of his troops on this occasion, was promoted. Sept. 3, 1861, to the rank of brigadier-general, and placed in command of choice New York and Pennsylvania regiments. At the head of his brigade he took a distinguished part in the battles of the Peninsula. He was always foremost in the charge. He was the first man to enter Yorktown, and fought with conspicuous bravery at Williamsburg, Mechanics-ville, Malvern Hill, and at Fair Oaks, where it is said he charged along the road toward and carried the stars and stripes nearer to the city of Richmond than any one during that campaign, and in fact, nearer than it floated again until Grant led the legions of the Union army. When full three quarters of a mile in advance, and driving before him the Confederates, the darkness coming on, he received orders to fall back, which he bitterly regretted. ... But for that," he said, ... I would have been in Rahmond that night or in heaven!"

Such was the spirit and the fervor of the man and the great soldier. Gen. Jameson, while doing such splendid service on many bloody fields of battle, was not forgotten in his native state, but in the autumn of 1861 he received the nomination of the loyal part of the Democratic party for the governorship of Maine. But, alas, during the campaign on the Peninsula his health became shattered, and he who had fought so bravely the enemies of his country, was a doomed victim to disease. He refused, however, to leave his command and his duties until the mark of death was on his brow

The following letter, dictated by Gen. McClellan, shows the condition of the gallant Maine soldier, and the appreciation of his services by the Union commander-in-

Headquarters Army of the Potomac,

Gen. Jameson reached home. His brilliant military career was ended, and in the prime of life, with a glorious record, and a future of still greater promise, this statesman, patriot, and soldier failed rapidly, sank away, and died Nov. 6, 1862, at his

And now on each return of Memorial Day a small flag waves above a grave marked by a simple tablet with this inscription, beautiful in its simplicity:

Nov. 6, 1862, AE. 35 YEARS.

Within this honored grave, in this quiet and obscure resting-place, lies the man whom McClellan more than once complimented in General Orders, and of whom the poet Stedman, writing of Kearney at Seven Pines, said:

That story of Kearney, who know not to yield.

'Treas the day when with Jameson, firm Berry and Birney, Against twenty thousand he rallied the field."

And it has been truly written: "When at last the historian of that war shall arise and on fitting pages tell the story of the innumerable battles; when at last a poet shall arise who in fitting songs shall tell of its leaders and their brave deeds, there will be on the pages of the historian, and in the songs of the poet, no brighter name than that of him who lies in his silent grave, overlooking the scenes of his early manhood, the hero of many fights, the honored and lamented GEN. JAMESON."

MRS. SARAH JAMESON CRAIG sends the following reminiscences of her childhood's home which she entitles:—

MEMORY GLIMPSES.

My OLD HOME! How well I remember that sunny little spot in the wilds! The "clearing" of a few acres, carpeted with green, in which stood the little log cahin, with its creviers filled with moss, its roof of spruce bark instead of shingles, its one door and two singlessas windows. Within was a single room, a stone fireplace, with its hearth of broad, flat stones, which half filled one end, where in cold weather glowed the old-fashioned fire, with its great 'back-log' and its andirons piled with smaller logs and sticks, filling the humble room with glowing comfort. In one back corner stood mother's bed, with the children's trundle-bed rolled under it in the daytime, and a table, cupboard, a few chairs, and two chests, all home-made and painted, our father's handiwork, completed the list of furniture, with the addition of a "three-legged stool," cut from the side of a spruce tree, its legs being three limbs said of a "three-legged stool," cut from the side of a spruce tree, its legs being three limbs and off to the proper length, the bark peeled off, the top smoothed, and painted red. This was my brother Gerge's seat and no little prince was ever prouder of his satin-cushioned chair than was he of this rustic contrivance. The older ones felt highly favored when permitted to sit on it a few minutes.

Such was mychildhood's home in the backwoods of Charlotte county, N. B., to which my parents removed when I was eighteen months old, and a happy home it was! Here were born my sister and five of my brothers, and here we all grew up, though not in the log-cabin, which was soon replaced by a framed house, made of the abundant spruce and pine timber, the board's awade with a whip-saw, there being no sawmiller.

Each of the five settlers had one hundred acres of "Crown land," and made a little farm by felling the forest trees, burning them on the ground, then planting and sowing among the black stumps and logs. These unplowed "burnt lands," tilled only with hoe or harrow, often gave better cross than the same lands vielded afterward with better cultivation.

The piling and burning of "the choppings" are among my earliest and most fascinating recollections. How we children delighted to watch whole acres of fame sweeping heavenward, with a rora rad crackle like thunder and hall, as it devoured the fallen timber! and the next day to get ourselves so interestingly smutty throwing brands into the smouldering fires! or later to walk beside mother with a dish of corn or beans, dropping seed while she handled the hoe. Year by year the clearings enlarged, till settlers could see from house to house, and as the forest still receded we could see our big neighbor. Whittier's Ridge, to the southwest, and right opposite our bigger neighbor, Pleasant Ridge, while on the south a line of blue hills marked the course of the Digdequash river. Game was plenty, especially deer and partridges. Many a fine deer father brought in on his shoulders to dress for food. Bears, too, were more plenty than we'come, and often robbed the cornfields or carried off a fat sheen.

My father gave the place the pretty name of Bloomfield, but whether it was too poetic or not, it did not take well, and the settlement became known as "Little Pleasant Ridge."

The settlers were too few to afford a school, so our parents taught us at home reading, writing, and arithmetic, and encouraged to study and master other branches as we eable. Our little shelf of books was my special delight. Passionately fond of study and writing, I made the most of every moment available for such employment, so it happened that I never attended, or saw the inside of, a day school until I was called to teach a little school myself. We had a kitchen Sunday-school in summer, and when the pastor of the nearest church collected the fragments of an old Sunday-school library and sent them to us with a lot of similar odds and ends, what a treasure they were to us!

I used to write rhymes and poems when a girl and occasionally later, and was thought by myself and friends a poet indeed, my highest ambition for years being to see my name set high among the poetical stars of the century; but the dream faded as life with its stern realities took its place, though I never wholly gave up the Muse.

"I am interested in genealogies. Always thought them drier than Ezekiel's 'valley of bones' till I had to print one, THE HAWLEY RECORD, then I changed my mind. You ask a brief 'sketch of my life and work.' I have not done anything as yet worth writing about.

I was born in the New Brunswick backwoods, in a home which my father built, after sawing the boards and joist from huge logs, with a whip-saw, by hand; struggled for sixteen years with a rocky, stumpy farm, for existence; went to school first when twelve years old and attended less than a year a typical 'district school' in an unpainted, unplastered building where 'young ideas,' from six to twenty years of age, and the same in average attendance, were taught 'how to shoot' by the bewitchingest damsel that ever wielded the birch; graduated from the plough and scythe to the composing-stick and the ink-roller, when sixteen years old, which latter occupation has enchained me even until this day

'After working three years in the printing-office of the Calais, Maine, Advertiser, I determined to go where I could learn more of the business, so secured employment in the job printing office of the Lewiston Journal, owned by Governor, afterward Congressman, Nelson Dingley, where I worked five years, during which time I married a neat little Yankee girl, grandchild of one of the pioneers of Lewiston.

"After a brief and pyrotechnic business venture, I returned to the land of the 'Blue-noses,' working about two years in St. John; then in Montreal three years, in Boston three years, in Niagara Falls, N. Y., three years; came to Buffalo in January, 1889, worked in several large printing-houses seven years, then started a small business for myself, which I still continue Have been for thirty years a member of the Baptist church. My wife has been a member of the same church for twenty-six years. Am and always have been a thorough teetotaler, never drank a glass of any kind of intoxicating liquor, never smoked or chewed tobacco, never danced or played cards, and have n't gone fishing for thirty years. I guess that's all.

Respectfully, C. E. JAMESON."

"P. S. My oldest boy, Hugh W., has entered Buffalo University Medical school. He gets some of the opportunities I longed for in vain.

"I've been looking this over, and can't see anything good in it. If you can, in the words of Pat. Henry, 'Make the most of it.'"

THE JAMESONS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

STATEMENT.

THE JAMESONS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE whose descendants are the most numerous and still surviving, were HUGH JAMESON and his brother THOMAS JAMESON of Dumbarton, N. H. There were others of the name who were settlers in the state a few years earlier, but with a single exception have at this writing no known living descendants. But following out the plan hitherto pursued in this volume those earliest on the ground will receive the first mention. So far as there is any known record the first person of the name of Jameson to set foot on New Hampshire soil was PATRICK JAMESON [14], already mentioned among the Jamesons in Massachusetts. He came to Boston, Mass., in 1652, and was admitted an inhabitant of Dower, N. H., in January, 1659, but of him nothing is known after 1665, and his descendants, if he had any, have no discovered record.

About eighty years later there were three persons of the name, viz.: WILLIAM JAMESON [160f], JOHN JAMESON [1647], and THOMAS JAMESON [1648], who appear about the same time in Londonderry, N. H., in that part which in 1742 became Windham, N. H. How these Jamesons were related to each other is unknown, except that John mentions "cousin Thomas of Londonderry" in his will. Only the descendants of William Jameson, so far as appears, survive to the present time.

No. 1606.

William Jameson, parentage, birth, and marriage unknown, resided as early as 1737 in the southeasterly part of Londonderry, later Windham, N. H., where he died. So far as appears,

THE CHILDREN WERE:

JAMES [1607], b. 1736; m. Mary Smith; d. July 27, 1812.
WILLIAM [1608]. He removed in 1779 to Manchester, Vt.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, under date of "London Derry, April ye 19th 1737," was one of eighty persons to subscribe his name to "Proposals of Peace," addressed, "To our Christian friends and Brethren of ye old Congregation in London Derry." They conclude their tender and Christian appeal with these words of friendly assurance: "We are your friends and Brethren in Christ," and to this interesting paper were appended eighty signatures.

It appears that there had been established a few years before a new Parish in the western part of the town, and the necessary withdrawal of those resident in that locality from the old congregation seems to have disturbed the peace of their Christian brethren of the old church.

Mr. Jameson was one who desired peace, and was ready to do all in his power to promote it, and so joined with others in sending a communication in which were stated what seemed to them reasonable grounds for a complete reconciliation and a Christian recognition of the new order of things. Two or three years later he appears the twenty-seventh in a list of forty-nine petitioners desiring to have the south part of London Derry established into a new Parish. This was in 1740. This petition was granted Feb. 12, 1742, and adopted March 8, 1742. The new town took the name of Windham, N. H.

Mr. Jameson's house stood, it is said, a little north of the present site of the Manchester and Lawrence railroad in East Windham, not far from what has been known as "The Whitaker Place." His farm doubtless was the same which James and William Jameson, his sons, sold, and the transaction was recorded as follows:

"William Jameson and James Jameson of Manchester, Vt., sold Dec. 2, 1780, a farm in Windham Range to Philip Haseltine for 2061 Spanish milled dollars."

This farm in 1883 was owned by Isaiah Haseltine, a grandson of Philip Haseltine. The places owned by Mr. L. R. Hadley and by William Pecker, Esq., in the east part of Windham, were once owned by the Jamesons, probably by William Jameson and his sons. Mr. Jameson was a party to transactions in real estate, which are recorded as follows, viz. :

"Deed given to William Jameson Jan. 17, 1742 by James Wilson; Deed given to William Jameson Nov. 2, 1748 by James Campbell; Deed given to Alex Ritchie Jan. 15, 1744 by William Jameson. Deed given to Janes Moore Oct. 1, 1749, by William Jameson. Deed given to Thomas Jameson July 15, 1754 by William Jameson.

At the first town-meeting held March 8, 1742, in Windham, N. H., William Jameson was chosen "Sevear of the Easterly side of ye Parish," and in 1748 he was chosen moderator of the town-meeting, and was also elected first selectman of Windham, N. H.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was chosen, March 21, 1765, constable of Windham, N. H. In 1779 he removed with his family and his brother William Jameson from Windham, N. H., to Manchester, Vt., and shortly after, as already stated, these brothers sold their real estate in Windham to Philip Haseltine "for 2061 Spanish milled dollars." William Jameson, as it appears, was unmarried and made his home in the family of his brother, James Jameson. The farm on which they settled in Manchester, Vt., is still retained in the family and owned by Mr. Jameson's great-grandson, Byron L. Jameson [1622]. It is located in Manchester Centre, Vt.

John Jameson, parentage and birth unknown, was a resident of Londonderry in 1737. There is no recorded mention of wife or children. He died about 1742 in Londonderry.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was contemporary with William Jameson [1606], and under date of "April ye 19th 1737" he subscribed to the same "Proposals of Peace" addressed "To Our Christian friends and Brethren of ye Old Congregation in London Derry," which has already been mentioned. It is noticeable that he signs his name John Jamison, while William writes his name Jameson. It appears that he had no family or nearer kindred than cousins when he made his will, which was dated "12:4:1741." In it he names—

"John son of Edw. Jameson in the Parish of Dumbough, Ireland; Cousin Thomas of Londonderry; Cousin James Cochran; Cousin James Given; Cousin Alex-Jameson; Cousin James Rogers."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, a cousin of John Jameson [1647] it is probable was the Thomas Jameson who sailed July 26, 1738, a passenger on board the ship Lime from Port Rush, Ireland, and arrived Nov. 16, 1738, in Boston, Massachusetts Bay, N. E.

The ship Line of 130 tons was in command of Capt. Gabriel Black. There is given the following account of the passage:

"On the 26th day of July, 1738, the good ship Lime with 123 emigrants sailed from the harbor of brt Rush, bound for the port of Boston. Three days after sailing the ship was leaking so badly they made for land, and put in at the harbor of Killybegs. Twelve days were consumed in making repairs. They again set sail, and were obliged to make for land, and found safety in the harbor of Killway.

sately in the narroot or curway, roughly repaired, but while detained at Galway, John Cate, "The ship was again more thoroughly repaired, but while detained at Galway, John Cate, the master, died of small-pox, and Matthias Haines, the only mate, was so grievously sick of the master, died of the contraction of the contraction of the contraction of the contractors when the delays and misfortunes twenty-five passengers deserted the ship. The contractors employed Gabriel Black for master, and one of them, Samuel Todd, was mate on the homeward voyage.

"They finally sailed from Galway on the nineteenth of September, eight weeks after sailing from Port Rush, and arrived in the harbor of Boston, Nov. 16, 1738."

Then are given names of nineteen of the passengers who completed the voyage, viz. :

Thomas Jameson was named in the will of John Jameson [1647]. He received a deed of land dated July 15, 1754, from William Jameson [1606] of Windham, N. H., where, with his family, he is found in 1764, and March 18, 1776, he was chosen constable of the town. He is mentioned as late as 1784 in Windham, N. H.

THE OLD HOUSE OF HUGH JAMESON.

Starkstown, N. H., 1753.

The above picture represents the old original house built about 1753 by Hugh Jameson [1652], one of the original proprietors and first settlers of the town. It was a low one-story building, the ridgepole running from north to south. There were four rooms on the ground floor, with a large chimney near the centre, occupying space hardly less than six by eight feet. There was a shed for wood at the east side of the house. The surrounding grounds, the trees, the well with its curb, its sweep, its "old oaken bucket and the tree that stood by it," the whole picture, is much as the old homestead appeared twenty-five or thirty years after the house was built; or in 1782, when Hugh Jameson gave a deed of the place in trust to his sons Alexander and Daniel in exchange for a bond for the support of himself and wife, Jane, during their lives.

But later, changes were made, and while the grounds, the two apple trees, the well with its old oaken bucket, and the ash tree that stood by it, remained much the same within the memory of persons now living; and while the windows with the door between them to the north, the two windows to the west, the front corner room, and the huge chimney in the centre, are to-day the same as when the house was first built; yet time has made changes in the place as well as in the people who occupy it; and at the end of a hundred and forty years, in 1893, and at present, 1900, this ancient Jameson homestead appears as presented in the following picture:

THE JAMESON HOMESTEAD,

Dunbarton, N. H., 1893.

THIS OLD HOMESTEAD has a rambling appearance, having grown into its present proportions piecemeal. A hundred years ago, at the least, the roof was raised, the chinney built higher, and some twenty or more feet added to the south end, and the house made two stories, as presented in the picture, so far as the main building is concerned.

At a more recent date the shed was torn down, and quite an addition, a story and a half, made to the eastward, and, later, a large barn, which appears at the extreme east, was erected by Daniel Jameson [1679], a grandson of Hugh Jameson, the original proprietor.

The above view was taken from a position west of north, and shows the front of the house, to the north. The door midway the main house, and the window nearest the front corner, are the same as were in the original house. In fact, the lower story of the northwest part of the main building is the original house, which was put up in 1753 by Hugh Jameson.

This homestead, with additions of lands, outhouses, and barns, made from time to time, was held in the family name, descending from father to son for four generations, a period of one hundred and forty years, from 1753 to 1893, when it was sold by the heirs of Jeremiah P. Jameson [1766], deceased, to its present owners.

No. 1652.

Hugh Jameson was born in the county of Londonderry, Ulster, Ireland, He married 'L'Christine Whitehead. They resided in or near Coleraine. county of Londonderry, until they sailed, Aug. 4, 1746, for Boston, New England. Soon after their arrival they settled in Londonderry, N. H., where Mrs. Christine Jameson died. Mr. Jameson married 2 Fane Barr, and they removed about 1753 to Starkstown, which in 1765 became Dunbarton, where they resided. Mr. Jameson died about 1790. Mrs. Jameson died about 1788.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was of Scotch parentage, and tradition has it that his ancestors emigrated, about 1619, from Argyleshire, Scotland, and settled in the county of Londonderry, Ulster, Ireland. There is also the tradition that his father was William Jameson, a vigorous Scotchman, who served in defence of Londonderry during the siege in 1689, with distinguished gallantry, and fought in the "Battle of the Boyne," July 1, 1690, with such bravery that he was made free from taxation throughout the British dominion by William III, Prince of Orange. Mr. Jameson was by trade a cordwainer, and resided after marriage for some years in or near Coleraine, Ireland, until he emigrated with his family to America. It appears from old court papers still on file that he sailed Aug. 4, 1746, on board the "sloop Molly" from Port Rush, on the northern coast of Ireland, for New England.

Mr. Jameson, on the very day of sailing, gave the following joint NOTE OF HAND:

" Given Aug. 4, 1746, to Robert Gage of Coleraine, Ireland. By Hugh Jameson and Robert Parkinson.

"WE, HUGH JAMESON and ROBERT PARKINSON do bind ourselves, our heirs, Executors, Administrators and Assigns in the full sum of six pounds, thirteen shillings sterling, lawful money of Great Britain to be paid unto Mr. Robert Gage, Merchant of Colerain in Ireland, or his Assigns, to be paid in two years from the date hereof and after our arrival in Boston in America. As witness our hands and seals this August 4, 1746.

MR. JAMESON had with him on board the ship his wife and six or seven children, and it is said his younger brother, THOMAS JAMESON [1979], sailed on the same vessel. There were other passengers bound for New England, among whom are named: Isaac Breaster, Robert Parkinson, John Spear, William Spear, Margaret Vaul, and Elizabeth Woods. Their route was doubtless down the western coast of Ireland, the usual course of ships in those days from the northern ports of Ireland to America.

The "sloop Molty," with fair sailing, must have reached this coast in the early autumn of 1746, and probably landed her passengers in Boston, Massachusetts Bay, as that was the port for which they embarked, although the ship belonged in Salem, Mass.

Mr. Jameson, soon after his arrival in this country, found his way to Londonderry, N. H., where some of his name, and perhaps his relatives, had settled a few years earlier. In 1748 he appears, among others, in the town of Londonderry, N. H., as a petitioner to the Masonian proprietors of unoccupied lands in New Hampshire for the grant of a new township. These petitioners received a favorable consideration, and there was granted to them, under date of Dec. 17, 1748, a township of five miles square of land in amount, located to the west of the "great river," £.e., the Merrimack river, and lying along the northern boundary of Goffstown, N. H. The grantees were Archibald Stark and others, among whom was Hugh Jameson as an original proprietor. The name given to this grant was Starkstown, but, a few years later, by an act of incorporation dated Aug. 10, 1765, it was named Dunbarton, for a place located on the banks of the river Clyde, in Scotland, where stands the noted castle of Dunbarton.

There was ordered by the proprietors and soon made a careful survey of these new lands, and a plan drawn showing the lots in ranges and duly numbered. In 1749 the proprietors were numbered in order from one to eighty, and drew their lots. Mr. Jameson, whose number was "No. 44," drew lot 6, and the south half of lot 7, lying adjacent in the "Third Range."

There is on record an interesting statement in regard to the grants and incorporation of Dunbarton, N. H., as follows:

"Granted by Massachusetts, June 19, 1735 to Capt. Gorham's men, and called Gorham-

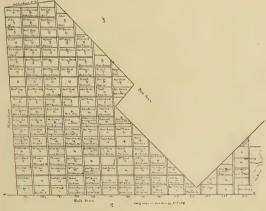

"Granted by the Masonian Proprietors, Dec. 17, 1748 to Archibald Stark and others and called Stark's-town. Regranted March 2, 1752.

"Incorporated as Dunbarton Aug. 10, 1765 and named from a town in Scotland.

"A porton of Dunbarton was included in the limits of Hooksett, incorporated July 2, 1822. "The line between Dunbarton and Goffstown was established Jan. 7, 1853, and between Dunbarton and Weare July 2, 1853,"

[&]quot;PROVINCE OF NEW | Portsmouth Dec. 21: 1749 Voted that this Draft of ye Lots of HAMPSHIRE | Land & Confirmed for the Furpose aforesaid.

GEO: JAFFREY Profits Cl"

Each lot contained one hundred acres, it being 160 rods from East to West, and too rods from North to South, so that Mr. Jameson's draft of Lot No. 6 and a half of Lot No. 7, range 3, was in amount one hundred and fifty acres. Mr. Jameson was continued in the list of original grantees when the new charter was adopted, April 8, 1751. And as appears under date of March 2, 1752, he still held the lots above named, which were adjacent to each other and located at a distance of about a mile to the south from the center of the town.

From certain recorded proceedings of the proprietors of Starkstown it appears that sometime between Feb. 8 and May 1. 1753. Mr. Jameson so far fulfilled the terms of actual settlement on the lands drawn by him as to have his title fully confirmed, and he at once took a prominent part among the early-settlers in public affairs. He was one of the foremost in calling meetings of the Proprietors and in the transaction of the public business. His name appears among petitioners for meetings of the proprietors Sept. 20, 1760, and at subsequent dates.

Under date "Starkstown August ye 20, 1764," he signs a petition for a meeting "To see if the proprietors will sell part of their common land, to build a meeting-house, and choose men to have care of the same and project that affair." Pursuant of this call a meeting was held Sept, 4, 1764, and it was voted to sell the four free iots to the highest bidder. The meeting adjourned to time of sale, Nov. 13, 1764, at one o'clock in the afternoon. At the time appointed there was lively bidding, as each lot was set up from £/100 upwards. The first lot offered was No. 12, First Range, for which there were fifteen bids, the highest being £500, and it was struck off to Capt. William Stark at that price. The next lot was No. 2, in the Second Range, which was struck off to Thomas Caldwell at £605. The third lot was No. 1, in the Thirteenth Range, which was struck off at £405 to Capt. Nath. Martin. And the fourth lot was No. 2, in the Thirteenth Range, which was struck off at £405 to Bond Little. The total amount of sales was £400,0 old tenor. Later, at a meeting of the proprietors held at the house of William Stark, Jan. 22, 1765, in Starkstown, it was "Voted that William Stark, William Stark was "A total dissipation of the proprietor of the proprietor of the proprietor of the proprietor held at the house of William Stark, Jan. 22, 1765, in Starkstown, it was "Voted that William Stark, William Stark was "A total dissipation of the proprietor of the proprietor of the proprietor held at the house of William Stark, Jan. 22, 1765, in Starkstown, it was "Voted that William Stark, William Stark, Jan. 22, 1765, in Starkstown, it was "Voted st

Under date of Feb. 8, 1771, "All the proprietors of Dunbarton are hereby notified and warned to meet at the meeting-house in said town on Tuesday, March the twelfth day of March next at one of the clock in the afternoon."

This meeting was adjourned from the meeting-house to the house of Capt. William Stark, and it was voted "That Robert Hogg and John McCurdy be a committee to settle with the comm tree that sold land and built the meeting-house in said town."

Mr. Jameson, in 1773, was chosen constable and collector of the town of Dunbarton. After the Battle of Bunker Hill, in 1775, although far advanced in years, he shouldered his yeur, served three days, and marched ninety miles under the command of Capt. Wilson of the Continental army.

Mr. Jameson and wife, Christine, had six children born in Ireland. Jane, one of them, died in early life. There were two sons, names not given, who were small boys at the time of embarkation for America, and who died during the passage. It is said that the second one died from grief at the loss of his little brother. They were both buried at sea. The passage was completed without further incident. About two years after their arrival in this country they had a daughter born to them, in 1748, whose name was Molly. Mrs. Christine Jameson died, date not given. Mr. Jameson married prior to 1760, ² Jane Barr. It is probable that she was the second wife and widow of John Barr, an early settler of Londonderry, N. H., whose tombstone, now standing in the cemetery, East Derry, N. H., bears this inscription:

"John Barr Departed this Life Feb. 7, 1751 Jane Barr His Wife Died Nov. 16, 1737."

John Barr married again subsequently to 1742, "Jane —, who was much younger than himself, and whom he left a widow at his death in 1751. Mrs. Jane Barr's maiden name is not given, and her name does not appear on John Barr's tombstone as a second wife. There being no evidence to the contrary, and there being no other Jane Barr known in the localily at that time, it is probable, almost to a certainty, since Hugh Jameson married a Jane Barr that he married this young widow, not over thirty-five years of age, and as her maiden name is not given when she married John Barr, it may have been Jane McHenry, which will account for the tradition that Mr. Jameson's second wife was "Jane McHenry of Scotch origin." There is little doubt that Hugh Jameson married Mrs. Jane (McHenry) Barr, widow John Barr, Mr. Jameson and Jane his wife had six children, who were born in Starkstown, or Dunbarton, N. H., four sons and two daughters. The latter, Peggy and Sarah, died in early life. The four sons grew to manhood, were married, and reared families whose records are given later.

Mr. Jameson and his wife Jane were both living Nov. 15, 1782, as appears from the following bond given by their sons. Alexander and Daniel in consideration of a deed to them of his farm, given under the same date. The Bond and Deed are as follows:

"A BOND FROM ALEXANDER AND DANIEL JAMESON TO HUGH JAMESON:

Memoranda.

MR. TODD was from Raymond, N. H. He purchased land, 1767, in Goffstown, N. H., and made his home with Robert Gilchrist, who had purchased and settled on two hundred acres of land, "Lots 4 and 5 Range Fourth south side of the Piscataquog River in Goffstown, N. H.

Robert Gilchrist was a son of Robert and Agnes Gilchrist of Chester, N. H., and took a deed Sept. 22, 1761, of his older brother, Alexander Gilchrist, of this farm in Goffstown, N. H., on which he doubtless settled soon after. The town was incorporated in 1761, but the record of births, deaths, and marriages dates back only to 1783. It has been thought that Mr. Todd was in some way related to this Robert Gilchrist; at any rate he continued to have his home with him after his marriage to Molly Jameson, and never settled on the land, "lot 9, Range 3, south side of Piscataquog river," he himself had purchased.

Mr. Gilchrist's farm was in the next range north, adjacent to that of Robert Moor. Mr. Todd was a soldier in the army of the Revolution. He enlisted, and was mustered into service as a private July 22, 1776. Capt. William Barron's company, Col. Daniel Moor's regiment, on an expedition against Canada, and was killed while engaged in this service in 1776.

MRS. Todd, by reason of the absence and death of her husband in the army suffered severe hardships, and was put to great straits. She was wont, in later years, to narrate to her grandson, James Moor, of Concord, N. H., the things she did in times of great extremity. She said that on one occasion she "tore up the barn-floor to get chaff to feed the cattle."

Mrs. Todd was left a widow, at the age of thirty years, with two small children. The same year her nearest neighbor, Robert Moor, at he age of thirty-two years, was left a widower with three young children. As time went on it was not stranger, was left a widower with three young children. As time went on it was not stranger, was left as widower with the word of the most offer and fitting arrangement, that Mr. Moor and Mrs. Todd should marry each other, as they did, and the union was very happy. Mr. Moor took his new wife to his home, which was the next house to that in which Mrs. Todd had passed hard and anxious years. They started this newly-married life with a family of five small children, and within a period of twelve years nine were added to the group, making in all fourteen.

Mr. Moor, although a rigid Presbyterian, with many others of the same sect, wisely waived some preferences for the sake of Christian unity, and Dec. 29, 1801, united with the Congregational church in Goffstown, N. H., of which not long after he was chosen a deacon, which office he continued to fill until his death. Mrs.

Moor joined later, March 19, 1806, by letter.

Deacon Moor's father, James Moor, was born 1706, and died Sept. 30, 1755, in Londonderry, N. H. His mother, Elizabeth Gregg, was the daughter of James Gregg, of Londonderry, N. H. They were buried in the cemetery on the hill, in East Derry, N. H.

NATHANIEL MARTIN, who married Jane Todd, the only daughter of John and Molly (Jameson) Todd, resided in Goffstown, near the boundary line of Dunbarton, N. H. Later they removed to Wilton, N. H., where their son, James Martin, was living in 1897, and where Mrs. George Abbott, a daughter of Mr. James Martin, and a granddaughter of Mrs. Jane (Todd) Martin, was living in 1898.

WILLIAM TODD, the only son of John and Mary (Jameson) Todd, was born in Goffstown, N. H. He was well educated, and became a teacher. Subsequently he went to the state of Maine, and engaged in the lumber business. He married Hannah Worthley. She was born April 22, 1775, in North Yarmouth, Me., where they resided until 1811, when they removed to St. Stephen, N. B. Mr. Todd died April 3, 1846, in St. Stephen, and Mrs. Todd died March 4, 1847, in Milltown, N. B. They had ten children, viz.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, with his brother, Daniel Jameson, signed a bond Nov. 15, 1782, to provide for their parents in consideration of a deed given them of the old homestead farm by their honored father, Hugh Jameson. In 1788 they made a division of the farm, their father still living, and in 1790 each came into the full possession of half of the homestead, their father being deceased. Mr. Jameson sold out his interest to his brother, Daniel Jameson, and, with his wife and eight children, the eldest not fifteen years of age, removed to Barnet, Vt., where his youngest child was born, and where his wife died when the babe was but four weeks old.

JOSEPH BROWN, Mrs. Jameson's father, it is said, was reared in Londonderry, Ireland. At the age of nineteen years he came to America, and settled in Chester, N. H. He married 'Martha Otterson. They had five children, only two of whom lived to maturity, viz.: 'Joseph married Elizabeth Curry, of Canterbury, N. H. They lived in Peacham, Vt., and had eleven children. Mary, one of the daughters, wrote an account of the family. Ann married 1 Robert Cochran of Pembroke, N. H., and had two children. She married 2 James Knox of Pembroke, N. H. One child of Robert and Ann (Brown) Cochran died while young, the other, Joseph Cochran, married a Miss Howe, of Deerfield, N. H., and their children reside in Plymouth, N. H.

JOSEPH BROWN married 2 Mary Guy of Allenstown, N. H. They had seven children: Fanet, who married Alexander Jameson; Elizabeth, who married Ezekiel Straw, the ancestor of the late Gov. Straw of New Hampshire; Rachel, who married Joseph Patterson; Fames, a physician, who married Margaret Moore of Derryfield. N. H.: Lydia, who married Nathaniel Nourse, of Chester, N. H.; Mary, who married Zuar Eldridge of Lebanon, N. H.; and Martha, who married Obadiah Hutchinson, of Warren, N. H.

HENRY B. BROWN, a descendant of the above Joseph Brown, and much interested in the genealogy of the Brown family, resides in East Hampton, Conn.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, at the age of sixteen years, enlisted as a private soldier, Aug. 6, 1778, in Captain Lee's company, Col. Moses Kelly's regiment, and served on an expedition to Rhode Island, and was discharged Aug. 27, 1778. He served, also, from Sept. 17 to Sept. 26, 1781, on a march to Springfield, Mass., and received 16s, 10d in silver for travel and provisions, of the selectmen of Dunbarton, N. H.

Under date of Nov. 15, 1782, he gave a bond, jointly with his older brother, Alexander Jameson, to provide for his parents during their natural lives, and in consideration of the same, under the same date, he received from his father, Hugh Jameson, a deed of one half his farm, located in Lot No. 6, in the Third Range, in the town of Dunbarton, N. H. There was no division made, however, until Sept. 28, 1788, shortly before Mr. Jameson's marriage, when it was agreed that his brother Alexander should have the south side of the farm, while he took the north side. Prior to this, April 22, 1788, Mr. Jameson had purchased of James Gauy fifty acres on the north side of Lot. No. 6, in the Fourth Range, and, later, Feb. 27, 1796, he bought of his brother, Alexander Jameson, fifty acres of land in "Lot No. 6 ve Third Range."

Just when his parents died is unknown, but they were both living Nov. 15, 1782, and from some mention it seems that his father, at least, was living Sept. 28, 1788, but probably both were dead prior to Feb., 1790.

It appears that Alexander Jameson sold out his possessions to his brother, and, about 1800, removed with his family to Barnet, Vt., and a few years later to Canan-

daigua, N. Y

Mr. Jameson, by various purchases, came to own the larger part of his father's farm, besides some lands adjacent, so that his landed estate embraced some two hundred acres, divided into woodland, meadow, and tillage. He was an industrious farmer, and his house was a country inn, where the traveling public were hospitably entertained.

Mr. Jameson was a prominent citizen of the town, and to him were entrusted the duties of various offices. He was town clerk nine years, from 1799 to 1803, and from 1800 to 1814, inclusive. He was selectman in 1787, 1801, 1810 to 1814, seven years, and was filling both these offices at the time of his death. He was elected representative to the general court two years, in 1800 and 1813. He was assessor of the direct tax for the county of Merrimack, N. H. It is said of him: "He was a person of much ability, as also capacity for business, and satisfactorily discharged the duties of several important stations, from 1787 to 1814." "That he was a good scholar, penman, and man of business, the offices he at times held and his records as town clerk afford ample testimony."

Mr. Jameson took a lively interest in the religious affairs of the town. When the new meeting-house was built in 1789, he purchased pew No. 16 in the gallery. Mr. Jameson died after a brief illness, July 9, 1814, at the age of fifty-two years, in the midst of his public service and usefulness. A special town-meeting was held Aug. 3, following, and John Gould was chosen town clerk, and John Stinson selectman, to fill the vacancies occasioned by Mr. Jameson's death.

HANNAH JAMESON, a daughter, who was but fourteen years of age when her father died, in later life recalls him with very tender appreciation in a letter which she writes under date of "February the 7th 1857" from Chester, N. H. She mentions that her father, when a young man, taught school, and, later, owned and cultivated an excellent farm, kept a public-house, served the town as selectman, town clerk, and justice of the peace, tithingman, assessor of direct taxes, and two terms as representative to the general court, doing a large amount of the town business. She further characterizes him as a man of solid sense, good judgment, and Christian character, intelligent, of kind disposition, of superior abilities, highly esteemed and respected, a professor of religion, and "an excellent singer of Psalms," and she concludes by saying: "Such were the qualifications of my dear, beloved father, I have not extolled him too highly." This daughter was unmarried. She remained some years with her widowed mother in Dunbarton, N. H., then made her home with her sister, Mrs. Orcutt, in Chester, N. H., and later with a niece, Mrs. Sarah Sargent, in Amherst, N. H., where she died June 22, 1878, on her seventy-eighth birthday.

MRS. JAMESON, whose maiden name was Hannah Burnham, was married on her nineteenth birthday. She was the mother of twelve children, eleven of whom grew to manhood and womanhood, and nine were married and had families.

Mrs. Jameson was a woman of rare beauty and sprightliness, possessed of a very sweet disposition and Christian spirit, a person of great energy and mental activity. She was very skilful with a needle, and in her eightieth year she stitched a linen collar beautifully. She survived her lamented husband thirty-three years, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Orcutt, in Chester, and was buried in Dunbarton, N. H.

Mrs. Jameson's Burnham ancestry is traced to John Burnham, son of Robert and Mary (Andrews) Burnham, who was born in 1617 in Norwich, Norfolkshire, England, and came to America on board " The Angel Gabriel," commanded by Captain Andrews, his mother's brother. There were with him in this ill-fated ship his two younger brothers, Thomas Burnham, of Ipswich, Mass., and Robert Burnham, who settled in Dover, N. H. Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, very soon after his marriage, in company with two of his wife's brothers, Messrs. Brocklebank of New London, removed to what was then "The West," and settled in Canandaigua, N. Y. He was a farmer in that new country, and after years of industry had brought under good cultivation a large farm. As showing his prosperity in 1812, Mr. Jameson built a new and very commodious house, which is still standing, and now occupied by a grandson, Mr. Albert E. Smith, who owns and carries on the old farm of his grandfather, Hugh Jameson.

Mr. Jameson did not live long, only two years, to enjoy his new house. He died in 1814, at the age of fifty years, leaving a widow and eleven children. Mrs. Jameson survived him more than twenty years. Her ancestors, the Brocklebank family, were from Yorkshire, England. The name is sometimes spelled Brockelbank. It occurs in the early records of the towns of Rowley and Georgetown, Mass.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON graduated in 1797 from Dartmouth College, and studied law with John Harris, Esq., and Baruch Chase, Esq., of Hopkinton, N. H. He was admitted to the bar at the April term, 1803, of the Hillsborough County Court of Common Pleas, sitting in Amherst, N. H. The same year he settled in the practice of his profession in Goffstown, N. H. Mr. Jameson came of Scotch-Irish stock, of a family somewhat prominent, and is represented as a brilliant man of large promise. From the few particulars that have been gleaned respecting him, we learn that he was successful in his profession, and was cut off in the midst of his career at the early age of forty-two years, leaving a family of young children, for whom he had fortunately secured a sufficient pecuniary provision for those days.

AN OBITUARY OF MR. JAMESON reads as follows:

He was born Nov. 29, 1787, in Dunbarton, N. H., being at the time of his death 79 years, six months, and eight days old. His early life was one of varied fortune and trial, being most of the time away from his home and its influences. He left New Hampshire at the age of fifteen and went to the town of Peacham, Vt. His education was acquired entirely by his own efforts, and principally after he left his native state. He early acquired a strong love of reading, and had the good fortune to have access to a comprehensive lib-rary at that most critical time in his life, when his habits were forming,—a fact which undoubtedly cast an important influence over his whole life.

He returned to his native town after three years' life in Vermont, remaining there until he became of age, when he removed to Lebanon, N. H.

During his life here his mind first became deeply influenced and engaged upon the subject of religion, and in its contemplation, and reflection upon his past life; the obligation of man to God,-his mind (perhaps naturally conscientious) came under the most terrible conviction of sins, and sank down into almost hopeless despair.

To use his own language-" When my mind became enlightened and I beheld in all its force the solemn truth that I had spent my whole life in sin against so good a Being, the hope that there could dwell in the bosom of a just God one feeling of mercy toward me, almost died within me. But that cloud was lifted, and though, perhaps, it was the darkest hour of my whole life, it had for me a glorious ministry. The light that broke into my mind from the sun of righteousness, the freeing of a burdened soul from such a load; the thrilling conception of the mercy and condescension of the Saviour in forgiving me, gave me such a view of the character of the Redeemer that I never again doubted his power and willingness to save, even to the uttermost."

He was baptized the 18th day of May, 1810, by Rev⁹ Ariel Kendrick of Cornish, N. H., Being then twenty-three years old. He untiled with the Baptist church in the village of Plainfield, and here commenced to tread the long pathway of the Christian life that has now so peacefully closed. Three years later he married and removed to the state of New York, and settled in the town of Riga. Genesse Co. Here in this comparatively new country he sought out a few others and commenced a weekly prayer meeting. Soon public worship was ministers. On the expiration of two years a church was formed consisting of twenty members. Bro. Jameson was chosen clerk and became one of its most active and earnest workers. He came to Avon, Ohlo, in February, 1824.

MR. JAMESON, when a young man, went with his brother, Joseph, to the vicinity of Chill, N. Y., and took up a section of land. After clearing a few acres and making some improvements, he sold this and bought another section within the same county, which became his permanent home while he lived.

He built a good house, barn and outbuildings, having all the conveniences then known in farming. His home always gave a warm welcome to relatives and friends. He was generous and kind-hearted in his family and strictly honest and upright in all business relations. The town honored him with various positions of trust and responsibility which he filled with fidelity. He died much lamented, leaving a widow and a large family of children.

Mrs. Jameson survived him but a few years and the family separated and settled in

THOMAS JAMESON.

MR. JAMESON, when a young man, was much in the family of his uncle, Thomas Jameson, Esq. [1666], who was a lawyer. He was more or less in his uncle's office, and thus acquired a legal knowledge which served him well in later life. Mr. Jameson was a noble specimen of manly strength, beauty, and agility. It is said that once when hunting a deer, he sprang from his concealment among bushes upon the back of the animal as he rushed by him at full speed, and dispatched it with a knife instead of a bullet. A certain implement with buckhorn handle was treasured for many years in the family, as tangible evidence of this remarkable feat. His ideals of moral and manly character were on the loftiest plane. His integrity was unimpeachable, and his goodness was equal to his fine personal appearance. The Hon. Jacob Collamore, late judge and senator of Vermont, who knew him well as a court officer, used to say of him: "Jameson was the best man I ever knew." After his removal in 1823 to Irasburgh, Vt., he was in trade a few years, and in 1826 was elected high sheriff of the county, which office he filled for nine years. He was a member of the constitutional convention held in 1850 in Montpelier, Vt. He was town clerk of Irasburg for twenty-three years, and held other minor offices of trust. He was town treasurer, treasurer of the Bible society, register of probate, deacon of the church, and a justice of the peace. His fellow-townsmen esteemed him highly; he was an upright and Christian man, a model for all in his daily life, and died without an enemy in the world, universally respected and beloved, and deeply lamented.

Mrs. Jameson, the mother of his children, died at the age of forty years, leaving a family of eight children, the eldest but thirteen years of age, and the youngest an infant of a few months. Six of these survived to maturity, and in later years did not cease to mourn the loving Christian mother whose sympathy and devotion seemed to abide with them.

Mr. Jameson's second wife was the widow of Dea. Nathaniel Porter, of Lebanon, N. H., under whose faithful and motherly care the children grew up and became well established in life.

Mr. Jameson's third wife was from Burlington, Vt. She survived her lamented husband many years, and died in Irasburgh, Vt.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON'S father, Alexander Jameson, died under peculiarly sad circumstances, when he was a small boy of ive years. His father was one of several persons in the town seized with small pox, and was removed, according to oldtime custom, to an isolated cabin. His wife, left at home with a young infant, was taken dangerously ill. Hearing of this, and desiring to see her once more, the convalescing husband and father escaped from the "pest house" and literally dragged himself across the fields to his home, and there, through a window, held his last conversation with her. Both died soon after, and the children found homes among friends and relatives. Alexander was taken to Lebanon, N.-H., and brought up in the family of a cousin, Zuar Eldridge. When he was twenty-one Mr. Eldridge gave him his "freedom suit" and one hundred dollars. With this money he purchased a horse and saddle, and not long after went to Irasburgh, Vermont, a "wilderness town," where his next older brother, Thomas, was living. This township was given to Ethan Allen, of "Green Mountain Boys" fame, for military service, and came as an inheritance to Ira Allen, for whom it was named. A few farms were sold outright at first, but at a later date the land was leased, every farmer paying rent to Mr. Allen. Mr. Jameson was fortunate in securing one of the first farms. At that time the public highway, afterward the stage route to Coventry, Newport, and Canada, was not built, and except for one small clearing it was an unbroken wilderness. But with true pioneer courage Mr. Jameson set to work clearing away the primeval forest, and on April 16, 1826. he married Sarah Knowles Locke, and took her to a log house in the midst of his few fertile acres. A vear later he built a brick house, in which he lived nearly forty-five years, and where all but the eldest of his children were born. A few years before his death he sold his farm and removed to the village.

In reviewing his character, we notice among many admirable traits, strict integrity, unceasing industry, conscientiousness, and benevolence. He was a silent man, with a shade of sternness in his manner, but underneath was a rich and gifted nature. With little education, his ability was perhaps more noticeable, and his appreciation of learning was shown by the many sacrifices he made for his children that they might secure mental training. He was one of the first advocates of temperance in the town, and the very first to refuse to furnish liquor for a "barn raising." The neighbox said, "You wont get men enough to lift your timbers if you do n't raish the drink." "Then they wont be lifted," was the reply. But the men came, and the barn was raised without rum. Mr. Jameson was an abolitionist in sentiment, and more than once befriended the poor runaway slaves who took that route toward the North star and freedom. Deeds of benevolence were always done without ostentation. In referring to his obituary, we find this testimony: "He was a thorough, practical man in all the relations of life. As a citizen he filled every office to which he was called," from representative down through the list, "with fidelity, but the monument which he reared as a Christian will abide the longest, cherished by a grateful posterity. There is no other man to whom the people of Irasburgh are more indebted for the blessings of religion than to Mr. Jameson. He had a benevolent heart, a large purse, and a liberal hand, and they were never closed to the wants of the church of his choice." He was called "an old-fashioned Methodist." but surely the outgrowth of his Christian experience would enrich any age.

In 1863 the devoted wife, and mother of eleven children, died. Afterward, Mr. Jameson married Mrs. Martha Geraldine Clark, by whom he had two children. In October, 1871, he was suddenly translated to the country which is out of sight. toward which he had been faithfully and patiently journeying for many years.

MRS. MARTHA G. JAMESON resided, 1896, in Irasburgh, Vt. Her first husband, Amos Dow Clark, whom she married Sept. 26, 1850, son of Rev. Jacob S. Clark of Morgan, Vt., was born June 5, 1825, and died Nov. 19, 1856.

DAVID A. LOCKE, M. D., of Lansing, Mich., a native of Irasburgh, Vt., is a nephew of Mr. Jameson's first wife.

At the age of nine years she was adopted by John P. and Laura O. Smith of Glofford Village, N. H. They reside in Laconia, N. H., and have one child, Harold Jameson, b. May 30, 1900.

HON. CHARLES H. BELL, late governor of New Hampshire, gives the following sketch of DANIEL STARK DINSMOOR: "Mr. Dinsmoor inherited on his mother's side the blood of GENERAL JOHN STARK. He was fitted for college at the Institute in New London, in the class of 1860, and then prepared himself for the bar under George W. Stevens and O. A. I. Vaughan of Laconia. He opened an office in Laconia in 1864, and a year afterward was chosen cashier of the Laconia National Bank, then just organized. From that time he practically relinquished the practice of law. He was Register of Probate from 1871 to 1878: Representative in the Legislature in 1875; a member of the Governor's military staff in 1875 and 1876; and also County Treasurer. At the time of his decease he was State Senator elect for the Fifth District. The surviving members of that body adopted resolutions on

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was nineteen years of age when his father died, and for several years he and his elder brother, Alexander B. Jameson [1678], carried on the farm until his brother died. Later, Mr. Jameson purchased of his father's heirs their claims, and became sole owner of the farm on which his grandfather, Hugh Jameson [1652], had first settled as one of the original proprietors of the town. He continued to cultivate, with persistent industry, these ancestral acres all his life. With no ambi-tions for public office he devoted himself to his chosen occupation and developed the productive capacity of his lands and made improvements on his farm buildings. It was freely conceded that with a scythe, or with a sickle, he could with ease do a half more work in a day than any of his townsmen.

DANIEL JAMESON.

He stood six feet in height, erect in stature. noble in bearing, and sprightly in his movements, polite in manners, and genial in conversation, a man of strict integrity and greatly re-

He lived to his seventieth year, with scarcely a day of illness until the last few months of his life. Jeremiah P. Jameson [1766], his eldest son, who settled at home, succeeded his father as owner of the ancient homestead.

Mrs. Jameson was reared in a home not far from her husband's birthplace; she a young miss and he a young lad attended the same church and the same district school. The two families were neighborly and intimate and it was very natural that early association and attachment should ripen into love and wedded life. She was a person of great beauty and loveliness of character. Her complexion was fair, she had mild blue eves and her cheeks were rosy even to her latest years. And although a great sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism through a long period of years, the flush of beauty did not leave her cheeks nor cheerfulness forsake her spirit. She was always hopeful, happy in disposition, a faithful wife, a devoted mother and self-sacrificing Christian.

Her Memory is Blessed. CAPT. CALEB PAIGE, Mrs. Iameson's great-grandfather. son of Jeremiah and Deborah (Kendrick) Paige, was born Aug. 16, 1705, in Haverhill, Mass. He was a grantee and a principal man among the fathers of the town of Dunbarton, N. H. When the charter of incorporation was granted, Aug. 10, 1765, Capt. Caleb Paige was authorized to call the first town-meeting and was chosen the moderator of that meeting held Sept. 3, 1865. He was appointed, in 1758, captain of Provincials, and received his commission from Governor Benning Wentworth of His Majesty's Province of New Hampshire. Capt. Caleb Paige's daughter, Elizabeth Paige, became the wife of GEN. JOHN STARK, of Revolutionary fame, and her sister, Mary Paige, was the wife of Dea. James Russell, and the grandmother of Mrs. Jameson

MRS. MARY (TWISS) JAMESON.

CALEB PAIGE married, in 1729, 1Ruth Wallingford of Boston, Mass. They resided in Haverhill, Mass.

They had four children, Caleb, Jeremiah, Elizabeth, and Mary, the youngest born in 1738. Mrs. Ruth Paige died in 1740. And later Mr. Paige married ²Mrs. Carleton, and in 1740 removed to Atkinson, N. H., where he came in possession of a large tract of land, extending a mile, more or less, in every direction from the site of the present academy building. In making ready for a removal further into the wilderness to the place that later became the town of Dunbarton, Mr. Paige bargained and sold this wide tract of land in Atkinson for the weight of his wife in silver dollars. It is said her weight was three hundred and fifteen pounds, and the price he received for his land amounted to about five thousand silver dollars. Capt. Caleb Paige was proprietors' clerk for twenty years, from 1753 to 1774, filled many town offices, and May 15, 1775, at the house of John Jameson, by a meeting called for the purpose, he was chosen a delegate to the Provincial Congress. Capt. Paige and his wife, who was worth her weight in silver, lie buried in Heath's graveyard, in Bow, N. H., within a few feet of the public highway leading from Paige's Corner to Concord, N. H.

BENJAMIN PAIGE, Capt. Paige's grandfather, was born in 1640, in Dedham, fiftyseven-miles northeast from London, England. He emigrated in 1660 and settled in Haverhill, Mass. He married, Sept. 21, 1666, Mary Whittier, who died July 29, 1608. Their eldest son, Jeremiah Paige, was born Sept. 14, 1667, married June 2, 1696, Deborah Kendrick, of Newburyport, Mass., and they were the parents of

JAMES & RUSSELL (John, 4 John, 3 John, 2 John), Mrs. Jameson's grand-father, son of John and Joanna (Winn) Russell, was born Feb. 22, 1724, in Woburn, Mass. He married Mary Paige, the youngest daughter of Caleb and Ruth (Wallingford) Paige, and sister of the wife of Gen. John Stark. They had five children, viz.: Jeremiah P., James, Betsey, who became the second wife of John Twiss; Abigail, b. Dec. 10, 1769, m. Dec. 11, 1794, Benjamin Twiss, brother of John, as his second wife, d. Aug. 20, 1843; Achsah.

Mr. Russell was a deacon in the First Congregational church in Concord, N. H. His grandson, Jeremiah P. Russell, E.g., married a sister of George Peabody, the London banker, and resided in Georgetown, Mass.

GEN. JOHN STARK.

JOHN STARK was born Aug. 28, 1728, in Londonderry, N. H. He became a farmer. In 1752 he was taken captive by the St. Francis Indians, but after six weeks he was ransomed. During his stay among the Indians he so won the favor of his captors that subsequently these savages adopted him into their tribe. He took a prominent part in the Indian wars along the frontier. In 1755 he was appointed lieutenant in Roger's Rangers: took part in Abercrombie's campaign in 1758 and in Amherst's reduction of Crown Point and Ticonderoga, in 1750. Early in 1775 he was chosen a member of the Committee of Safety in New Hampshire. As colonel of the New Hampshire troops he took part in the Battle of Bunker Hill; accompanied Montgomery's expedition to Canada, 1775-76; joined Washington at Newton, N. Y., Dec. 1776, and took part in the battle of Trenton. He resigned his commission April, 1777, but was commis-sioned by New Hampshire to raise a force for the defense of the state, including Vermont. He attacked and defeated Col.

Baum, near Bennington, Vt., Aug. 16, 1777, and later fought with and put to rout the forces under Col. Breymann. He received from congress a commission as brigadiergeneral, served under Gates in the Saratoga campaign, was with him in Rhode Island, in 1778 and 1779, and in 1780 joined Washington at Morristown. He was a member of the court martial for the trial of Maj. Andre, and in 1781 was placed in command of the northern department. After the close of the war he retired to his farm. He died May 8, 1822, in Manchester, N. H.

BENJAMIN TWISS was born Sept. 11, 1766, in Chelmsford, Mass. He married May 22, 1792, 1 Phebe Haile. She was born Dec. 25, 1769. They resided in Chelmsford, Mass., where Mrs. Phebe Twiss died Sept. 6, 1793. They had one child, Foseph, b. July 2, 1793; m. June 15, 1816, Hannah Perkins; d. Dec. 16, 1843. Mr. Twiss married Dec. 11, 1794, ² Abigail Russell, daughter of Dea. James and Mary (Paige) Russell. She was born Dec. 10, 1769, in Bow, N. H. They resided in Dunbarton, N. H. Mr. Twiss died March 21, 1830. Mrs. Abigail Twiss died Aug. 20, 1843. They had four children, viz.:

PAIGE TWISS.

Mrs. Mary (Twiss) Jameson. Mrs. Abigail (Twiss) Ryder.

JOSEPH TWISS, son of Benjamin and Phebe (Haile) Twiss, was born July 2, 1793. in Chelmsford, Mass. He married June 15, 1816, Hannah Perkins. She was born March 17, 1792, in Beverly, Mass. They resided in Dunbarton, N. H., and removed after 1830 to Lowell, Mass. Mr. Twiss died Dec. 16, 1843, in Dunbarton, N. H. Mrs. Twiss died Oct. 19, 1860, in Lowell, Mass. They had five children, viz.:

Harriet A. N., b. March 19, 1817, m. May 18, 1836, Justin Kent, d. Aug. 17, 1892; Althea H., b. Jan. 5, 1819, m. Joel Masury; Aligail R., b. Sept. 9, 1820. She died Dec. 24, 1889; Benjamin Paige, b. Nov. 27, 1822, m. May 9, 1859, Sabrina Crowell; John Milton, b. July 13, 1830. He died in the U. S. service, 1862.

Mr. Twiss, in his later life, was disabled by lameness, and invented a small carriage which he could work by hand, and trundle himself about. He seemed to fore-see the day of bicycles, and often said that the day was not far off when people would ride on wheels at a rapid rate along our common roads.

The local paper pays the following tribute to his eldest daughter, Mrs. Kent:

Mrs Harriet A. N. Kent, an old resident of this city, died at her home on Canton street, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoom. Mrs. Kent was born in Dunbarton, N. H., in 1817, and resided in Lowell in her younger days, and afterwards in Andover, coming to this city in Dec., 1848, where she has since resided. She was a very partiotic lady, taking a deep interest in the war, and sent forth to the defence of the country four of her sons, two of them being with the old ofth regiment, one of her sons giving up his life at Petersburg. She leaves a daughter in Jackson, Mo., and two sons, Frank and Clarence, in this city. Funeral Friday at 2 o'clock. Interment in the family lot in Bellevue cemetery.

mand of Col. A. F. Stevens, later the lamented Gen. A. F. Stevens. Mr. Stinson was assigned to the department of Virginia, was in the battle of Fredericksburg, Nov. 24, 1863, and spoken of by his comrades as a valiant and faithful soldier. He was commissioned as first lieutenant in the 10th Regiment U. S. colored troops, and, subsequently, as a captain, and April 8, 1867, was advanced to the rank of brevet major. His continuous service was for the term of four and a half years, and he was mustered out in the spring of 1867. Soon after his return home, he was married to Miss Ella L. Russell, of Water- ' town, Mass.

In the spring of 1868 they removed to Boston, Mass., where for nine years he was a manufacturer and dealer in mouldings and picture frames. In 1877 he closed up his business in Boston, and retired to a farm in his native town. In 1888 he purchased the farm on which Rev. John Bruce settled and cleared of its primeval forests, and which had been for ninety years in the Bruce family.

Major Stinson was a thoughtful man, holding decided opinions on matters of public interest, a ready speaker, and of pronounced religious character. While in Boston he united with the Bunker Hill Baptist church, and served for several years as the superintendent of the Sunday-school. On his return to Mont Vernon, N. H., he transferred his church relation, and became a member of the Congregational church, under whose ministrations his early life had been spent. He served three years as superintendent of its Sunday-school, and in 1891 he was chosen one of the deacons of the church. He was connected with the Post O. W. Lull, of the G. A. R. Major Stinson was a genial and popular man, and his sudden death was deeply and widely lamented.

SAMUEL RYDER, who married, 1821, Abigail Russell Twiss, owned and resided on the old farm homestead of Thomas Jameson [1979] inherited by his son, John Jameson [1982], at whose house was held the citizens' meeting when Capt. Caleb Paige

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, in early life, learned the trade of a house carpenter. When twentyone years of age, March, 1828, he left his native town for a new manufacturing village just springing up on the banks of the river Merrimack, Lowell by name, about twenty-five miles from Boston, Mass. Here for three years he worked industriously at his trade. Meanwhile he was married to a young woman, the daughter of a widow, who resided in Lowell, Mass. The young carpenter, happy in the love of his young bride, after a few months of married life saw her eyes close in death and she was gone forever. Later he married again one who was to him a devoted wife, the mother of his children, and who survived him forty-five years. Soon after this second marriage, Mr. Jameson was employed by "The Locks and Canal Company of Lowell." He continued in their employ for a period of eighteen years, until his death, which occurred after a brief illness of four days. He died in the midst of a useful life, leaving a widow and five children, and a wide circle of friends to mourn his early departure.

MRS. FANNY JAMESON, thus left a widow with five children and an aged mother to care for, continued to reside for some years in the house on Garnet street which Mr. Jameson owned at the time of his death. Here with motherly devotion she brought up her children, with the advantages of the city schools and to habits of industry.

THOMAS JAMESON.

until able to care for themselves. In her later life she removed to Grand street, into a larger house, and made her home with her son, Charles Jameson, her surviving children also living with her. There was observed, April 12, 1877. an interesting occasion by the coming together of her old neighbors and friends to celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of her residence in Lowell. At the age of thirteen years, April 12, 1827, she came, a mere child, to live in Lowell, a new town, scarcely a year old and with a population of about two thousand people. With others who came on this anniversary occasion, bearing congratulations and kindly words of reminiscence, were five elderly ladies who sat at tea about the same table with Mrs. Jameson. The aggregate of the ages of the six was four hundred and forty years, the eldest being between eighty and ninety years. There were present, Mrs. Thompson, a sister of Warren Colburn, Esq., the author of a popular mental arithmetic which bore his name and was in almost universal use for many years in the public schools of New England; Mr. and Mrs. Levi B. Tyng, Mr. and Mrs. John Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Fiske, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Prescott, Mrs. Brown, the mother of Mrs. Isaac F. Scripture, and many other old residents of the city. Rev. Mr. Twiss, Mrs. Jameson's pastor, was present and made some very appropriate and interesting remarks, which were followed by a poem prepared for the occasion and read by the author, which is here reprinted:

RETROSPECTION.

Written for Mrs. Jameson, on the occasion of her celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of her entrance into Lowell, by Mrs. Eliza Currier Poore.

Sing us the songs of the Past! Of the years when life was young! When the rosy hours, as they onward flashed, Their glory around us flung!

Tell us the tales of old,

When the fathers' footsteps pressed
The dewy turf where stands to-day
A city in bright robes dressed!

Call back the ancient days,
With memory's jewels crowned,
Let the music of their vanished hours
In softened echoes sound.

The friend we greet to-day,
Looks back through smiles and tears,
And sees the sheen of her bright, fresh youth
Through the mist of fifty years!

She saw the city's birth; She watched its infant growth; She helped, with earnest hands and heart, Its life and labor, both.

Here was her young life bound By sacred marriage ties; Honored and blessed of heaven they seemed, As Eve's in Paradise!

Here bloomed her children's lives, Making her pathway bright— Filling each smiling, sunny morn, With new and fresh delight.

Friends gathered at her side
With converse grave or gay,
Gracious and graceful welcome, still,
Within her home held sway.

The city of her choice Grew fast before her eyes, And giant mills and stately halls In strength and beauty rise.

But, as the years glide on, Death's angel breaks the band; The faithful lover of her youth Passed to the silent land!

Part of her childish flock
He takes, who gave in love;
Still, 'mid her tears she trustingly
Looks to the home above.

Beyond her mortal view Rises a city rare, Whose Builder is the Lord of Hosts And all her loved are there!

Still speed the rapid years,
Heralds of joy or pain,
Until the links are sixty-three
On life's still length'ning chain.

Softly upon her brow
Time lays his magic touch,
For all he taketh from her now
He giveth overmuch!

Beloved and blest she stands, In age serene and sweet; Round her, three children clasp their hands And all her wishes meet.

Some friends of early days Still linger on the way; But most have passed, with hasting feet, On to a brighter day.

The city of her love
Outspreads beneath her view,
With teeming marts and busy wheels,
Where labor claims its due.

And now she tranquil waits,
'Mid memory's smiles and tears,
While the past shines out with sparkling gleam
Through the mists of ffty years!

Mrs. Jameson's eightieth birthday was celebrated by her friends, of which The Lowell Mail, a local paper, gave the following account:

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY OF MRS. FANNY JAMESON.

A goodly number of old-time friends and neighbors assembled at the residence of Mrs. Fanny Jameson, 168 Grand street, Monday afternoon, to observe the eightieth birthday of that venerable lady. There were present four generations, also friends from Salisbury, N. H., Dracut, Woburn, and Quincy, Mass.

Mrs. Jameson came to Lowell to live when about thirteen years old, and has not been absent from the city more than three months at any time during her residence of sixty-six years here. She can recall many changes in the growth of the city from the year 1827 up to the present date. Mrs. Jameson was the recipient of many beautiful flowers and useful gifts from children, grandchildren, and friends, also eighty dollars in gold, presented by her son. Tea was served at an early hour, after which the company were most agreeably entertained with readings by Miss Adelaide Noyes and one of her pupils, Miss Mamie Kirkpatrick. Friends departed during the early evening, wishing Mrs. Jameson many happy returns of her birthday.

Mrs. Jameson passed a serene and happy old age, in a home of every comfort, and in the midst of the loving ministries of her children, three of whom were spared to her and cheered her declining years. At length the time of her departure came, and the good woman passed on to the Heavenly life. The Lowell Mail, in its issue of Saturday, March 16, 1895, publishes the following appropriate notice.

OBITUARY.

Among those who have recently been called to take the journey "homeward" is Mrs. Fanny Jameson, widow of the late Thomas Jameson, who died at her home on Grand street, March 8, 1895, at the advanced age of 81 years and 4, months. For sixty-eight years she has been a resident of Lowell, and during that long period she has never been absent from the city for three months at a time. In these threescore and eight years she has seem many wonderful things take place around her, and she has always spoken with pleasure of the human skill and enterprise which, during the time, had changed the little town of two thousand inhabitants to our large manufacturing city with a population of more than forty times that number. As a devoted wife and mother, she was always the centre of a family who looked up to her with loving devotion, and her rare qualities of mind and heart, combined with a sincere Christian character, won for her the love and respect of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. As her infirmities increased with her advancing years she looked forward with longing for the summons to enter her heavenly home, and during the last days of her lift, while suffering intensely herself, she was always patient and thoughful for those who cared for her. As the end drew near her peace and happiness increased, and so gently did she enter the valley of the shadow of death that it seemed as if she had but closed her eyes to "lie down to pleasant dreams."

In her immediate family circle, where her beloved presence will be so sadly missed, and in the hearts of the many who were privileged to enjoy her companionship, will her memory be lovingly cherished, thus proving the truth of the saying that "to live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

ABNER KENT, Mrs. Jameson's grandfather, was a soldier of the Revolution. He fought in the battles of Concord and Bunker Hill. In the latter he was wounded. At the close of the war he returned to Westford, Mass., his former home, where he lived until his death, at the age of seventy-seven years, in 1814.

ELISHA KENT, Mrs. Jameson's father, was also a life-long resident of Westford, Mass. Justin Kent, her half-brother, married Harriet A. N. Twiss, the eldest daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Perkins) Twiss, and resided in Lawrence, Mass. Joseph

Twiss was a half-brother of Mrs. Mary (Twiss) Jameson. Vide No. 1679

THOMAS GEORGE WASHINGTON JÁMESON, the eldest son of Thomas and Fanny (Kent) Jameson, remained with his widowed mother about six years after his father's death, and Jan. 18, 1855, left his native city for California. He was engaged in successful mining for several years. During this period he returned home twice. On his second visit to his home, such was the condition of his health that the family physician advised him to remain permanently in California on account of the severity of the climate in New England. Accordingly, accompanied by his younger brother, Charles E, Jameson [1788], he left home March 8, 1862, to return no more. This proved to be the day and month of his mother's death thirty-three years later. The two brothers spent the next five years in mining in the remote regions of Idaho, Montana, and Oregon. Mr. Thomas Jameson's health at length became so impaired that they relinquished their mining and sought the house of a friend, Mr. Thomas Gilkerson, in Walla Walla, Washington Territory, where Mr. Jameson died very suddenly on the night of Dec. 29, 1867.

CHARLES E. JAMESON, the younger brother, after about a year returned to Lowell, where for a period of seventeen years he was a contractor for woodwork on cotton machinery in the Lowell Machine Shop. He retired from this position April 1, 1889. He has invested largely in real estate, erected houses, and for these ten years given his attention to the rental and care of his numerous blocks. He is unarried, and for many years made a home for his now deceased mother and his two surviving sisters.

Frances Jane Jameson, the eldest of the family, has remained unmarried, having been bereft of her affianced in early life.

The following appreciative notice of Mr. Jameson is taken from a local paper of Sept. 13, 1886, Jackson, Mich.:

DEATH OF A PIONEER OF JACKSON COUNTY.

DIED.—At his home in this city, No. 244 West Pearl street, at 6 o'clock this (Monday) morning, JAMES M. JAMESON, aged 75 years and 11 months. Funeral from the residence, at 10.30 o'clock, Tuesday morning.

With this entry closes the record of the long, active, and honorable life of one of the pioneer settlers of Jackson county. He received an academic education, and the earliest years of his manhood were spent in teaching. In the summer of 1835 he came to Michigan and bought a farm of wild land in what are now the townships of Springport and Tompkins, in this county. He returned to New York state, but in the following year again came to Michigan and began to clear and cultivate the farm, upon which he lived for forty years. Among his neighbors in those early days were Nicholas Townley, Judge David Adams, William and Stephen Ludlow, Christopher Pope, Nathan Dean, John Oyer, John and Eben Comstock, and others, whose names appear often in the history of this county. They were a class of intelligent and thinking men who formed a community such as is seldom found either in city or country. Four of his five chi dren survive to revere his memory and to be proud of the stainless name which he leaves to them.

Mr. Jameson was not active in politics and never sought or held public office other than that of justice of the peace and of supervisor of his own town, which offices he held for many years. He was a Republican from the birth of that party. He was a generous supporter of the church to which his family belonged.

During a residence of half a century in this county, Mr. Jameson's name and face became familiar to very many people. He was kind and gentle in manner, yet with sufficient reserve and dignity of character to compel respect. He was a most indulgent husband and father, and for many years his hopes and ambitions have seemed to be for the comfort and welfare of his children. His death was the culmination of the gradual failure of his powers, which began when he ceased active work, some years ago. He lived his life well and died peacefully and without complaint.

MRS. JAMESON, nearly eighty years of age, resides, 1898, with her eldest daughter, Mrs. Adams, in Tompkins, Mich.

Memoranda.

MR. WHITTLE was the proprietor of a large country store in Goffstown, N. H., for many years, and retired, having accumulated a handsome property. He was a man of active mind and good business abilities. The following notice of his wife, Mrs. Whittle, appeared in a local paper soon after her death:

MRS. MARTHA I. WHITTLE.

A notice of the death of Mrs. Whittle of Manchester, N. H., appeared some weeks since, but those who knew her are not quite willing to allow her to pass into forgetfulness without further notice

Mrs. Martha J. Whittle was a native of Goffstown, N. H., the daughter of Thomas Jameson, Esq., a lawyer of that place. In 1826 she became the wife of William Whittle, for many years a merchant in Goffstown, afterwards a resident in Manchester. Mrs. Whittle fulfilled the duties of life assigned to her with a grace and wisdom which her survivors look back upon with pleasure. She held an important place in the community as well as in her

She was a woman of mental cultivation and made herself acquainted with the literature of the times. She aided in the benevolent objects of the day and was ready to meet the wants of the needy. She was, until disabled by sickness, an attendant on the worship of the Congregational church. She felt and acknowledged the claims of the gospel upon herself and left evidence that in later life she accepted the Saviour of sinners and rested upon His promises. Her disease was paralysis, operating upon her for many months, affecting her speech and finally prostrating her whole system. She left four children and many friends to mourn her loss. Mrs. Whittle died at the age of seventysix, surviving her husband five years.

Pembroke, N. H.

The sons were all successful business men in Boston, Mass. The daughter was educated in the Hubbard young ladies school in Hanover, N. H., a boarding school of considerable reputation at that time. In later years Miss Whittle has made her home very considerably with her aunt, Mrs. Cogswell, in Yarmouth, Mass.

Mrs. Ellen (Howard)
Whittle, wife of Henry C.
Whittle, was a daughter of Francis and Amanda K.
(Winter) Howard. She was born April 21, 1836, in Grantham, N. H.

The following notice appeared under date of March 20, 1897, in the Boston Evening Transcript:

FUNERAL OF THOMAS JAMESON WHITTLE.

In the suite of rooms which he had occupied for nearly thirty years at Young's Hotel, was held yesterday the funeral of Thomas Jameson Whittle, who died suddenly on March 17, More than one hundred business men were present. Rev. Leighton Parks, D. D., of the Emmanuel church, Newbury street, conducted the Episcopal ritual. There was no music. Mr. Whittle was born in Manchester, N. H., fifty-seven years ago. He was engaged in the hat, cap, and fur business in this city, being employed as traveling saleman for Moore, Smith & Co. He leaves two brothers and a sister. The body was taken to Manchester, N. H., for bruil, and will be placed in the family lot.

OBITUARY NOTICE.

DIED-In Alpine, June 17th, 1880, BROTHER CHARLES DOLE, aged 52 years, Past Master of Alpine Grange, No. 348, leaving a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

Through all the cycles of time, in every age and clime, it has been the custom for mankind to pay loving tribute to its honored and respected dead. History tells us that six hundred years after Miltiades had led his devoted followers from the heights of Attica against the Persians on the plains of Marathon, Pausanias read the names of those heroes, who, in arresting the westward course of the Oriental empire, had fallen in that memorable engagement.

Every year our own Grand Army of the Republic strew the graves of their fallen comrades with beautiful flowers; so we, having given the right hand of fellowship to the widow and the orphan, and renewed our pledge of friendship and affection, and extended to them our symthe long road, through the dark valley, and across the silent river. Already our charter, our badges, and our jewels are draped in mourning. The silent tear and the saddened faces tell of sorrowful hearts. We shall meet in our accustomed rounds of pleasures and of duty, but that familiar countenance will be seen among us no more, the places that have known him so long and so well will know him no more, forever. What can we say? What can we do to keep green his memory in our hearts more than to bring bouquets and garlands of flowers to our altar, and to beautify the place that he has loved, and by increased efforts uphold and strengthen the institution his strong hand helped to rear in our midst, and around the sacred who may be gathered there.

FRANKLIN C. LUDDEN, the eldest son, married Ellen Virian, daughter of John H. and Amelia (Stansmore) Virian. She was born Nov. 20, 1869, in Mineral Point, Wis., where they resided. They have two children, viz.: Frederic Virian and Homer Fameson, twins, born Oct. 20, 1893.

LEILA MARY LUDDEN, the only daughter, died at the age of nineteen years. She is spoken of as modest and unassuming, but possessed of strength of character and a nobleness of purpose which rounded out her short life with the best results of a welldirected ambition. She was unselfish, loving, and had a wide influence for good over her young companions. "She accomplished her mission, and, having gathered the roses, was called to her reward ere she had time to find the thorns."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON's childhood home was a home of New England thrift, obedience, and purity. He was early put to a trade, with conditions of six months' schooling in the year. But there was awakened within him a mighty passion for learning, and, taking advantage of some accidental physical injury, and his father's failure in business, for which the boy's trade was designed to fit thin, he obtained a release from his apprenticeship and his father's permission to fit for college. He was obliged to struggle with great obstacles, boarding himself and doing almost any way to get on, but in the fall of 1842 he entered the State University of Vermont, with the purpose of studying for the ministry. He graduated in 1846, with college honors, and with somewhat changed views and plans for the future.

The next four years found him at the head of an academy in Stanstead, Canada, meanwhile reading at odd hours a course of medicine. In September, 1850, Mr. Jameson returned to Burlington as a tutor in Latin in the University, and with the ambition to win a professorship, but two years later, when a professorship was offered him it was too late, and he declined it, having now determined on a course of law. Accordingly he entered, Sept., 1852, the Harvard Law school. In the spring of 1853 he returned to the University for a few months as a tutor, and still pursued his law studies in the office of Governor Underwood, and before the courts adjourned for the summer he was admitted to the bar of Vermont.

Mr. Jameson, in company with Mr. Hibbard, a Harvard classmate, in the autumn of that year started for Chicago, Ill., where he arrived Oct. 6, 1853. At that time Chicago was little known in the Eastern states, and, although called a city, was described as "a rude, cheaply built, and dirty Western town," and, while it claimed a population of 60,000, the neighboring cities, perhaps envious, used to affirm that to make up that number Chicago was wont to visit the incoming trains and count all the passengers as residents within its borders.

In the winter of 1853-'54, Mr. Jameson opened a law office in Freeport, Ill., and in the spring of 1856 commenced to practice his profession in Chicago, and established his home, having been recently married, in that part of the city now knows Hyde Park, where he continued to live until his death, and where his family still reside. Mr. Jameson confined himself strictly to the duties of his profession, and did not enter the field of politics, then the scene of intense excitement, although his political sympathies identified him with the Republican party, and his name was mentioned in connection with important offices in the girl of that party.

MR. JAMESON for ten years had made American constitutional history a matter of special study, when in 1862 the state constitutional convention of Illinois convened in Springfield of that state. In this convention there were those in sympathy with secession and anxious to secure the adoption of a state constitution which might be interpreted as far as possible in hostility to the constitution and laws of the national government. Inspired by opinions in which he firmly believed, Mr. Jameson devoted himself from the opening of the Illinois convention in 1862 for the next five years to the preparation of a treatise on constitutional conventions, bearing the title "The Constitutional Convention: Its History, Powers, and Modes of Proceeding." This book has passed through several editions, and is considered the standard work on that subject, commanding most favorable attention and reception abroad as well as in this country, and establishing the reputation of the learned author among great scholars and critics in this and in other lands.

While attending to an extended law practice, and engaged in the preparation of the above-mentioned book, in 1865 Mr. Jameson was elected judge of the superior court of Chicago, the office seeking him, and not he the office, to which he was elected for three successive terms, his service in this position extending over a period of eighteen years, from 1865 to 1883.

The decisions of Judge Jameson are recorded in about one hundred cases, duly reported. These were prepared with diligent research, attention to the trial, and general fairness to all parties. They were written out with extreme care, and always showed an exhaustive consideration of the subject. His decisions have attracted great attention in this country and in Europe, and have been reaffirmed by the courts.

Judge Jameson was for a time a lecturer on constitutional law in the law school of Chicago. He was often called to address learned associations, colleges, and public meetings. He was an accomplished linguist, a diligent student of literature, and contributed valuable articles to the North American Quarterly and other magazines of high standing. He was chosen by Governor Oglesby, in 1887, to represent the state of Illinois at the centennial celebration of the formation of the federal constitution, held in Philadelphia.

Judge Jameson understood well human nature, was cordial in his manner, yet dignified, and always impressed others as a man of profound learning and great force of character. He was a good after-dinner talker. He was then at his best, his wit was the keenest, his repartees the brightest, and his talk was so interesting that other men were happy to listen.

Judge Jameson was one of the founders of the celebrated literary club of Chicago; first president of the Prisoners' Aid Association, of Illinois; actively interested in the Industrial training-school of the state; president of the village of Hyde Park; one of the first to take an active interest in the foundation of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, a member of its council and of its general advisory committee.

He had consented to become one of the lecturers in the University of Pennsylvania during 1800-91, on American constitutional history, but, unexpectedly, on the sixteenth of June, 1890, he expired in his chair, and the end of his distinguished career had come, but after his death there appeared a learned paper on "Sovereignty," from his pen, in the Political Science Quarterly of New York.

Judge Jameson has been classed, by reason of descent and brilliancy of career, with other New England men of Scotch-Irish blood of the stock of Horace Greeley and Stephen 'A. Douglas. He was a great admirer of Webster and Choate, and sustained most cordial relations to, and was highly esteemed by, Charles Summer. As a writer of American law his work lies in a special field, state constitutional law, but as an author he is ranked with Story. Hurd, Cowley, and Kent.

Illinois has had many eminent men: Great statesmen—Lincoln; great soldiers—Grant; great lawyers—Storrs; and, among these, eminent men less widely know, who have given to the Chicago bar a due portion of its fame for learned and brilliant men, who united stability of character. powers of keen discernment, swift judgment, with comprehension of relations, incisive speech, and ready wit, was Judge Jameson. Of the first order of men in Chicago, select in his associations, reserved in his friendships, intimate with few, yet friendly to all, during a residence of nearly forty years in the city of his choice, from the time of his coming to Chicago until his lamented death, his name always stood for honor, for ability, for learning, and for integrity.

MRS. JAMESON is a descendant of an old New England family, the daughter of a physician. Her descent is Joseph Adam? Denison, M. D. (Joseph Adam, James, Sames, Same

Mrs. Jameson resides in the old family home, No. 5316 Cornell Ave., Chicago, Ill. Here all her children were born, except the eldest, who was born in Royalton, Vt., and here her little daughter, Eleanor, and her lamented husband, died. Eliza, the third daughter, a beautiful girl of sixteen years, was drowned July 6, 1881, in White river, at Royalton, Vt., while spending a summer vacation in her mother's old home and native town. The father and two daughters lie buried in Oakwood cemetery, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Jameson has with her the three surviving children: Mary is the supervisor of drawing in Chicago schools; John Alexander is a successful lawyer, having succeeded to his honored father's practice, and Rebecca, the youngest of the family, is a student of art in the Chicago Art Institute.

MR. JAMESON died suddenly at his home near Laveaga Heights, Santa Cruz, Cal. For several days he had been suffering from heart trouble, but it was thought his ailment was not of a serious nature. During the day he partook of a hearty dinner given in honor of his wife's birthday, at which several friends were present. Later he went out into his field and was suddenly taken ill and went into the house to take some medicine. Soon the glass into which he was pouring the medicine was heard to drop on the floor. A gentleman hastened into the room, and Mr. Jameson was caught just as he was falling. No sooner had he been placed on the floor than he passed away.

The deceased leaves a widow, and one son who resides at Boulder Creek. Mr. Jameson was a brother-in-law of D. M. Locke of Scotts Valley, Cal.

About ten years ago, just before the boom, he purchased the land on which he resided for $4,000. Soon afterward he sold a part of it to the late J. V. De Laveaga for more than the entire tract had originally cost him, and had about fifty acres of bottom land left.

The deceased was an honest citizen, and held in the highest esteem by all who were acquainted with him. The cause of death was heart failure.

MR. LOCKE is a master mechanic, and had a farm of twelve hundred acres. about six miles from Santa Cruz, Cal.

MRS. LOCKE, at the time of her death, is thus characterized,-

A TRUE WOMAN

Notwithstanding occasional startling exceptions, it is still true that strong and sterling characters are, as a rule, better developed in a rural community than elsewhere. hardships, great, yet not too great, which environ the young people upon most of our farms seem to put iron into the blood, and substance into the fibre, and thus to build up manhood and womanhood into a moral and mental, as well as physical structure, superior to the results seen under other conditions. That is why Vermont sends out to the rest of the country so many that through their lives reflect honor upon their birthplace. It is unseemly to boast, even where there is much that might be vaunted, but we at least, who are not to the manor born, may say some things of our adopted state that might not become the pen of a native citizen. It is surely a fact that Vermont is, and always has been, rich in fine characters, so rich that she sows them broadcast over the continent, in every place to stand out as bright lights whose beams shine back upon us to irradiate the onward track of each succeeding generation. These thoughts rise up in connection with the sad news of the death of an Orleans county farmer's daughter, a finely engraved portrait of whom comes to us in a number of the Pacific Rural Press, the leading agricultural journal of California. This picture of Mary Jameson Locke is accompanied with a biographical sketch, and a series of reprinted excerpts from her writings during the years of her connection with the Press. We reprint the notice, as follows:

"Mrs. Mary Jameson Locke (Mary Mountain of the Pacific Rural Press), was born in Irasburgh, Vt., June 11, 1831, of parents of Scotch descent, as the name indicates, who tilled the soil; was educated in the common schools and academies of her native state, in the latter by her own efforts, and, after teaching several terms, in 1852 came to California, and in the same year was married to D. M. Locke, then of San Francisco, now of Santa Cruz. She leaves two children, a girl and a boy, now at the university in Berkeley. From girlhood Mrs. Locke possessed a very ready pen, a style at once easy and pleasing, and eagerly devouring all the books and magazines that came within her grasp, it was soon recognized by her early teachers and friends that she was endowed with unusual powers. Many of her early letters to friends fortunate enough to receive them fairly sparkled with wit, humor, and sentiment run wild, and she was often urged to permit their publication, but without avail. She occasionally contributed to the general press, until the carnest appeals of the publishers of the Pacific Rural Press induced her to become a regular contributor. Of the charm, truth, and real value of her articles we need not speak, for the old readers of the Rural will remember them well. Of the esteem in which she was held by the Home Circle we need but say that, wherever we have been, through the length and breadth of the state, our readers have testified to the value of the 'Farm House Chats,' and their appreciation of the writer. As a companion and friend she was always bright and cheerful, incessant in her efforts to please and make happy, and never tiring of serving her friends, giving up freely any and everything for their comfort and enjoyment. And the home of such a woman, such her home hearth were always kept at full glow. Her own life has such as woman with that of her children, and taking them to the university at Eerkeley last month and seeing them entered has been her last work—a work in which it would seem some supernatural power must have come to her aid in wonderfully prolonging her life until this was done."

OBITUARY.

ZUAR ELDRIDGE JAMESON.

ZUAR ELDRIDGE JAMESON, who died in Irasburgh, Orleans Co., Vt., Monday, 4th, aged fifty-one years, was a well-known writer and lecturer on agricultural topics, whose initials, with transpositions of the same, as well as other pseudonyms, are familiar to readers of the agricultural papers, particularly the New York Weekly Tribine, Albany (N. F.) Country Gentle-man and Boston Cultivator. He was a member of the lower branch of the Vermont legislature in 1878, and of the state board of agriculture in 1870-'74; for many years secretary of the Orleans County Agricultural Society, and for one or two years lecturer of the Vermont State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry. Aside from the large amount of purely agricultural matter written, he was a frequent producer of short sketches of fiction, usually treating of rural life. He was associated with Dr. T. H. Hoskins in the editing of the old Vermont Farmer (not the present Vermont Farmer), at Newport, which was from a literary standpoint the most successful of Vermont agricultural journals. Born in Irasburgh, on the farm on which he died, his entire life was spent as a farmer, energetically and persistently devoting brain and muscle, in a spirit of broad, Christian philanthropy, to the service of his fellowfarmers and fellow-man

Mrs. Jameson, after her husband's death, resided with her daughter, Mrs. Smith, No. 88 Park Ave., Woonsocket, R. I.

Mrs. Betsey G. (Da Costa) Wilcox's father was Joseph Da Costa, who fled from Portugal, in 1810, on account of a revolution.

MR. JAMESON acquired a good education, and was for several years a teacher in the public schools of his native state. Like his grandfather, he was a good penman, and taught writing-school. But the occupation which was his life-work, and in which he excelled, was farming. He took, at the state agricultural exhibit, the first premium,

JEREMIAH PAIGE JAMESON.

$50 in gold, for general farm products, three successive years, while to him were awarded many other premiums on individual productions. He was an enthusiastic farmer, and made great improvements on the ancestral lands which he cultivated

He succeeded his father on the old homestead of which Hugh Jameson, an original proprietor of the town, his great-grandfather, came in possession in 1748, and settled upon in 1753. This remained in the Jameson name one hundred and forty-five years. It was sold by Mr. Jameson's widow not long after her husband's death, in June, 1803, to Mr. Moody Jones, now deceased, and is occupied by his family.

Mr. Jameson served many years as superintendent of the public schools in the town, and filled other positions of public trust. His death occurred Sunday evening, Jan. 10, 1892. The Boston Evening Journal of the following day made appreciative mention of him as "a prominent citizen of Dunbarton, N. H. MRS. JAMESON, after the sale of the old homestead, removed from town, and resides with her two daughters in Ouincy, Mass.

ELMINA MAY JAMESON, the elder daughter, was for some years a teacher in the schools of Quincy; meanwhile she made a special study of vocal music, and for several years she has been a director of music in the public schools of Milton, Plymouth, and the city of Woburn, Mass. She is also a member of the faculty in the American Insti-tute of Normal Methods. Her career, in this department, has been one of eminent success, so that her service has been sought in Chicago, Ill., and other cities by the offer of large salaries, but she still continues her work in Woburn and Plymouth, Mass., and in the American Institute, which holds summer sessions in Chicago, Boston, and other places.

Memoranda.

MR. KIMBALL spent his early boyhood in Ipswich, Mass., but returned to his native town in 1840. He received a good education in the public schools, and was himself a teacher. His father was a house carpenter and builder, of whom Mr. Kimball learned the trade, and became his associate in business, while his father lived, for more than twenty years. Soon after his removal to Concord, N. H., he became a contractor and builder, having a steam-mill for the manufacture of lumber. He carried on a large and successful business, and was the contractor for the receition of some of the finest houses and most costly finished buildings in the city and in the county. He retired from business only a short time before his death.

Mr. Kimball, while resident in Dunbarton, N. H., was a valued citizen of the town, and active in the church. He served four years in the office of town clerk, and one year on the board of selectmen. On his removal to Concord, N. H., his sterling character and excellent ability received speedy recognition. He was chosen a deacon in the South Congregational church, the largest and most influential church in the city. He filled this office with great acceptance, until failing health compelled his resignation. Under date of June 3, 1895, the following announcement of his death appeared in the daily papers of the city:

Deacon Kimball was much above the average man in intellectual ability, business capacity, and sound practical judgment of men and measures. His life was one of sweet simplicity, and was remarkable for the wealth of affection and care which he bestowed upon his family during his almost forty years of married life, and down to the close of his earthly career. He was a contractor and house builder, and in all his business relations and connections proved himself to be not only an upright and useful citizen, but a man of strict business integrity, honored and respected by all with whom he was associated.

In the church he was a tower of strength and a sustaining and comforting ally of his pastor. He was for several years one of the leading members of the South church in this city, and for many years one of its deacons, and his affections seemed to centre mainly upon his family and his church. Of retring disposition, of gentle yet dignified mien, of industrious habits, and a heart and soul full of religious zeal for one and affection for the other, his last thought and prayer that went up to the throne of his Heavenly Father were that his church should prosper and perform all its legitimate work on earth, to the final redemption of the world.

dence, No. 3 Liberty street, Rev. Mr. Dewey officiating.

Mrs. KIMBALL, whose death took place more than two years before that of her husband, was a person of rare personality. She held the pen of a ready and interesting writer; a lady of queenly dignity and presence, self-possessed and impressive on occasions in public address, domestic in her habits, a devoted daughter, an affectionate sister, a faithful wife, a loving mother, a consecrated and active Christian woman.

Mrs. Kimball's death and funeral were announced in the daily papers of the city as follows:

Sarah, J. wife of Charles Kimball, died at her home on Monday afternoon, aged 6z years. She was a native of Dunbarton, and came to this city twenty years ago. She was a member of the South church, and endeared to a large circle of friends. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Annah J. Kimball; there brothers, Rev. E. O. Jameson, of Millis, Mass., T. Henry Jameson of this city, Benj. T. Jameson of Weare; and one sister, Mrs. M. A. Marshall of Oil Mills. The funeral will occur from her late home, 3 Liberty street, on Thursday, at 1z o'locks. Friends are invited.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah J., wife of Charles Kimball, who died on Monday last, occurred vesterday at 12 o'clock m, at her late home, 2 Liberty street, Rev. H. P. Dewey officiating. The service was very impressive, the tribute given to the life and character of the deceased by her pastor finding universal response in the heart of the large concourse of friends and neighbors gathered with her immediate family and relatives to pay her the last loving respect possible on earth. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful. The three surviving brothers of the deceased, Rev. E. O. Jameson, T. Henry Jameson, and B. T. Jameson, with brother of the bereaved husband, D. B. Kimball, acted as bearers. The South Congregational church choir rendered touching and appropriate musical service. The remains were laid in Disson Hill cemetery. Dea. Frank Coffin superintended the obsequés.

At the annual meeting of the Female Charitable Society of Concord, held Jan. 3, 1893, the recording secretary, in her report, made reference to Mrs. Kimball as follows:

October 3, Mrs. Chas. Kimball faded with the fading leaves, after months of suffering so cheerfully borne as to be a benediction. We all remember the fine, calm face and dignified manner, the outward symbol of the beautiful inner life, and while our hearts go out in sympathy to her sorrowing family, we grieve for our own loss, not as Rachel, refusing to be comforted, for we know that of such is the kingdom of heaven.

Annah Jameson Kimball was educated in the public schools of Concord, N. H., and graduated in 1884 from the Abbott Female Seminary, Andover, Mass., where she was subsequently for several years engaged as a teacher. She resides at the pleasant home, No. 3 Liberty street, Concord, N. H.

MR. JAMESON, when a lad of fourteen years, left his home, April 10, 1846, and went to live with the uncle for whom he was named, in Chester, N. H., where he attended a private school. He completed his preparation for college by a year's study at the academy in Gilmanton, N. H., and entered Dartmouth College, N. H., in 1851, from which he graduated in 1855. While a member of college he taught school in Dunbarton, in Mont Vernon, in Claremont, and the fall after graduation he taught the academy in Bristol, N. H. In the late autumn of 1855 he entered the Theological Seminary, Andover, Mass., from which he graduated, August, 1858. In connection with graduation exercises, The Fifteth Anniversary of the Seminary was celebrated, and in the midst of the services, which were held in a large tent, it was announced that submarine telegraphic communication between this country and England had become a fact. At which the vast concourse burst forth into singing "Praits God from Whom all Blassings Flow." It was an electric moment. After this doxology all bowed their heads in prayer, led by Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D. D., of Boston.

Mr. Jameson, after graduation from the Seminary, supplied the pulpit in East Concord, N. H., for three months. During this time he was married, in Gilmanton, N. H., by the Rev. Roger M. Sargent, then pastor of the Congregational church in that town. Having completed the three months' engagement, he was called to a permanent settlement, but declined the call, and removed with Mrs. Jameson to Chester, N. H., where they remained until the following August, Mr. Jameson meanwhile supplying pulpits in Randolph, Concord, Mass., and in other places. By the urgent request of the people they returned in August, 1859, to East Concord, N. H., where he was ordained and installed March 1, 1860, the pastor of that church. After a ministry of six years he resigned to accept a call to the Union Evangelical church of Salisbury and Amesbury, Mass., where he was installed Nov. 9, 1865, and remained until the spring of 1871. In the fall of that year he accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Church of Christ, in East Medway, now Millis, Mass., and was installed Nov. 15, 1871, and after more than twenty-one years of service he closed his pastorate May 15, 1893, and giving up housekeeping, went with Mrs. Jameson to reside with their eldest daughter's family, Dr. and Mrs. Greene, in Boston. Since then to the present he has supplied pulpits in Boston and vicinity, as his service was needed. He was appointed Oct. 18, 1894. Supervisor of the Emerson College of Oratory in Boston, which position he continues to fill. In 1887 he spent some months in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

Mr. Jameson is a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, the South Carolina Historical Society, and the American Historical Association. He has published the following historical and genealogical books, viz.:

A Discourse Preached on the Occasion of the One Hundred and Sixty-Second Anniversary of the First Church of Christ, Medway, Mass, Oct. 1, 1876, pp. 86. A Memorial Sketch of Rev. William Cagnuell, D. Mrs. Mary Joanna (Cogswell) Jameson.

MRS. JAMESON, daughter of Rev. William Cogswell, D. D., of Boston, and granddaughter of Rev. Jonathan Strong, D. D., of Randolph, Mass., was educated in the academy, Gilmanton, N. H., from which she graduated in 1851, and subsequently was a teacher of the French language in the same institution for several years. Her only brother died while a member of the Senior class of Dartmouth College, in 1848. Her father died in 1850, and her mother died in 1857. She had one sister, who survives her, Caroline Strong Cogswell, now Mrs. John M. Crane, of Millis, Mass.

Mrs. Jameson was a woman of rare endowments, of great loveliness of person and of character, and of an eminenty useful life. She was for many years a sufferer from ill health, but an example of fortitude and patience and sweetness of disposition. She won all hearts by her spirit of gentleness, modesty, and glad self-sacrifice for others' happiness. It seemed to her the greatest pleasure to serve and help those about her, and she is remembered most kindly by those who had known her in earlier life, as well as those associated with her in later years. This is reflected in the notices of her death published in the local papers of Concord, N. H., in which city she had resided thirty years before. From one of the leading dailies of Monday, March 8, 1897, is clipped the following:

OBITUARY.

Late Saturday afternoon, the 6th, the sad intelligence of the death of the wife of Rev. E.O. Jameson, was received by relatives here. Mrs. Jameson, who has been out of health for many months, died on Saturday morning at the residence of her eldest daughter, Mrs. Dr. E. M. Greene, 49 Hancock street, Boston, with whom Mr. and Mrs. Jameson have made their home for the last few years.

Concord people will kindly remember Mrs. Jameson as the estimable and accomplished wife of the pastor of the East Concord Congregational Church for some six years previous to and after the troublesome times of '61. She was the daughter of the late Rev. Dr. William and Joanna (Strong) Cogswell, and was born in Boston, June 6, 1832, and was therefore in the 65th year of her age.

In the three pastorates of Mr. Jameson, covering a period of nearly forty years, in East Concord, Salisbury, Mass., and Willis (formerly East Medway), Mass., this loving wife was the fathful helpmet and advising companion. Self-forgetful, and ever thoughtful of others, instantin neipineer and advising companion. Set-forgettin, and ever thoughtin of others, she was greatly beloved in every community where she dwg eff. Lene of Boston, Miss Caroline Cogswell Jameson of Bradford, Mass., and Mrs. Mary Lewis of Newburyport, Mass., survive her. Two sons have died. Arthur Orcutt, a graduate of Harvard, died Sept. 30, survive her. Two sons have died. Arthur Orcutt, a grauuae or narvatu, used Sept. 59.

The funetal will occur at the home, 49 Hancock street, Boston, Tuesday, March 9, at 11.

A.M. The remains will be brought to Concord on the afternoon train for interment in Blossom Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Jameson's death occurred on the early morning of Saturday, March 6, 1897. Her funeral took place the forenoon of the following Tuesday, the service being conducted by Rev. R. K. Harlow of Medway, Mass. The burial was in the afternoon of the same day, in Blossom Hill Cemetery, Concord, N. H. The prayer of committal was offered by Rev. F. D. Ayer, D. D., pastor of the North Church in that city. The Congregationalist, under date of March 18, 1897, contained the following:

MRS. MARY JOANNA COGSWELL JAMESON,

The wife of Rev. E. O. Jameson, died on Saturday morning, March 6, in Boston, Mass. Mrs. Jameson was born June 6, 1832, in Boston. Her father was Rev. William Cogswell, D. D., at that time secretary of the American Education Society, later professor, in Dart. mouth College, and a well-known writer on historical subjects. Her mother was the daughter of Rev. Jonathan Strong, D. D., of Randolph, Mass. She was blessed with a pious and the Christian nurture. Her mental endowments were superior, her disposition sweet, and the fruitage of her life rare.

She married, Sept. 20, 1858, Rev. E. O. Jameson, and for thirty-five years was the devoted wife of a pastor, and rendered valuable service in the churches where her life was cast. Always kind, discreet, and sympathetic, she was a trusted adviser and a valued friend

Mrs. Jameson had an abiding confidence in God that "His way is perfect," and in bereavement her serenity and fortitude were a surprise and an example. Her sweet face told, even the stranger, of suffering and patience and hope. Her self-sacrificing thoughtfulness for others characterized her to the last. The few closing days of her life were made wearisome by intense physical pain. She was aware that the end drew near, and said a loving good-by to friends at her bedside, in calm assurance of the rest that remaineth.

To those who saw her placid face in its repose, when all was over, the favorite epitaph of Christian martyrs, found in the Catacombs of Rome, had a wonderful appropriateness:

"A sweet soul who sleeps in peace."

The funeral service was at the house of her oldest daughter, Mrs. Edward M. Greene of Boston, on Tuesday morning, March 9, and on the afternoon of the same day her body was laid to rest in Blossom Hill Cemetery, Concord, N. H., in a beautiful spot overlooking the valley of the Merrimack, with the raral church in view across the river, where her husband commenced his ministry about the time of their marriage, and in which her first born, Arthur, was baptized, whose early and lamented death, soon after graduation from Harvard with the highest honors, in 1881, brought crushing sorrow to loving hearts. And now the mother lies beside her son in the hallowed spot, while the husband and three daughters survive to mourn their unspeakable loss. R. K. H.

ARTHUR ORCUTT JAMESON, the eldest of the children, was born in Concord, N. H. He attended the public schools until fourteen years of age. In the autumn of 1873 he entered the Roxbury Latin School, Mass., to prepare for college. He completed the course in four years, going by train from home each school day, a distance of twenty-five miles, making fifty miles of travel daily. He graduated in 1877, holding the highest rank in his class. Always a thoughtful and conscientious boy, at the age of sixteen years he recognized by his own public act the consecration which his parents had made of him to the Lord in infancy, and Nov. 7, 1875, united with the First Church of Christ, of which his father was the pastor, in East Medway, Mass, His life and character as a Christian, combined with fine scholarship and great modesty of manner, won for him great respect and made his influence wide and commanding. He was admitted in 1879 to Harvard College. On his entrance examinations he received honors in Latin, Greek, and Mathematics, and commenced his college course Sept. 27, 1877. At the end of the first year his standing was accounted the highest in his class, and he was awarded the First Detur. He graduated June 29, 1881, the first scholar in his class, and received "Sommos Honores in Linguis"

Classicis." Soon after graduation he was appointed Teacher of Classics and Mathematics in the ARNOLD SCHOOL, New York City. But a few days before he was to enter upon the duties of this position, he was taken ill, and at the end of sixteen days he passed on to a higher life and a Heavenly service. He died Friday evening, Sept. 30, 1881, at home, at the age of twenty-one years. Funeral service at his father's house was conducted by Rev. Mr. Harlow of Medway village, on Tuesday afternoon. Another service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Ayer at the house of Deacon Kimball, his uncle, in Concord, N. H., on Wednesday, and his burial took place at noon of the same day, Oct. 5, in Blossom Hill Cemetery of his native city. His last earthly resting-place is a lovely spot, overlooking the village of his birth, the church of his childhood, and the beautiful Merrimack, upon whose banks much of his boyhood was spent.

REV. MR. HARLOW, in his remarks at the funeral service, among other things said: "Most conspicuous among his virtues we would mention his faithfulness; duty was his king. And next we mention modesty, that made him win and wen's his honors with consummate grace; and then a native kindliness that made his friendships deep and tender, and filled his soul with charity, 'that thinketh no evil.' And then purity of thought and deed, that stamped its credentials on his clear, honest face, and over all an unobtrusive piety that graced and softened his whole being. He has taught us all how to put value into our living, and hope into our death.

"He has emphasized the fact that scholarship and politeness suit well together, and that culture and piety have no antagonisms. He has refuted the too commonly accepted college opinion that religion and stupidity are boon companions by coupling the most brilliant scholarship with a sincere piety.

"And so, with these comforting memories of his life we carry our thoughts beyond this sad and strange present into the future. We believe that our dear young friend has entered into God's rest; his life of purity, and conscientiousness, and fidelity, and consecration, his thorough goodness in all the relations of life, leave us no room for doubt that the gates of the city of God were glad to open for his incoming, and that the Master whom he served gave him a hearty welcome, 'Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." REV. GEORGE A. GORDON, D. D., then of Greenwich, Conn., and now pastor of the Old South church, Boston, Mass., wrote to his parents as follows:

"Greenwich, Oct. 8, 1881.

"Mr. AND Mrs. JAMESON:
"Dear offlicted, though unknown, Friends:—
"I have just learned, with deep sorrow, of the death of my admired and much respected class-mate. Arthur Orcutt Jameson. I am so much pained and shocked by the sad news that I cannot forbear offering you my sincere and sorrowful sympathy in your great grief. Mr. Jameson and myself had, in part, the same elective studies for two years, and from what I saw of him, in the class-room and elsewhere, I had acquired a profound admiration for his scholarship, and an affectionate appreciation of his elevated and manways deeply interested in him, and so knew him much better than he knew me. His memory is, and will be, to me a constant inspiration in thought. principle, character, and devotion. In accuracy and comprehensiveness of intellect, and in rational power of acquisition, I never knew his superior, scarcely his equal. At this moment, as I think of his massive and serene face, now still in death, I am burdened with a personal sorrow, and cannot but feel, 'How is the strong staff broken and the beautiful rod.

"Yours with great respect and true sympathy,

CAROLINE COGSWELL JAMESON.

"GEO. A. GORDON. CAROLINE COGSWELL JAMESON, the second daughter, was born at Salisbury Point, now Amesbury, Mass. She attended the public schools, and graduated July 3, 1883, the valedictorian of her class, from the high school, Medway, Mass. She then taught a primary school one year in East Medway, and in the autumn of 1884 entered Smith College, Mass., from which she graduated in 1888. After graduation she was appointed teacher of mathematics in Bradford Academy, Mass., which position she continues to fill. In 1896 she traveled in England, Scotland, and on the Continent.

MR. JAMESON, in June, 1854, at the age of seventeen years, entered a printingoffice in Claremont, N. H., but in December of that year he became an apprentice in the office of The New Hambshire Statesman, Concord, N. H., McFarland & Jenks, publishers and proprietors, having served his apprenticeship and remained as journeyman until Dec., 1860. The next six years he was foreman and contractor in the printing department of The Independent Democrat. In 1867 this paper was merged with The Monitor, and Mr. Jameson was foreman in the new establishment until Jan., 1870, when he reëntered The Statesman office as foreman in the book department, where he remained for thirteen years, and during this period, for at least seven years, he had the entire supervision of the book printing for the state. From Dec., 1882, to July, 1885, he was engaged in the book and job-printing office of Evans, Sleeper & Woodbury, now the office of Ira C. Evans. He then accepted a position in the office of The Teophe and Patriot, with which he is still connected in the book and job department of that establishment.

During the last twenty years he has built up and carried on a flourishing business as an advertising agent, and written numerous articles for newspapers. He has edited and published the twentieth annual issue of an eight-paged paper called The Christ-mas Newshoy, for the benefit of the newsboys of Concord. And, to-day, after forty-five years of continuous service in a printing-office, at the age of sixty-two years, Mr. Jameson is hale and hearty, and each morning goes to his office and does a full day's work in his printing and advertising business.

In 1877 he united with the Pleasant Street Baptist church of the city, and served several years as the superintendent of its Sunday-school. Without ambition for political prominence or official position, he has fulfilled a busy life of industry and great usefulness.

Mrs. Jameson and her daughter have both acquired the art of typesetting, and at times have served with skill and efficiency in the printing-office. Mr. Jameson and family own and still occupy the old home of her parents, with

This community has many times mourned the past winter and summer, but at no time have we all had more reason to regret the passing of a friend and neighbor than by the death of William A. Jameson. He was an unassuming man, with the happiness and comfort of his own family nearest at heart, preferring their constant companionship to all others, but with a world of regard for all his friends and acquaintances.

William A. Jameson was born on Jan. 29, 185c, within a half mile of where he died, living with his parents, Samuel and Matilda Jameson, until his marriage. In carly life he united with the U. P. church, and has ever been found faithful to his sacred wows and obligations. The funeral ceremonies, conducted by the Rev. David McCaw, were held at the house one week ago Saturday, where assembled a large number of friends to pay tribute to his departed spirit. The interment was made in the Hanover cemetery.

MR. JAMESON, when a lad, readily appropriated all the knowledge to be obtained in the district and village schools of his native town, Irasburgh, Vt. Until fifteen years of age he continued his studies under the instruction of resident clergymen. Considerable attention was given to the study of music, and from the age of twelve years he officiated as the organist of the village church, and for several years following gave instruction to a large number of piano and organ pupils. When eighteen years of age, and for three successive winters, he taught in the public schools of his native and adjoining towns. During these earlier years the labors of the farm gave him the vigorous health and robust constitution so valuable as an adjunct to a business career.

Mr. Jameson, in the autumn of 1880, received the appointment of assistant sergeant-atarms, and served the state in that capacity during the two following sessions of the state legislature, receiving at the close of his period of service a substantial testimonial from the members of the Senate and House of Representatives, as a token of their appreciation and good will.

MAX ARTHUR JAMESON.

In February, 1883, he received through Hon. W. W. Grout, congressman, an appointment as railway postal clerk, and after a short service upon a Vermont route he was transferred to the route from St. Albans, Vt., to Ogdensburg, N. Y. Upon bis retirement from this governmental service, in 1888, he was chief clerk of the line, and held the highest percentages in examinations of any clerk in the Eastern Division.

Mr. Jameson, in May, 1888, organized The Ogdenburg Savings and Loan Association, of which corporation he has been the secretary for the past twelve years. During this period it has grown to an institution with assets of a quarter of a million of dollars, with nine hundred shareholders. Since 1890 Mr. Jameson has been an active partner and manager of the Ogdensburg Music Store. He is treasurer of the Ogdensburg Opera House, and Commissioner of Parks for the city. He has many positions of trust and responsibility beside those above specified, and with

MAX ARTHUR JAMESON, the eldest born, is a fine lad of thirteen years. His picture here presented is reproduced from Lestle's Weekly of Dec. 7, 1833, in which he was declared the winner of a prize offered for the best letter from a little boy.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, it is understood, was a younger brother of Hugh Jameson [1652].

The first acame with him in 1746, on board the "sloop Molly," to America. He first settled in Londonderry, and, later, removed to Starkstown, N. H. The year of his removal is unknown, but some one has said that the two elder children were born in Londonderry, and the others in Starkstown. After his removal he lived on the farm afterward owned and occupied by his son, John Jameson, and, in later years, known as the "Ryder Place," located about a mile north from the centre of the town, and off from the main road to the eastward.

Mr. Jameson's name appears for the first and only time in the proprietors' records in a list of petitioners for a meeting of the proprietors of Starkstown under date of Aug. 20, 1764, to consider the matter of building a meeting-house. This was only three days before his death.

Near the centre of the old cemetery in Dunbarton, N. H., are found standing tombstones marking the graves of Thomas Jameson and his wife, Margaret, duly inscribed, showing that Mr. Jameson died "in the 55th year of his age," and Mrs. Jameson "in the 82d year of her age."

JOHN DICKEY, Mrs. Jameson's father, came to New England from Ireland in 1729, and settled in Londonderry, N. H. He was a tanner by trade. Mrs. Phœbe Dickey died, and Mr. Dickey married 2 Margaret Reid, an aunt of Gen. George Reid, of the Revolution.

MARGARET DICKEY, afterward Mrs. Jameson, crossed the Atlantic with her father when she was about ten years of age. In later life she was accustomed to tell the story, that, one day on the passage, their ship was in imminent danger of being wrecked by a huge whale that approached near to it, and many empty casks were thrown overboard upon the sea to attract and occupy his attention, until the ship passed out of sight, and thus the peril was escaped.

Mrs. Jameson had a niece, Margaret Dickey, who married Col. John Duncan, of Acworth, N. H. They had a granddaughter, Jane Duncan, who married John Gilchrist, son of John and Helen (McIndoes) Gilchrist, of Barnet, Vt. In 1898 there were two brothers of Jane Duncan living in Utah, viz.: Chapman Duncan, who was born July 1, 1812, and Homer Duncan, who was born Jan. 19, 1815. These brothers have lived in Utah many years, the elder, Chapman Duncan, resided, 1898, on the Colorado river, in Wayne Co., and Homer Duncan lived at No. 23407 East street, Salt Lake City. It has been reported that these Duncan brothers were high up, next in position to the twelve apostles, in the Mormon church. Some two years since the author had a very interesting letter from the younger brother, Homer Duncan, then eighty-three years of age.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was reared on his father's farm in Dunbarton, N. H. He went in 1775 to Antrim, N. H. The next year, 1776, he made a little clearing and built a log-house located on the farm afterward known as the "Temple Place." He was soon married, and with his young wife made a home in the then wilderness. Mr. Jameson was one of the original freeholders, March 22, 1777, when the town was incorporated and named Antim, N. H. This was 2 pat 107 at tract of land which was first called Cumberland and afterwards Society Land.

Mr. Jameson was one of the twenty-five signers of the Association Test of April 12, 1776, in Society Land, now Antrim, N. H. This test was as follows:

We, the Subscribers, do hereby solemnly engage and promise that we will to the utmost of our Power, at the Risque of our Lives and Fortunes, with Arms, oppose the Hostile Proceedings of the British Fleets and Armies against the United American Colonies.

This bold step was taken nearly three months before the Declaration of Independence was made by the Continental Congress. It was treason against Great Britain, the most powerful government in the world, and it meant death and confiscation of property to every man who signed it if the cause failed. But little New Hampshire rolled up a list of eight thousand one hundred and ninety-nine patriots who signed it. Mr. Jameson followed up his solemn pledge and entered the Revolutionary service as a soldier. He enlisted Sept. 30, 1777, in Capt. Peter Clark's company. Col. Daniel Moore's regiment

MRS. JAMESON was a granddaughter of John Moore of the English Range, London-derry, N. H. Her parents were both born in the county of Antrim, Ireland. They resided in Londonderry, and in 1745 removed to Bedford, N. H. Mrs. Jameson was considered a very smart woman. It is told of her that she spun linen thread to sell, which was made from flax raised on the farm. New Boston, N. H., was to he nearest market for the product of her industry. The distance was sixteen miles, which she would walk, make sale of her linen thread, and return the same day. The children were all born in Antrim, N. H.

Mr. Jameson, in 1782, was appointed on a committee to procure preaching for the town. A church was organized, Aug. 2, 1788, after the Presbyterian order, as most of the members were Scotch Presbyterians. It was called the "Church of Christ in Antrim." Mr. and Mrs. Jameson were among the seventy-two original members.

THE FIRST SETTLERS OF ANTRIM were Scotch and all Presbyterians. No other denomination ever held a meeting here of any kind until 1827, fifty years after the incorporation of the town. Presbyterians held their first meeting at which "a sermon was preached." in Deacon Aiken's barn, within a stone's throw of their present edifice, in September, 1775; and from that day have continued to hold meetings, with greater or less frequency, in all parts of the town, until the present time. The organization was apparently delayed in order that they might secure a minister to settle over them. But failing in this till 1800, still there were constant additions; and in all its history there have been only two years, 1814 and 1825, without the addition of new names. And the old church, in its 112th year, 1000, is in a prosperous condi-

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a lad of fourteen years when his father died, and his mother was left with a family of seven children. He worked with his older brother, Alexander, on the farm for ten years or more; then the entire care devolved upon him, for Alexander went away to a place called Antrim, N. H., to make a new home in the wilderness. This was about 1775.

Mr. Jameson was early inspired with a spirit of patriotism, and opened his house to the patriotic meetings of the citizens of the town. Accordingly we find this record: "Agreeable to a letter from the Provincial Congress at a meeting held, Monday, May 15, 1775, at the house of John Jameson, Capt. Caleb Page was chosen a Delegate to appear and sit in the said Provincial Congress, there to consult and act in our behalf, agreeable to the above mentioned letter,"

Mr. Jameson served as a soldier in Capt. Elisha Woodbury's Co., Col. John Stark's Regt., and was on the pay-roll for twenty-two days' service, from July 10 to Aug. 1, 1775.

Again for nine months and eighteen days' service he appears on the muster and pay roll of men raised for Canada out of Col. Daniel Moore's regiment, mustered and paid by Moses Kelley, July 22, 1776.

Mr. Jameson was enrolled again as a "private, Capt. Jesse Wilson's company, Col. Moses Nichols' Regiment, Stark's Brigade, Northern Army, from July 21 to Sept. 29, 1777, two months and nine days of service."

"A petition to New Hampshire Representatives assembled Oct. 12, 1779, in Exeter, N.H., sets forth that the wives and families of William Stark and John Stinson of Dunbarton, N.H., who have gone over to the British army, are operating secretly in giving aid and comfort to the enemy, and submits for the General Court to consider the propriety of sending them from the town to the British Army."

This was numerously signed by citizens of Dunbarton, Weare, and other neighboring towns, and among those who signed appear the names of JOHN JAMESON, Alexander Jameson, and Abraham Burnham of Dunbarton, N. H. At the sale of pews in the new meeting-house, May 26, 1780, John Jameson bought No. 10, and Alexander Jameson, probably his cousin Alexander [1661], bought No. 17 on the floor of the house. Mr. Jameson was a blacksmith and axemaker. Axes made by him were in use less than twenty-five years since in Hampton, N. H. His first wife, Sally Mills, was the first white child born in Starkstown, now Dunbarton, N. H.

ROBERT FULTON, Mrs. Elizabeth Jameson's father, was born in Ireland. He resided first in Boston, Mass., later in Derry, N. H., and died in Kingston, Canada.

Memoranda.

ALEXANDER McCauley, Mr. McCauley's father, was born in 1707 in the Province of Ulster, Ireland. He was a genuine Scotchman. On his arrival in America he lived for a time in the vicinity of Boston, Mass., and later settled in Hillsborough, N. H., of which town his brother, James McCauley, was one of the first settlers in 1741. Mrs. Mary (Pinkerton) McCauley, his wife, was born in 1712 in Ireland. She was a cousin of the immigrant John Pinkerton of Londonderry, N. H. Alexander and his wife, Mary McCauley, the parents of James McCauley, who married Isabel Jameson, both died in Merrimack, N. H. Mr. Alexander McCauley died Oct. 11, 1788, and Mrs. Mary McCauley, his wife, died Jan. 20, 1791. Mr. James McCauley, their son, is mentioned as a public spirited citizen, doing much to promote the development and welfare of the town

JOHN JAMESON McCauley, son of James and Isabel (Jameson) McCauley, and the father of Prof. William McCauley of Salem, Virginia, writes in his book of memoranda as follows: "But little of our early ancestors is remembered by me, except that our grandparents were all from the north part of Ireland. Our mother's maiden name was Jameson. I remember our grandmother Jameson. She was of the middle size, well informed, austere, and a Puritan of the strictest sect. She lived a long life. I think between ninety and a hundred years." Prof. McCauley, son of the above John McCauley, adds: "I have heard my father relate how she entertained her grandchildren with Irish legends and fairy stories. My grandmother, Isabel (Jameson) McCauley, was a woman of unusual physical vigor. She could see without glasses but a short while before her death, at eighty-eight years of age. Could sew very nicely in her old age. A letter from one of my cousins to my father, dated June 30, 1839, says: 'Uncle Thomas Jameson died June the 12th. He was her only brother, and her son, Thomas McCauley, died within the same month. Her own health is uncommonly good this summer. We had a small quilting a few days ago, and grandmother, i. e., Mrs. McCauley, quilted from eight o'clock A. M. until five P. M., with the exception of about half an hour at noon, and yesterday she visited the old place.' She is described by relatives as of medium size, weighing about one hundred and ten pounds, fair complexion. Her brother Thomas was unusually hand-some. He was a perfect gentleman of fine address." Mr. and Mrs. McCauley were buried in the cemetery at Dunbarton, N. H.

JOHN JAMESON McCauley was educated in the public schools of his native town and attended one term at the academy in Fryeburg, Me. This academy at one time was taught by Daniel Webster while a student at Dartmouth College. Some time afterwards, about the year 1818, Mr. McCauley went to Virginia and taught school for several years in the counties of Bedford and Montgomery. He was for a number of years deputy sheriff of Montgomery county. He married Nov. 17, 1825, Cynthia Van Lear Robinson, by whom he had four children, three sons and one daughter, two of whom are now living: James, who went to California in 1840 during the gold mining excitement, where he resides, and John, who is a farmer in Woodford county, Ill.

Mr. McCauley, a staunch Democrat of the Jeffersonian type, was a member of the House of Delegates of Virginia from Montgomery county from 1833 to 1838 with the exception of one session. He removed to Botetourt county, Va., in 1838, and was sent by the clitzens of this end of the county as an agent to use his influence in obtaining an act for the formation of the county of Ronoke, in which he was successful. He was appointed one of the justices of the peace of the county at its organization. Soon after, he was elected a delegate to represent the new county in the state legislature, and served in this capacity and as state senator almost continuously until 1842.

For several years he was superintendent of the Southwestern Virginia Turnpike (macadamized), running from James river through the counties of Southwest Virginia to the Holston river, which position he held at the time of his death, Sept. 3, 1864. His grave is in the cemetery of Salem, Va.

Mr. McCauley is described as of medium height, stoutly built, and fond of athletic sports in his younger days. He had bluish-gray eyes and light hair before it was silvered by the frosts of age.

His features were handsome. A sober cast of countenance and firmly compressed lips indicated firmness of character. He was accustomed to say that his features were of the Jameson type. His genial humor and engaging manners made him welcome to the social circle. He had a fund of anecdotes which he related in a happy way. He was an effective speaker "on the stump" in a political campaign.

In all the relations of life his example was worthy of imitation. He left the richest of all legacies to his children—" a good name."

Rev. Thomas Jameson [1995], son of John Jameson, and a cousin of Mr. McCauley, in a letter dated May 23, 1878, from Cambridge, Mass., refers to him as follows:

"In our boyhood we were intimate. In 1816, I, then a member of Dartmouth College, kept the winter school in what was his father's district, the schoolhouse standing but a few rods from the old mansion house, and he was one of my pupils. At the close of the school we parted, little thinking that was to be our final separation for this world."

HUGH McCauley married Abigail N. Odell. She was born in Merrimack, N. H. They resided in Ripon, Wis. They had eight children, viz.:

Mary, Margaret, Alexander, Thomas, Charles, James, Isabel, Hugh.

MR. WILLIAM McCAULEY, eldest son of John Jameson and Susan (Dingledein) McCauley, married Nov. 16, 1865, Margaret Jane Skirey, daughter of Peter and Julia A. (Keiser) Shirey. She was born April 12, 1843, in Augusta Co., Va. They resided in Salem, Va. They had twelve children, viz.:

Minnie Bell, b. July 31, 1867. Ernet Reedel, b. June 13, 1869. in: Sept. 7, 1897, Gracker Beth Ford. Julia Kriew. b. Nov. 12, 1879. Stann Gertrade, b. Feb. 24, 1872. Later Minnester, b. April 19, 1873; d. March 24, 1874. Freer, b. Nov. 3, 1874. Ellen Ernoue, b. Feb. 23, 1876. High Jamesen, b. April 16, 1877; d. Sept. 9, 1877. John William, b. O. 9, 1878. James Philherton, b. Nov. 14, 1880. Mary Shirey, b. May 22, 1882. Margaret Jameson, b. Dec. 20, 1885.

Mrs. William McCauley's mother, Mrs. Julia A. (Keiser) Shirey, died June 22, 1898, at the age of nearly eighty-four years, of whom it is said, "Truly a Mother in Israel."

WILLIAM MCCAULEY is a grandson of James and Isabel (Jameson) McCauley. His father removed in 1838 to Botetourt, now Roanoke Co., Va., where his son received his education in the rudiments at the "Old-field Schools" in the vicinity of his home.

In 1849, during the session of the Virginia legislature, he accompanied his tather, then a state senator, to Richmond, the state capital. While there, at the earnest solicitation of the senators, his father consented to his appointment as page of the senate, an office being created for the purpose.

In this position he continued for four sessions. Afterwards he attended Roanoke college, located at Salem, the county seat of Roanoke county, and graduated in 1859. He taught a country school in the year 1859-'60, and served as tutor of Roanoke college a couple of months at the close of the session of that year. Then taught a country school in 1860-'61, and entered the Confederate service in June, 1861, as a sergeant of infantry volunteers, serving under Gen. Robert E. Lee in the mountains of Virginia until January, 1862, when his regiment was transferred to the command of "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. He was wounded March 23, 1862, at the battle of Kernstown, Va. He was furloughed and put on special duty in the enrolling service. In the summer of 1863 he was discharged on account of the wound and for the purpose of accepting a professorship in Roanoke college, which was the only institution of high grade in the state that continued in existence during the whole war. In the fall of 1864 he again entered the army, serving as clerk of court martial in one of the brigades under the command of Gen. Jubal A. Early in the valley of Virginia. In August, 1865, he was elected clerk of the county and circuit courts of Roanoke county, which position he held until July 1, 1887. He was again appointed clerk in August, 1889, and continued in office until July 1, 1893. Subsequently he was Commissioner of Accounts for Roanoke county. He is now, 1898, clerk of the United States courts, which hold their sittings in Lynchburg, Va. Since 1866 he has been a trustee of Roanoke college, and has devoted himself somewhat to local historical researches. He has prepared historical sketches of the town of Salem and of Roanoke county, which have been published in the county paper.

Mr. McCauley is a member of the Lutheran church, and since 1877 has been the superintendent of the Sunday-school connected with the college church in Salem, Va. For many years he was a trustee of schools and clerk of the district and county school boards. He entertains a warm regard for the name of Jameson, and has made it the middle name of two of his children. He writes,-

"I have made three vis'ts to the land of my fathers—in 1877, 1879, and in 1892. Each time I visited old Dunbarton, and once spent a night in the ancestral homestead where my father was born."

Mrs. Hardy, the widow of the late Hon. Alpheus W. Hardy of Boston, Mass., who was the patron of the lamented Neesima, one of the first Japanese educated in this country, is a second cousin of Mr. McCauley.

ERNEST ROEDEL MCCAULEY, the eldest son, studied for the ministry, and was pastor of the Lutheran church in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he married Grace Beth Ford, the daughter of Frederick Dudley and Olive (Smith) Ford, who was born Feb. 16, 1881, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. They, 1900, reside in Pittsburg, Pa., where Rev. Mr. McCauley is the pastor of a Lutheran church.

VICTOR MCCAULEY, the second son, graduated in 1806 from Roanoke College, and by vote of the judges received the "medal in oratory" from the college. He completed his course in the theological seminary, in preparation for the Christian ministry, and sailed Oct. 29, 1898, from New York as a missionary to Southern India, and reached his destination the middle of December, 1808, Gunter, Madras Presidency.

JOHN WILLIAM McCauley, another son, at the end of his sophomore year, June, 1896, took the "medal in declamation," from the college, and at his graduation, June 13, 1808, was awarded the medal in the contest in oratory.

"He has had," his father says, "from childhood no other thought as to his lifework than to become a minister of the gospel."

JAMES PINKERTON MCCAULEY, the youngest son, receives his middle name from his great-grandmother, who was a Pinkerton, of Derry, N. H., and a cousin of the founder of Pinkerton academy, of that town. He is in the public schools of Salem, Va.

MR. JAMESON was a tailor by trade. He settled on a farm on the "Old Turnpike," in Antrim, N. H., about the time the town was incorporated in 1777. His house stood not far from the schoolhouse of 1880, and his farm was owned in recent years by Elijah F. Gould.

Mr. Jameson served from July 7, 1775, to the end of the War of the Revolution, for longer or shorter periods, as appears in the Revolutionary rolls of both New Hampshire and Massachusetts. His early death, at the age of thirty-seven years, was from the effects of disease contracted in the army. Mr. Jameson and his wife, Margaret, were members of the Church of Christ, Presbyterian, from its organization. He drew a pension the last few years of his life, which was secured to his widow by the efforts of Franklin Pierce, then member of congress, and afterward president of the United States, whose birthplace and early home was not far from where Mr. and Mrs. Jameson lived. In her later life, Mrs. Jameson resided with her son, James Jameson, in New Hudson, N. Y., where she died, in her ninety-fifth year.

MRS. PEGGY (RAMSEY) JAMESON, mother of Mrs. Jameson, it is said was the daughter of an English officer, a member of the ducal house of Dalhowsie. She died at the age of thirty-one years, March, 1760. Little Margaret, only seven years of age, was taken home and brought up by her aunt, Mrs. Robert Wallace.

Memoranda.

Mr. Jameson settled in Antrim, in 1783; cleared the land on the banks of the Contoocook river, and built his home on the spot where in recent times Mr. George E. Butterfield resided. He commanded a local company of militia, was considered a fine officer, and became known by his title " Captain Jameson." He served as selectman of the town in 1804, and was an energetic, capable, and useful citizen.

MRS. JAMESON was a person remarkable for physical strength and quickness of intellect. It is said of her that when they were clearing the land, she split a hollow log, took one half of it for a cradle, laid her baby down in it, and reaped more grain than any man in the field in a day. Her brother once offended her in politics, when she seized him by the collar, and slammed him against the cellar-door over and over again until he begged to be released. He did not dispute politics with Mrs. Jameson any more.

Mr. Jameson served in the Revolutionary army, in Capt. Nathaniel Hutchins's Co., Joseph Cilley's Regt. There is found this record: "Dunbarton March ye 15. 1778, Thomas Jameson inlisted for two years and recvd of said town for incoragement the Sum of 55. o. o." He was but eighteen years of age, and during his army life suffered great hardships. He was once reduced to the extremity of eating horse-flesh to support life. He received a pension when the war was over. He was a tailor, blacksmith, and farmer, a very ingenious and apt man in whatever he turned his hand to do, whether it was to make a coat, shoe a horse, swing a scythe, command a company of militia, or thrash his opponent in politics, as he did on one occasion. He was a man of too much spirit and energy to be hindered by trifles, and was sometimes but to great inconvenience, for example, when he was obliged to go six miles to grind his scythe.

MR. JAMESON was the captain of a military company in Bloomfield, N. Y. It is said that he was an officer in the War of 1812.

MR. EDWARD J. BUSHNELL of Coldwater, N. Y., writes of his grandfather Jameson: "I have heard my grandmother and mother tell how finely he looked upon a horse. My mother had a very tender memory of her father. Always spoke of him as a godly man, affectionate and indulgent in his family. He was of good stature and fair complexion. My mother resembled him the most of any of his children." He continues: "My grandfather Bushnell was of English descent and my grandmother of French. My father's family claim a distant kinship with Dr. Horace Bushnell, of Hartford, but I do not know as this is authenticated, perhaps admiration of his character may have led them to hope so. My sisters and myself are all unmarried, and at present are living on the old homestead. Our branch of the Jameson family have been Presbyterians, whose ministers have done such noble service for their church and country."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, after a long life of varied usefulness, died on Monday, April 14. 1879, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Pickering, No. 71 Magazine St., Cambridge, Mass. The funeral service was on the following Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, April 16, 1879. From the various biographical and appreciative obituary notices published soon after his death, we gather the following:

REV. THOMAS JAMESON was of Scotch-Irish descent and born March 7, 1794, in Dunbarton, N. H. He fitted for college under the tuition of Rev. Walter Harris, D. D., pastor of the church in his native town, and graduated in the class of 1818 from Dartmouth college.

His class consisted of twenty-eight members at graduation, including the well-known scholars, Rev. George Bush, the Hebraist; Prof. Thomas C. Upham, late of Bowdoin college; Prof. William Chamberlain of Dartmouth; Rev. Daniel Fitz, late of Ipswich, and Rev. Cyrus P. Grosvenor, president of the McGraw college in New York. Other classmates were: Hon. George S. Hill, an eminent lawyer of New Brunswick, a man of greatest ability and highest moral worth; Hon. James White, treasurer of Maine 1842 to 1847; Gen. Henry K. Oliver of Salem, now the only survivor of the class, and Hon. James Shirley of Vicksburg, a Southern loyalist, on whose plantation took place the interview between General Grant and General Pemberton which led to the surrender of that city. The class will be ranked as one eminent for the number of its scholarly men and for the large number that entered the ministry-sixteen out of twenty-eight.

Mr. Jameson spent one year in Andover Theological seminary; then taught one term in the academy at Pembroke, N. H., and was licensed to preach by the Hopkinton association in June, 1820; after which he performed eight weeks' missionary service in Conway, under direction of the New Hampshire Missionary society. In September, 1820, Effingham academy was dedicated, and a sermon preached on the occasion by Rev. Samuel Hidden of Tam-worth, and Mr. Jameson was inaugurated as its first preceptor. Here he continued five years, preaching also every Sabbath. He married Elizabeth Lord, eldest daughter of Isaac Lord of Effingham, Jan. 14, 1821, by whom he had eight children. He was ordained pastor of the First church in Scarborough, Me., June 29, 1825. The sermon was preached by Rev. Edward Payson, D. D., of Portland. Here he labored fitteen years, until obliged by failing health to ask a dismission. He was dismissed Aug. 26, 1840, and removed with his family to Gorham, where he bought a small estate, and by working on the land and cultivating a nursery, he in some measure recovered his health. But was unable to see to read after 1865, and for the last few years of his life was totally blind.

He was an excellent scholar in a class which was among the best that Dartmouth has known; an earnest and devoted minister, and a man in whom were blended all the virtues of heart and of life that make a man lovable and beloved. Of a singularly gentle disposition, and an ardent lover of his fellow men, he lived a life of earnest effort to do good and to serve the cause of his Divine Master. When infirmities came their burden was borne with cheerful resignation; that great loss, the loss of sight, only making him more submissive to God's will, and more grateful for the increased kindness of children and friends. Under his grievous affliction he was an example of cheerful acquiescence in the will of God. After the death of his wife, Aug. 11, 1860, he lived with his children in Exeter and Greenland, N. H., and in Cambridge, Mass., patiently waiting for the Saviour to call him to the heavenly home.

yours affectionately-Thomas Jameson

Mr. Jameson was a man of strong mental power, and deep emotional nature; firm and persistent in his opinions, but at the same time kind and charitable to those who differed from him.

His views of the strict justice of God were such as made the cross of Christ precious to his soul. He thought that preachers of the present day failed to set forth as they ought the sinfulness of the human heart and the dreadful severity of God. With his advancing years he became more and more humble before God, renouncing himself utterly, and relying only and entirely on Christ as his Saviour. His death was as placid as his life, and the departure, with affectionate farewells, was as the sleep of a child, a quiet passing from one life to another.

Rev. Mr. Jameson in his old age was a remarkable personality. With dignity of step, staff in hand, his long white hair flowing in the wind, he moved along the street commanding the notice and the admiring respect of all by his venerable and impressive appearance. Even the children on their way to school stopped and looked at him in respectful silence as he passed.

MR. DINSMORE was a cousin to his wife. They removed to New Hudson, N. Y., with their four elder children, their furniture, and all their effects in an ox wagon covered with leather. The three younger children were born in New Hudson, N. Y.

MRS. DINSMORE was a woman of remarkable executive ability. She had a wonderful memory, and was characterized as smart and good. "The family have taken some pride in that ox wagon journey of three hundred miles. It was more romantic than ten thousand miles by rail. It was both conveyance and inheritance, since they took with them all they had. The covering of tanned leather was for the manufacture of boots and shoes on arrival. Tools and all the et ceteras of the expected little home were stowed away in that ox wagon. And so the young couple started out in life! Such brave, strong hearts are sure to win success."

SOLYMAN DINSMORE, the eldest son, was born in Acworth, N. H. His first wife was born Feb. 12, 1817, in New York. They resided in Brooklyn, Mich., where she died Sept. 1, 1847. Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON for twenty-five years, from 1826 to 1850, carried on a large dry goods and grocery business in Nashua, N. H. He was one of the earliest to sell ready-made clothing, which was manufactured by hand, for sewing machines were not even dreamed of at that time. He had one peculiarity in displaying his goods to customers, which was the habit of rubbing his hands together, and saying in a pleasant way, "That's my price, take it or leave it."

Mr. Jameson was a prominent man and a member of the Unitarian church in Nashua, N. H. He was a straightforward, upright business man, with a good degree of ability and push; an old-time Democrat, and universally respected. He retired from business April, 1850, and removed to Chelsea, Mass. It was said that he lost heavily in the "Eastern Land Speculation." He was wont to say: "I sank ten thousand dollars 'cold cash' in that investment." Ten thousand dollars was a goodly sum in those days.

JOSEPH GILMAN JAMESON, the only son living at the time, a highly gifted young man, employed as a bookkeeper in Boston, died suddenly at his father's house, No. 141 Cedar St., Chelsea, Mass. He was held in highest esteem by his employers and those with whom he was associated. At the time of his death very appreciative notices of him were published in the local papers.

ALEXANDER JAMESON.

Memoranda,

MR. JAMESON remained at home on his father's farm until twenty-one years of age. He then, for seven years, was in the employ of J. B. Fisher in the Fanueil Hall Market, Boston, Mass. His parents becoming advanced in life, needed his care and attention, and he returned to the old homestead, and served their comfort to the end of their lives. He received by inheritance his father's farm, and in its culture and improvement he spent the rest of his days. Mr. Jameson was a worthy man, A lifelong neighbor characterizes him as "a reliable, square man, one of the best in that part of the town, strong in his convictions, and a man to be depended upon." "He would always talk with small boys, when boys were of small account," said by one who was a boy in reminiscence of him. The town historian says: "He was one of the most worthy and upright men ever resident here; unassuming, and universally respected." He could have been elected on the Board of Selectmen, but persistently refused to have his name used. He was twice the candidate of his party for representative to the State Legislature. Soon after his death the old homestead, having been in the family for eighty-two years, since 1782, was sold to Samuel Wilson of Antrim, and later to George Butterfield of Manchester, N. H.

MRS. NANCY JANE (BELL) JAMESON.

MRS. JAMESON, the widow, with her children, removed to the south village in Antrim, N. H., where she lived to a happy old age, retaining her vivacity and cheerfulness to the end. Her eighty-fourth birthday transpired Feb. 5, 1896, and on the 11th following she playfully writes of her two bachelor sons. Of the one she says:

"He has no wife to direct him, no children to protect him," and of the other she adds, "He lis in the same fax as his bother." Under the same date she refers to the proposed publication of the Jamesons in America, as follows: "I hope through God's help you will persevere. I think that good name JaMsson should be sought and looked up; I believe you to be the right one to look to for this great work. I hope to live to see a copy.

N. J. B. JAMESON."

EDWIN DUNLAP JAMESON.

But alas, in four short months after writing the above letter to the author she passed on to the place prepared for her in heaven. The local paper of June 10, 1896, published the following appreciative obituary:

Mrs. Nancy J. Jameson, widow of Alexander Jameson, died at her residence on Main street, at 6:50 o'clock Monday evening, aged 84 years and 4 months. Funeral at Presbyterion church on Thursday at 1 o'clock terian church on Thursday at 1 o'clock. Her children, Mrs. A. W. Cutter, Edwin D., and Frederick W., were summoned home ten days ago, and have been unremitting in their loving care, affording her great comfort and

"Aunt Nancy" will be greatly missed by old and young, who loved her for her cheery, helpful spirit, and ready sympathy. She was the last survivor of a family of eight children, had seen all the friends of her generation pass away, but never failed to be interested in the large circle of her friends of the present day; grew old beautifully and lovingly. Her memory will remain a benediction.

EDWIN D. JAMESON went out from home at the age of eighteen years. He spent a year in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, and then went to Kookuk, Ia., where he was engaged in the railroad shops connected with the Kcokuk & Des Moines Valley Railway. In the spring of 1872 he served the Toledo, Wabash & Western Railway Company as engineer, and ran on the line between St. Louis and Chicago for sixteen years. From 1884 to 1887 he was road foreman of engines, and then was appointed assistant master mechanic of the shops in Chicago, and served in that capacity until 1898, when he was appointed assistant master mechanic for the Western Division of the Chicago & Grand Trunk Railway, which position he still holds. He is a man of great executive ability and stering qualities of character, which have made his business career a grand success.

FREDERICK W. JAMESON, the younger brother, is a music teacher in New York City, where for some years he was the tenor soloist in a large and fashionable church. His musical talent and attainments in his line of work give to him a commanding position.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, when a young man of seventeen years, left his home in Salem, Mass., and went to Hartford, Conn. He had great musical talent and was a professional organist and Mrs. Jameson was a celebrated singer. Mr. Jameson was of the firm A. C. Goodman & Co., paper merchants. Upon their removal to New York City, Mr. Jameson became the organist at the Church of the Puritans on Union square of that city. After Mr. Jameson's death, his eldest son succeeded to the same position. Mrs. Jameson was not only a cultured singer, but a lady of rare refinement and high social standing. In her later life she made her home with a brother, James M. Stedman, Esq., No. 157 Melrose St., Morrisania, N. Y.

John STEDMAN JAMESON, the eldest son, at a very early age manifested a remarkable passion and talent for music. While a mere lad he attained a wonderful proficiency as a pianist. And when quite young he developed as marked a talent for drawing and painting as for music. When thirteen years of age, attending the public grammar school, his drawings with pencil and slate attracted the favorable notice of several artists, especially of Mr. Frederick E. Church, who subsequently became his warm friend and patron. And after young Jameson's lamented death Mr. Church writes to his mother, April 25, 1867: "Of all the younger artists, whose personal acquaintance I have made, and whose works and characteristics of mind and heart came under my observation, no one has interested me so much as your son, or held out better-grounded hopes of future high excellence."

Mr. William Mason writes of his musical ability: "His musical talent was of a very high order. He possessed a fine talent for composition and also improvised exceedingly well on the piano."

Mr. Henri Appy, a solo violinist at Jenny Lind's concerts in this country, writes: "I have often had the pleasure of listening to Mr. Jameson, and practising with him music of the best class, in which he has given me the best satisfaction. He understood in the highest degree the old and modern masters, and as a musician and a pianist he would certainly have become the praise of his country."

At the age of eighteen he painted "The Grain Field," which was exhibited in the first collection of the Artist's Fund society and placed Mr. Jameson among the foremost of young artists then coming into notice. This was followed by others,—"The Mill in a Storm," "Hanging Hills," "Old Homestead," and still others of attractive merit.

But great as was the young man's passion for music, and remarkable as was his talent for painting, there was in his soul a profounder impulse of patriotism, and the call of his country for soldiers in the field found in him a ready and loyal response. When his widowed mother and friends would dissuade him, he replied, "My heart is there and I can accomplish nothing here." And so he enlisted Jan. 24, 1864, for three years' service as a private in the First Connecticut Cavalry.

After somewhat of a soldier's experience of hardships, he writes to his mother: "The more I see and the more I think it over, the more impossible it is for me to find one regret at the step I have taken, and were it not for your grief I should have gone away happy. If you knew what a weight seems lifted off my breast and how

Before arriving at the front, while encamped near Baltimore, he was assigned the office of quartermaster sergeant.

They reached Virginia and the active scenes of warfare just at the season when protracted rains made the ground bad for camping purposes, and officers and men went for days and nights together wet and chilled through with the cold driving storm.

The First Connecticut Cavalry, near Culpeper, Va., was assigned to the First Brigade of the Third Division, then in command of General Kilpatrick. This division was one of the three which formed the cavalry corps, to the command of which Gen. Phillip H. Sheridan was very soon assigned. The cavalry was much engaged on picket duty at the extreme front, being for long days in the saddle and exposed to the most savage guerilla warfare.

Jameson, although as quartermaster sergeant he was exempt from picket duty, yet chose to go on these perilous expeditions and to share the hardships of his regiment and of his younger brother who had joined the service with him. After crossing the river Rapidan, there followed weeks of encounters with the enemy and incessant work and hardship. During May and June, beside much that could not be written, the regiment earned the right officially given to write on its flag the names of thirteen battles. During all this arduous campaign Sergeant Jameson had borne such an honorable part, suffered so patiently, and fought so bravely that he had won the esteem of both officers and men.

Col. Erastus Blakeslee, in command of the regiment, says: "Sergeant Jameson attracted my attention almost immediately after he joined the regiment, and I soon learned to regard him as one of those thoroughly brave and trustworthy men on whom I could rely to accomplish the full measure of their duty in any time of either difficulty or danger.

"At the time of his capture, his name, unbeknown to him, was on my list for speedy promotion; and but for his untimely 'taking off' he would doubtless have attained that position in the regiment which his gallantry demanded, and for which, by his education and accomplishments he was fitted."

During his few months of service he was in many sharp and bloody encounters with the enemy. At Strawberry Hill, within the first line of fortifications at Richmond, he had a horse shot under him and had other "hair-breadth escapes."

It was June 22, 1864, when the Third Cavalry division, joined by other regiments of cavalry, the whole force under the command of General Wilson, started on what was known as "Wilson's Raid." It lasted ten days, was effective in the destruction of large amount of the enemy's property, but not being properly supported by the infantry the regiment to which Jameson was attached lost twenty per cent. of its whole fighting force in killed, wounded, and missing. Upon the list of the missing was the name of John S. Jameson. And his fate was not known until April, 1865, when it was discovered that he had died Aug. 31, 1864, in the prison in Anderson-ville, Ga. His grave had been carefully marked by a comrade, and after the war his remains were removed to Hartford, Conn., and reinterred in Zion's Hill cemetery, June 29, 1866, after appropriate funeral services conducted by the chaplain of his regiment, Rev. Theodore J. Holmes. So that his grave is now among his kindred in the place of his birth.

It appears that on June 29, 1864, in the retreat near Reams Station, Jameson had fallen behind on account of illness and exhaustion. While he was filling his canteen at a creek just crossed by his regiment, the rebels came in between and cut him off from his regiment. With others he was taken to a planter's house near by, where he remained till the next day; being too weak to walk, he was put on a worn-out horse and carried to Petersburg, where he was robbed of everything he had of value on his person, even his New Testament. Then he was taken to Richmond and confined in Libby prison, where he remained until July 17, when he and others were transported to Andersonville. The heat was extreme, and worn out by hard-ships and disease, he fainted on arrival, but when a comrade dashed water in his face and gave him some to drink he revived, and was carried at once to the hospital, which he never left till carried to his grave.

the hospital except the fact of his death, Aug. 31, 1864.

In 1866 there was published for private distribution: "A MEMORIAL OF JOHN S. JAMESON, Sergeant of the 1st Conn. Cavalry, who died in Andersonville, Ga., Compiled by Theodore ?". Holmes. Chablain of the Reviewer.

"To plan and dare
To use life, is life's proper end
Let death come when it will, and where."

The above memorial volume concludes with lines addressed to Sergeant Jameson's mother by MISS PHŒBE CARY, as follows:

TO MRS. JAMESON.

On Freedom's altar you have laid A gift of costliest price, Even the first born of your flock, A perfect sacrifice.

Yet count the offering not too dear, Nor sit unreconciled; What have you, you have not received From Him who claimed your child?

Remember, too, though he was all Your loving heart desired, Of those to whom the most is given The most will be required.

He may be nearer than you deem, Though to your sight denied; A ministering angel still, A better, surer guide.

Gone from the world perchance to save Some soul in sin astray, Who following now the path he trod Will find the heavenly way.

And surely one so fit for earth Was fitter for the sky; He who was prepared to live Was best prepared to die.

Caroline Jameson (John, Thomas, Thomas), daughter of John [2007] and Mary (Pierce) Jameson, was born Feb. 11, 1821, in Salem, Mass. She married May 5, 1844, John Woodhull Stedman, son of Nathan and Belinda (Stebbins) Stedman. He was born April 14, 1820, in Enfield, Conn. They resided in Norwich and in Hattford, Conn. Mr. Stedman died Feb. 10, 1896. They had no children.

Memoranda.

MR. STEDMAN learned the printer's trade, at which he worked for eight years. In 1844 he went to Norwich, Conn., and engaged in the printing and publishing business. He became interested in newspaper management, and was editor of The Aurora, a paper printed in Norwich. He was appointed in 1850 one of the bank commissioners of the state, and reappointed in 1833 and in 1873. He was made insurance commissioner in 1874, and filled that office for six years, doing an eminent service in that department.

Mr. Stedman was a delegate to the national convention in Baltimore, Md., which nominated Gen. Franklin Pierce for the presidency. He was appointed postmaster of Norwich, Coan., in 1853, and held the office two terms. He was a member of the school board, its president several years, and also a member of the city council of Norwich. He was held in highest esteem, and his removal from that city to Hartford was a matter of general regret. In 1850 he became the treasurer of the State Savings bank in Hartford, which position he held up to the time of his death, and during those fifteen years the growth and success of this banking institution was due largely to the financial ability with which its affairs were managed by Mr. Stedman, its treasurer, who had its business in his entire control. He was also a director of the Mercantille National bank of Hartford.

Mr. Stedman attained the thirty-second degree in Masonry, was broad and generous in his religious life. His example was an inspiration in support of good government, good morals, in a word, a fine illustration of faith, hope, and charity. His death was sudden, and announced in the local paper with an appropriate sketch of his life as follows:

"Mr. John W. Stedman, treasurer of the State Savings bank, died at his home, No. 174 Farmington Ave., Monday afternoon, from heart disease. He was at the bank on Satunday, being in outcome, the bank of Satunday, being in outcome, and the saving in the satunday health on the saving in outcome, the saving is saving to the saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving is saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving is saving in the saving is saving to the saving in the saving is saving in the saving in the saving is saving in the saving is saving in the saving is saving in the saving in the bank on Saturday, being in customary health.

"The death of Mr. Stedman removes a man of exceptionally strong and interesting character from the active business life of Hartford, and his loss will be widely felt in this city. He was held in high honor throughout the state, enjoying the friendship and confidence of large numbers of men in social, educational, religious, political, and business circles. He was a man of felicitous traits of character, chivalrous and manly, not less than thoughtful and courteous in every relationship of life."

MRS. STEDMAN resides with her sisters in an old historic dwelling-house which antedates the Revolution, at the corner of North and Main streets, Salem, Mass,

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was born on the "Cleaves place," once occupied by his grandfather, Dr. Nathan W. Cleaves. When a lad of sixteen he started out into the world for himself. He went to Boston with only a dollar and fifty cents in his pocket, and with all the world before him. He went into a store as a clerk, and after a few years he had a store of his own in the great city. He remained until 1851, and then removed to his native town, Antrim, N. H. He bought the Daniel McFarland house in the south village, repaired and adorned that ancient building, built barns, etc., making a beautiful residence. These were all destroyed by fire on the evening of Aug. 9, 1861. The present capacious buildings were at once erected on the site of the old ones, being nearly completed before the close of the year.

Mr. Jameson, after returning to Antrim, was called to fill important offices. He was a justice of the peace, postmaster, town treasurer, deputy assessor of United States revenue, representative in 1861 to the state legislature, auctioneer and Sundayschool superintendent. His life was one of great activity, and now, 1900, at the age of eighty-two years, he is hale and hearty.

Anne Belle Jameson, the daughter who died at the age of nineteen years, was a young lady of great loveliness of character and person. She was a fine scholar, a sweet singer, an excellent organist and painsit, and a most humble and devoted Christian. Added to this that she was beautiful in features, most attractive in manners, and of a loving and gentle spirit toward all others, it is not strange that she was spoken of as "too fair for earth."

The History of Antrim, N. H., contains a very fitting mention of her, also an engraving which is inserted here, and which one loves to look upon. Her death was deeply lamented by the whole community, and the remembrance of her is sweet and precious.

Josiah Mixer, whose daughters Mr. Jameson married, was born Oct. 14, 1777, and died Aug. 24, 1825. Mrs. Mixer, his wife, was the daughter of Joseph Stone, who was a Revolutionary soldier, and when a lad of fifteen years stood guard on Boston Neck.

17, 1887, ² Elenry A. Mandeelle, M. D.

Memoranda.

MR. RICE had a long business career, covering a period of sixty years, the earlier part he spent in Boston, Mass., and about forty years in New York City. In his business relations he was spoken of as 'a man of sterling integrity, trusted and admired by all who knew him." He went forth into the field of business life, from day to day, to meet its demands, its temptations and its strifes, with fidelity, honesty, and courage. He went, clad in a moral armor, 'and wrought into all his dealings honesty, charity, truth, equity, and righteousness." If in the competitions of trade came off with less money, yet he emerged from the fray with the consciousness of self-respect, and a good conscience.

Mr. Rice was a man of attractive personality, courteous in manner, dignified in bearing, and benevolent in spirit. Socially he was genial and agreeable, fond of his home, and devoted to his family.

His religious life is spoken of as that of "a sincere, unostentatious, humble, devoted Christian. He was a member of the St. Bartholomew Episcopal church, New York," and worshiped the later years of his life with the First Presbyterian church, of South Orange, N. J., with which his family was connected, and in which they are communicants.

Mr. Rice, hale and vigorous, reached the age of eighty years. To the very last he kept in touch with the world, and in living sympathy with his fellow men. His was a singularly green old age, full of sunshine and love. "His heart was always young, for love was always there, and it brightened every sorrow and joy of his life, until the moment of his sudden translation to glory."

MRS. RICE, a woman of energy, culture, and attractiveness of person, shared her husband's trials and joys for more than forty years. She was a devoted wife; her companionship gave strength and courage to his manhood, and joy to his life. Mrs.

Rice resides, 1900, "Montrose," Ludington Road, South Orange, N. J.

CLEAVES JAMESON RICE was born in Boston. After completing his school life, he became associated with his father in business, the firm being Charles Rice & Son. He made many friends, was fine looking, kind-hearted, a friend to the poor, and very devoted to his family and home. He died in the prime of manhood, and in the midst of his business life. His death was a severe blow to his father, who seemed never to recover from it, and his bereaved mother writes: "Life was never the same, a cloud passed over our sunlight." He was a member of the New York 7th regiment,

RICHARD JESUP MORGAN, who married Jennie Jameson Rice, was a son of Henry Morgan, and a grandson of Charles Morgan, the founder of the Morgan line of steamships between New York and Galveston, Texas. He died May 6, 1884, in New York City, N. Y. They had three children, viz.:

Jennie Rice, b. July 8, 1880; Mary Madeline, b. Nov. 23, 1881; Charles, b. Dec. 23, 1882.

Mr. Morgan was identified with the business interests of the Morgan Steamship Line, until his early and lamented death.

HENRY ADDISON MANDEVILLE, who married Mrs. Jennie Jameson (Rice) Morgan, is a son of Rev. Giles H. Mandeville, D. D., who is a prominent minister of the Dutch Reformed church, and resides in New York City. Dr. Mandeville had a wide practice as a physician in New York. They reside in South Orange, N. J., but spend much time in traveling.

"Mrs. Mandeville," as spoken of, "is a woman with many friends, and interested in the Presbyterian church at South Orange, N. J., and one of its most active and generous supporters. Her kindnesses are done without ostentation, and many of these kind acts are known only to the recipients. Among her chief characteristics is her care for the comfort, happiness, and welfare of others. She is, in short, one of the noblest and most self-sacrificing of women, and her life is a blessing to all those who have the advantage of her acquaintance."

WILLIAM RICE, Mr. Rice's father, was born July 7, 1775, and died May 7, 1835.

Mrs. Joanna (Johnson) Rice, his mother, was born Dec. 8, 1777, and died Jan. 15,

MR. CUTLER spent his early life on a farm in Lunenburg, Vt., to which town his father went when he was but six years of age. He united with the Congregational church when sixteen, was a fine musician, an earnest worker in the Sunday-school, and a very devoted Christian. Two years after marriage, in 1857, he removed with his family to the West, and settled in St. Charles, Ill., where he died, at the early age of thirty-two years.

Mrs. Cutler, a woman of rare gifts and very beautiful in person, at the age of thirty was left a widow, with two little boys. The elder, William Scott, was born in Wentworth, N. H. The younger, Samuel C., was born in Beloit, Wis. They both received their education in St. Charles, Ill. The younger died at the age of twenty-one years. The elder, when but fourteen years of age supported himself, and was a great help to his mother. For some years he was a bookkeeper, and now, 1898, is the manager of the Ranney Manufacturing Co., with his office in Chicago, Ill. Mrs. Cutler resides, 1899, Melrose Park, Ill.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was educated in the academy, Henniker, N. H., and in Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. He commenced his business career in 1866, in hats, caps, and furs, Boston, Mass., and continued the same business until 1879, when he went to New York City and connected himself with the straw goods commission business, in which he remained for twenty years. The last ten years he was a member of the firm, Tenney, Dupee & Jameson. This house sold more straw hats for men and boys than any other concern in the country or in the world. This was not questioned by any one familiar with the business.

Mr. Jameson retired from business in 1899 on account of ill health. He has been and is a prominent citizen, of Antrim and in the state of New Hampshire, and filled many important public positions, 'He has been moderator of town-meetings, justice of the peace twenty-four years, trustee of the Hillsborough Bridge Savings Bank, representative to the state legislature two years, 1875, 1876, member of the constitutional convention in 1876, member of the state senate in 1887, 1888, of which body he was the Democratic candidate for the presidency, the opposing candidate being elected by a majority of three votes. Mr. Jameson secured eight votes and Frank D. Currier eleven 'votes and was declared elected. It was acknowledged that Mr. Jameson had the qualities which eminently fitted him for a good presiding officer. He served on the floor of the senate and in committee with remarkable efficiency and won the confidence and respect of all political parties. In June, 1892, he was one of the four alternates chosen to the Democratic national convention, which met in Chicago, Ill., and in 1896, and again in 1900, he was Democratic candidate for presidential elector. He is a gentleman of attractive personality, commanding abilities, and great popularity.

Mrs. Jameson was educated in the academies of Milford and New London, N. H. She is a lady of culture and high social standing, making her home pleasant and attractive by her genial presence and generous hospitality.

JOHN DUSTIN BUTLER, Mrs. Jameson's father, was a prominent business man of Bennington, N. H., a son of Moody Butler, Esq., and a descendant of Mrs. Hannah Dustin, whose sufferings and heroism illumine the pages of Indian history.

Mrs. Mary C. Butler, Mrs. Jameson's mother, was a daughter of Francis and Mary

Nathan C. Jameson

(Fletcher) Burnham of Greenfield, N. H. She was for many years a teacher, a very bright woman, and the ablest in the region.

JOHN BUTLER JAMESON, the eldest son, was born in Bennington, N. H., graduated from the schools of New York City, and entered, 1888, the College of the City of New York. But his health and eyes failed and he was obliged to abandon his course of study, and September.

1892, he entered the employment of Messrs. Mork & Co., manufacturers straw goods, New York City, with whom he remained five years. He went abroad in 1807 for his health. He visited England, Scotland, Ireland, and many European cities, being absent six months. Since his return he has been at his father's house in Antrim, N. H. To him the author of this volume is indebted for results of personal investigation in regard to the early history of the Highland Clan of Gunn, Scotland, from whom the Jamesons are descended of which mention is made in the Introduction of this volume.

At the New Hampshire Second District Convention, held May 2, 1900, in Concord, N. H., to choose two delegates to the National Democratic Convention, which met July 4, 1900, in Kansas City, Mo., to nominate a candidate for the presidency, John Butler I ameson was chosen, receiving 165 votes out of the whole number of 70 votes cast. At a meeting of the state delegates to the National Democratic Convention held June 14, 1900, for organization, John B. Jameson was chosen secretary.

James Walker Jameson, the youngest son, was born in Antrim, N. H. He took his preparatory course of four years and graduated in 1897 from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. In the autumn of that year he entered Princeton University, N. J. His Sophomore year he was the assistant business manager of the daily paper of the institution, and throughout his course he has taken a prominent part in athletics. At a meeting of his class Junior year, Oct. 10, 1899, he was chosen president of the class, and also business manager of The Daily Princetonium. June 1, 1900, he sailed on the steamer, St. Louis, as manager of the Princeton University track athletic team, which was to compete in the Intercollegiate games at London, and in the Olympian games at the Paris Exposition of 1900.

Mr. Jameson, after fulfilling this engagement, traveled a short time in European countries, and returned in season to enter upon his Senior year at Princeton. He has received the unusual honor of a relection as president of his class, the first one in the history of the University called to serve both Junior and Senior years as Class President. He appears in the Tartan of the Scottish Clan Gunn, presented in the Introduction to this volume, which was purchased in Scotland.

Isabel BJameson.

ISABEL BURNHAM JAMESON, the only daughter, was born in Antrim, N. H. She was named for her great-aunt, Mrs. Isabel Hirsch [2085] of Keene, N. H., who was named for her great-aunt, Mrs. Isabel McCauley [1984] of Dunbarton, N. H. She is a pupil in the high school of Antrim, N. H., and a young lady of fine scholarship and promise.

MR. JAMESON'S family record completes the chapter of The Jamesons in New Hampshire

MARIE ISABEL JAMESON, his little daughter less than six months old, is the youngest lineal descendant so far as known, of Thomas Jameson [1679] who came as reported, in 1746, to America in company with his brother, Hugh Jameson [1652] on board the "sloop Molly," and settled in Dunbarton, N. H.

This record might have completed also the volume of The Jamesons in America, but the author found a real significance in the words of an ancient writer who speaks somewhere of "endless genealogies." Indeed, there seems to be no end to these genealogies, for after reaching this point and ready to conclude the records, the arriving mails brought no small amount of valuable data seeking admission to the book which could not be refused, and hence another chapter is added. And it may be that "the woods are still full of them" for there seems to be no limit in numbers to The Jamesons in America.

SUPPLEMENT

THE JAMESONS IN AMERICA.

This supplementary chapter became necessary in order to embrace additional data received too late to be entered upon the preceding pages, and also to include the correction of incidental errors. The arrangement of numbers is continuous, but made double where the same persons have appeared before, so as to avoid confusion and make the reference easy.

NARRATIVE

By Samuel S. Jamison of Burnet, Texas.

1900.

THE RACE OF JAMISONS were of Celtic origin, and had their habitat in Scotland, when "Time was yet young," and before the invention of surnames among the Scots. The name seems to have had its origin with the son of one James or Jamie, who was designated among the Scottish chiefs as Jamie's son, and whose name, as his family increased, gradually grew into the surname Jamison, as also did the names Jack's son, William's son, Robert's son, Thomas's son, and many other similar surnames.

The Jamisons seem to have been a robust, active, muscular, and prolific race of people, who became separated from each other in the year 1616, when the Protestant king of England, James I, conceived the idea of repeopling the North of Ireland with a colony of his co-religionists from England, Scotland, and Ireland, which plan was carried into effect by Bacon and Sir Arthur Chichester in the year above named. The North of Ireland had become depopulated as a result of the rebellion of the Desmonds, who had been driven out, and their lands had been forfeited to the crown. King James dealt very liberally with his colony, giving each colonist from 1,000 to 2,000 acres of land, according to the improvements they were able to put on their homesteads. The branch of the family that joined the colony to the North of Ireland improved their condition financially by doing so, and held a peaceable possession of their lands about seventy-four years, until lames II abdicated the throne of England, and William III and Mary II had ascended the throne. Then James conceived the idea of reigning king of Ireland, raised an army of 40,000, "wild Irishmen," with some French allies furnished by Louis XIV of France, with a view of killing off, or driving out, the colonists planted there by James I, believing their religion differing from his own, would be a menace to his chances of establishing himself king of Ireland. The wholesale destruction of life and property that followed in the wake of his army caused 30,000 men, women, and children to fly to Londonderry or Derry, the place of oaks, as a city of refuge, and to take shelter behind its walls, where they were besieged and blockaded for one hundred and five days. They gave James's army a stubborn fight; killed 8,000 of the besiegers, lost 4,000 out of 7,000 effective men of the garrison. A great many more of the besieged perished of hunger and disease than were killed by the guns of the Irish besiegers. Nearly every cellar in the town was occupied by the putrefying remains of those who died so fast that they could not obtain sepulture. The dogs who fattened on the blood of the slain were greedily devoured by the famishing people. Even the rats that came to the holocaust furnished "meat for the eaters," and the rations of the soldiers was a halfpound of tallow and three-quarters of a pound of salted horse hide per day. Might it not have been here where Darwin obtained his theory of "the survival of the fittest ? "

It seems that some of the Jamisons, Ewings, Beattys, and others did survive, and, after they put themselves on the outside of a few square meals they straightened themselves up, shouldered their guns, spears, and powder-horns, and rallied to the standard of William III, and fought with the energy of desperation at the Battle of the Boyne June 30 and July 1, A. D. 1690; captured and routed what they did not kill of the army of James II, and sent the old king off on a high trot for tolls and pastures new in France.

The above historical reminiscences are given to emphasize, in some degree, the ancient traditions of the fathers which were poured into the ears of the writer sixty years ago by a sainted mother, long since passed over the river, and now resting under the "shade of the trees in Paradise." Peace to her ashes.

Our progenitor, James Jamison, was a handy man with tools. He forged warlike implements for the defense of the garrison. He was compelled to use peat, for no other fuel was available in those trying times. A specimen of his handiwork two hundred and five years old is still extant, in good state of preservation, although they have passed down the line of descent from father to son for seven generations. The old relic, anciently called pot trammels, and, latterly pot-hooks, upon which in old times the family pot was suspended while the gudewife made hash for the bairns. implement above described created the latest sensation by bobbing up in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Neb., in April of this year. The Omaha Daily Bee devoted a quarter of a column to a description of the pot-hooks and their traditional value as an heirloom in the Jameson family. They have gotten switched off into the hands of a grandson of an aunt of the writer. His name is James Shoemaker, who, I presume, will take good care of them during his natural life. The writer had forgotten all about the heirlooms, and was skeptical as to their identity. While reading up on them in the papers. I wrote to an older sister in Iowa to know if she had ever heard Her reply was that they were no myth, for she had eaten mush off of those pot-hooks seventy-five years ago, at her grandfather's, James Jameson's, in Kentucky.

A photograph of the pot trammels, alias pot hooks, made by James Jamison over a peat fire in Londonderry, Ireland, in the year 1690, during the siege of that place by the Irish, led by King James II.

They were brought to America in the year 1713 by John Jamison, who settled in Little Britain Township, Lancaster County, Pa.

After the death of John and his son, Samuel Jamison, they became the property of James Jamison, who took them with him to Virginia, and thence to Kentucky in 1798; thence to Perry County, Indiana, in 1820, where he died in 1821, and his unmarried daughter, Sallie, fell heir to the pot trammels, and carried them with her when she removed to Henderson County, Illinois, in 1840, where she lived to the age of eighty-five years. Before her death she gave the trammels to her grand-nephew, James Shoemaker, who removed to Southwest Nebraska, where this photograph was recently taken. The hooks are in a good state of preservation at the age of 210 years. They have been in America 187 years.

James Jamison, our Scotch-Irish progenitor, distinguished himself by personal bravery and military prowess while he was a young man, at the Battle of the Boyne, and in other engagements; attracted the attention of William III, who as a reward of merit conferred on him the honorary title of "St Knight," which entitled him to wear a coat-of-arms as a distinguishing feature.

Twenty-three years later, in the last year of the reign of "Good Queen Anne," who was the last reigning monarch of the house of Stuart in 1713, James Jamison, Sr., embarked with his family of seven children for America. He was held up by Blackbeard the pirate, in mid-ocean, and divested of his coat-of-arms, which, unfortunately, was ornamented with metallic substances resembling gold and silver, which attracted the cupidity of the freebooter, and, tradition says, that James Jamison grieved more over the loss of his outer garment than all his property, and, when he arrived at "the land of the free and the home of the brave," he was a "poorer, but a wiser man," about fifty years old, bearing the simple cognomen of James Jamison. Tradition does not tell how or when he lost the "ee" out of his name (the name is spelled Jamison in this paper), but the writer sometimes thinks that he got so badly "rattled," while the pirate had his hands in his pockets, that he never could remember how many letters there were in his name originally.

One of the traditions of the fathers that we had forgotten to mention earlier in this work is to the effect, that, prior to their emigration to the North of Ireland, the Jamisons carried the blood of the house of Argyle in their veins, but, in the course of the generations, it has become so thin it would scarcely stain a tracing-paper, and would add nothing to the dignity of future generations.

Samuel S. Jameson [2317], the writer of the above narrative, has kindly furnished a goodly amount of genealogical data of the descendants of James Jameson [2224], who settled, 1713, in Lancaster Co., Pa. This family spell the name Jamison, as do many who settled in Pennsylvania, and who, later, removed to the Southern states, so that it is often necessary to read an i into the place of a printed e in this volume. The reason for uniformity in the spelling is duly explained in the Introduction.

MR. JAMESON came to this country with his father when about twenty years of age. He was the first white man who settled within the limits of what became Little Britain Township. Pa. The name of his first wife is unknown. There were twelve children, one of the first and eleven of the second marriage. The order of their births is not known. Mr. Jameson left about 1,200 acres of land to his twelve children. It is a matter of history that, "When it was in contemplation to divide the township of Drumore, from which this was taken, i.e., Little Britain, and while one proposed one name and another offered another, with a prospect of considerable difficulty in settling the question, John Jamison, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens, said to the company: "We most of us came from Great Britain as our native place. I propose the name of Little Britain, in memory of our mother country." The idea was favorably received, and the township then being organized was named accordingly."

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, it is said, was frozen to death. He and his sister drove a long distance into Maryland to a grist-mill, and on the return, when within two miles of home, he succumbed to the intense cold. This story is somewhat startling, when it is considered that his death occurred on the third day of May. He was forty-four years of age. His will was probated May 31, 1751. He bequeathed one pair gold sleeve-buttons to his brother-in-law Robert King, £100 to his niece, Susanna King, daughter of Robert King, and made his wife, Susanna, executrix and residuary SUSANNA JAMESON, widow, gave a mortgage dated July 9, 1763, to Samuel Jameson, on 142 acres of land in Little Britain, Pa., to secure £30. This tract of land was the property of John Jameson by proprietor's patent, dated May 31, 1746, and devised by him to his wife, Susanna Jameson. Mrs. Jameson previously, June 14, 1760, had leased to Samuel Jameson a farm in Little Britain, Pa. Samuel Jameson was doubtless her late husband's half brother Samuel [2239]. She made her will dated Jan. 14, 1769, which was probated March 4, 1769. She bequeaths her property largely to her King relatives.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was a soldier in the Creek War of 1812, and was in the battle of Horseshoe Bend, March 29, 1814. In this campaign he endured many privations and sufferings. He settled, 1816, in Murfreesborough, Tenn., where he resided many years. Later he removed to Williamson Co., Tenn., and lived on a farm until his death. His biographer writes of him as follows: "It truthfully may be said of him by his numerous friends—enemies he had none—that he was a good husband, an affectionate father, and a kind master; besides, he was a kind neighbor, a pleasant relative, and a good citizen. And may we not say further that he who sustained these relations in life inviolate as long as did Henry D. Jameson, well deserves our praise, and that the record thereof is due in the strictest sense to his memory. In this way he could not fail to acquire that precision and integrity of character for which he was so remarkable. Nor could his social qualities, amiable disposition, and kind regard for all fail to secure many friends, hence the great respect and kind synathies which were entertained for him by his numerous relatives and acquaintances. The great interest he manifested for many years in religious affairs induces his friends to hope that he died a subject of the Redeemer's kingdom. He has left an affectionate wife, of great devotion in health and in sickness, sixteen sorrowing children, and many relatives and friends to lament his long expected but unwelcome death."

Our Father's gentle hand
Hath come with tenderness and love,
To break the household band.
Then bow, submissive to his will,
Though earth's sweet ties are riven,
Live in the blessed, holy hope,
You will meet your lest in Heaven."

WILLIAM BEATTY, Mrs. Elizabeth Jameson's father, was a captain in the Revolutionary army. Captain Beatty fell while leading a charge against the British, April 25, 1781, at the battle of Hobbirk's Hill.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON received a good English education. He had some knowledge of Latin, and, later, learned to speak the Spanish language with fluency. He followed farming in Illinois until his health failed, and then removed three hundred miles to the westward, and settled in Mills Co., Ia., where he engaged in mercantile business. For a time he had a general agency for machinery, and for two years was assessor of taxes for the county. Again his health broke down, and the crisis of 1857 involved him in serious losses financially. In 1860 he removed with his family to San Antonio, Tex. During the next four years it was a hard struggle "to make the buckle and tongue meet." The first year he taught school; the next year he was head clerk in a hardware and grain store; the third year, when disabilities would no longer exempt him from military duty, he entered the Confederate mail service, mounted a red Concord stage-coach, and pulled the lines over the backs of four big Confederate mules, through deep sands and across the Rio Grande river to Camargo, four miles into Mexico. When old Griasors drew up to his stage-coach with a view to robbery, his ability to speak the Spanish language served him well, for, when they found he could speak Spanish they hesitated, and he then let loose his Spanish tongue, and talked them quite out of their evil designs, then, lighting their cigarettes, saying very genteely, "Adios, señor," they put spurs to their horses, and were away. But for his ability to speak Spanish, there would have been a highway robbery committed, doubtless at the cost of his life

Mr. Jameson, since the close of the war, has been a farmer, a raiser of stock, and turned his hand to almost anything that would give him an honest living. He is a modest but very intelligent and interesting man; literary in his tastes, a wide reader with broad and generous views.

Mr. Jameson, at the age of seventy-three years, 1900, is an enthusiastic genealogist. For several years he has given much time, money, and patient research to tracing his own branch of the Jameson family back to its early beginnings, covering a period of two hundred and eighty-four years. As the result of his investigations we are indebted for the very interesting narrative given by him in the opening pages of this supplementary chapter, and also for a large amount of genealogical data which he has kindly contributed to enrich its contents.

ESTRELLA C. JAMESON, the youngest daughter, was born on a ranch four miles south of San Antonio de Bearr, about one mile west and across the San Antonio river from the Old Mission, San Jose.

WILLIAM OCTAVIUS JAMESON, the youngest child, was born in the city of San Antonio, Texas.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was reared on a farm in Pennsylvania, on which his two sisters lived in 1897. When twenty-one years of age he went to Ohio, and remained until the fall of 1851, when he removed to Buchanan Co., Iowa, and, later, settled on a tract of three hundred and twenty acres obtained from the government, which became, in 1854, his permanent residence. In Sept., 1857, he was admitted to the bar of Butler Co., and for twenty years devoted himself to the practice of law, at the same time carrying on his farm, which he greatly enlarged, and for the last twenty years of his life he gave himself wholly to farming and stockraising. He did much to improve and beautify his lands, until his farm became one of the best in the region. Mr. Jameson's death was noticed in a local paper by a very appreciative obituary.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH resided in Belmont, Iowa. They had no children.

MR. WHIPMAN is a relative of the late Dr. Marcus Whitman, who was sent as a missionary physician in 1836 to Oregon, and in the winter of 1842-43 made a per-llous journey across the country to Washington, D. C., to report to the United States government the great value of that territory, then in dispute, and he urged the government to assert its claims. He was, in fact, instrumental in securing that whole region for the United States of which are now constituted the states of Oregon, Idaho, and Washington.

MRS. WHITMAN, having pursued collegiate courses of study in Manhattan, Kan., and Abingdon, Ill., was engaged for some years as a teacher in Kansas, lowa, and Nebraska. In 1839 she went to Idaho and held the appointment of deputy clerk of both the United States Court and the Supreme Court of that state. She was elected in 1850 the president of the Idaho Equal Suffrage Association, and conducted the campaign for equal suffrage successfully. She is a person of marked ability and ha, received distinguished recognition in the state. She is *the first woman to receive the honor of appointment as Regent of the State University, located at Moscows Idaho.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON, in 1877, accompanied his parents to McLennan Co., Texas. He was an invalid during his boyhood, and was thus deprived of the benefits of a public education. At length, laying aside his crutches, he left the farm, became a clerk in a merchantile establishment, and later was appointed deputy county clerk at Waco, Texas. He received this appointment on his nineteenth birthday, but the disabilities of his minority were removed by the district court to enable him to accept the office. He resigned this position to assist in making an abstract of land titles in McLennan Co., Texas. His health failing, he went on the road for the Galveston-Dallas News, and, later, was manager of their branch office at Waco, Texas. Being advised by his physician to reside in South Texas, he accepted the position of bookkeeper and steward of the Southwestern Asylum for the Insane, San Antonio, Texas. He served in this position during the successive administrations of Superintendents Barker, Worsham, and MacGregor, and resigned to become secretary of the Sayers Central Campaign committee, with headquarters at Austin, Texas. At the state convention held in Galveston he was elected by a unanimous vote secretary of the State Democratic committee. In January, 1899, Mr. Jameson was appointed state revenue agent, by Gov. Joseph D. Sayers, and was elected secretary of the tax commission which was created by the Texas legislature March, 1899, consisting of: Hon. Joseph D. Sayers, governor; R. W. Finley, comptroller of public accounts; O. B. Colquitt, ex-state revenue agent; and Joe Lee Jameson, state revenue agent. He is prominent in Masonic circles; a Knight of the Ancient Essenic Order; an enthusiastic member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, having held several offices in that organization. He is chairman of the legislative committee of the Texas division of the Travelers' Protective Association of America. Mr. Jameson is now, 1900, revenue agent for the state, having his office in the building of the executive department, Austin, Texas.

David Jameson, parentage unknown, was born in 1660 in Scotland. He came to America about 1685 and settled in the province of New York. He married May 7, 1692. Maria Hardenbrook. They resided in New York, where Mr. Jameson died July 25, 1739.

Memoranda.

MR. JANESON was a liberally educated Scotchman. It is said he was from Lithgo, and banished from Scotland on account of his connection with that strange semi-religious, semi-political sect called · 'The Sweet Singers,' who opposed the government of Charles the Second. Mr. Clarke, the minister of the fort in New York, advanced Mr. Jameson's passage money to America, which he repaid by teaching a Latin school after his arrival. Later he became a clerk in Secretary Matthew Clark son's office, and while there devoted himself to the study of law. Mr. Jameson was for five years, 1693–1698, clerk of the Council of the Province of New York. In 1690 he was a vestryman of Trinity church. Gov. Hunter appointed him in 1711 Chief Justice of New Jersey, and he served in that office twelve years, until 1723, when he retired from the position, and was succeeded by William Treat Jameson. He became Attorney-General of New York, where he resided the rest of his life, which terminated July 25, 1730, at the age of 79 years.

Mr. Jameson was clerk of the court which condemned Jacob Leisler, the provisional governor of the Province, who was succeeded by Henry Sloughter in 1691, and soon afterward executed on a charge of treason. His connection with this affair made for Mr. Jameson enemies, who said many scurrilous things about him, some of which found their way into print. Mr. Jameson's "Family Bible" is probably still in existence. It was not long since in the possession of Mrs. Johnston, wife of Francis Upton Johnston, M. D., of New York City. "This Bible is a folio of the largest size, in fine bold type, printed at the University Press, Oxford, A. D. 1701. It is elegantly bound in black calf, with the covers and back richly gitl and tooled."

David Jameson, gentleman, was made freeman Sept. 17, 1697.

To David Jameson and others was made an exemplification of a patent called the Great Nine Partner's Patent, dated May 7, 1697, for a tract of land on the east side of Hudson river, in Dutchess Co., N. Y.

DAVID JAMESON married Jan. 16, 1703, Joanna Meek.

David Jameson and others petition, Sept. 18, 1730, as proprietors of a tract of land in Dutchess Co., N. Y., for a warrant to survey and lay out the south bound of the same tract of land which extends 16 miles up Waffinger's Creek.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON was one of nine children, eight brothers and one sister. He came to America in 1799, and settled in Dutchess Co., N. Y. Later he removed to Dryden. N. V., at that time a wilderness, and secured land by a squatter's right and title.

CHARLES JAMESON, his brother, the only other of his father's family to come to this country, settled near him, and here they both spent their lives,

Those of the family who remained in Scotland were as follows:

JOSEPH JAMESON, an oil refiner, who lived in Glasgow, having a country seat in Bothwell, Scotland.

IOHN JAMESON, who was for many years a Presbyterian minister in Scene, Scotland. WILLIAM JAMESON, who was a dyer, and lived in East Lothian, but spent his last days and died in London, England.

THOMAS JAMESON, who inherited the homestead at Wauk Mill, Huddington Co., Scotland. GILBERT JAMESON, who was employed by the East India Tea Co. and lived in London, England.

CHRISTOPHER JAMESON, who resided in East Baines, Scotland. The sister's name is not given.

The family appear to have been characterized by integrity, strong religious faith, and a spirit of adventure. The relatives in Scotland have not been heard from by the lameson descendants on this side of the water since 1845. "Letters ceased at that date," writes Mrs. John Jameson of Milford, N. J.

Memoranda.

MR. JAMESON worked on the farm at home until nineteen years of age, when he felt that the world was larger than the small spot he had seen, so one fine morning he took his belongings and left the paternal roof to seek his fortune. He came, 1852, into Pennsylvania, took up whatever presented itself to earn an honest penny, for his habits have always been of the best. The year 1861 found him in Liverpool, Pa., where he raised a company of one hundred volunteers, equipped them with caps and coats at his expense, was elected first lieutenant, while still in camp, was promoted and made captain in the 7th Regt., Penn. Reserves. He served his country for two years, was in all the battles of the Peninsula, second Bull Run, and South Mountain. He had command of the regiment at Antietam, where he was wounded. After leaving the hospital, he was requested by the governor to resign, in order to take command of a regiment of darfed men, who refused to serve under old officers; they wanted to elect their own men, which left him free. His health being considerably impaired, he decided to remain out of the army. Since 1868 he has been a projector and builder of railroads; he was the promoter and pioneer of the "Collins expedition" in 1878 to South America, which was a widely known enterprise but which resulted in a disastrous loss of life, as well as an immense amount of capital. One steamer was wrecked at the breakwater, and nearly all on board were lost, with thouterial. The object was to build one hundred and fifty miles of railway along the Maderia, eight hundred miles from where it empties into the Amazon, which is one thousand miles from mouth. It was a country where few white men had ever been. After having graded ten miles under climatic as well as other great disadvantages, it was found there was a technical point which prevented his obtaining the funds to prosecute the work further. This involved a loss of nearly one million dollars, and the prospect of a fortune to the contractors. But Mr. Jameson manifested his courage and strong will, and said: "Well, I will neither cry nor give up, but I will try it again, and if I cannot ride I will walk." That has been his motto all through life, always looking on the bright side, until his friends have given him the name of "Hopeful John," which is no misnomer.

Captain Jameson is six feet in height, of commanding person, in vigorous health, and attends to business every day regardless of the weather. He is a generous and kind-hearted man, truly "one of Nature's noblemen;" a Democrat of the old school, believing in "the greatest good to the greatest number."

Captain Jameson is still a railroad contractor and builder, and is the active president of three lines of railroad. Jameson City, Columbia Co., Pa., was named for him at the suggestion of Mrs. Jameson, it being the terminus of a railroad which he had built. This family spell the name Jameson.
